More than 160 workers failed to show up this morning at Hydro's Lakeview generating station in Toronto's west end. The station controls nearly 25 per cent of the province's power.

A total of 320 workers are employed at the plant and Hydro said the strike is "not in keeping with the union's public declarations that it would do everything possible to maintain electrical service."

The Lakeview strike is one of a series of rotating strikes by 9,740 members of Local 1000, Canadian Union of Public Employees. The union workers, all employed by Hydro, are using the rotating strike in an attempt to force a contract settlement without compulsory government arbitration.

Hydro's statement today said "in a determined effort to avoid interruptions to power consumers, Ontario Hydro has decided to man four, and possibly five, of the complex Lakeview generating station's eight units with management or supervisory staff."

But it warned that "some special industrial customers, who receive blocks of electricity at reduced rates, may experience some interruptions during the day."

Lakeview supplies 2,400,000 kilowatts and Hydro said the strike would reduce output to only 900,000 kilowatts. But supervisory workers will supply an extra 300,000 or 600,000 kilowatts.

The company statement, one of the hardest-hitting since the rotating strikes began Feb. 3, warned that staffing union jobs with supervisory workers "could easily create unworkable conditions for management staff as well as jeopardize millions of dollars of station equipment."

The workers are seeking a two-year contract with a 16-per-cent wage increase and commission guarantee of equal wages in Hydro's seven regional areas.

Wages under the last contract which expired in April last year ranged from $73 to $209 a week.

Retaliatory Attacks Shake Jordan Border

TEL AVIV (Reuters) — A series of retaliatory attacks shook the Israel-Jordan border late Monday night for the second time in 24 hours.

Military sources said the clashes began when mortar bombs landed in the Israeli village of Neot Hakikar from guerrilla positions just south of the Dead Sea.

Israeli jets attacked the Arab positions but there were no reports of any casualties or damage.

Farther north, Arab guerrillas launched a rocket and mortar attack on Israeli posts from the east bank of the River Jordan near the Damyia Bridge, a military spokesman said.

Israeli forces pounded the Arab positions and there were no Israeli casualties in the 45-minute duel, the spokesman added.

It was the second straight night that Arab guerrillas struck in the Dead Sea region. Israeli artillery engaged in a three-hour exchange with guerrilla positions near Sodom, on the southern shore of the Dead Sea, Sunday night.

In Nablus on the Israeli-occupied west bank of the Jordan Monday, police broke up a demonstration by 500 Arab youths. Six persons were arrested.

And 17 Arab students were detained during another demonstration Monday in the Old City of Jeruselam—the Jordanian sector before the 1967 Middle East war.

Death Ends Drama at Dallas

Police Guns Free Girl Held Captive 10 Hours in Cafeteria

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A blonde schoolgirl cheerleader, held under threat of death for 10½ hours, darted to safety Monday night as police gunfire killed her pistol-waving captor.

Janie Lewis, 17, escaped harm in a cafeteria where a long-haired parolee had confined her in a booth, rejecting repeated pleas to free her.

Officers identified the slain man as Freddie Robert Mullins, 21, of Dallas. They said he had served a term for armed robbery in Minnesota.

As many as 500 persons assembled at times to watch what was taking place at the Big Town shopping centre in suburban Mesquite.

Police Chief L. H. Limmer, 33, said he motioned with his eyes for Miss Lewis to run behind a retaining wall in the cafeteria when Mullins finally diverted his attention from her to unscrew a light bulb in a low-hanging chandelier.

Three bullets pierced Mullins' chest and he died as he fell.

Limmer estimated a dozen shots were fired, including three from his own pistol as the police chief ducked behind a table only 10 feet from Mullins.

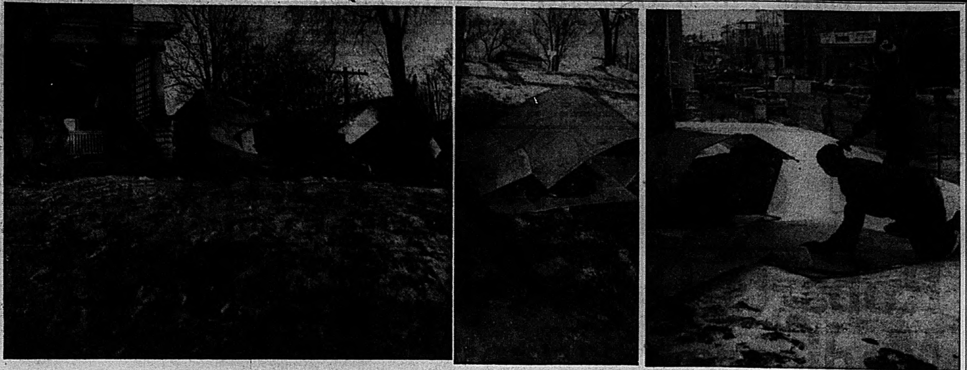
Other officers reported Mullins got off a single shot from his .22-calibre weapon.

Police Sgt. L. C. Tidwell said it was about 11 a.m. when he stopped Mullins and a companion, Richard Launderville, to check their driver's licences.

As the licences were handed back, Tidwell related, Mullins pulled a gun and both youths jumped from their car and ran. Two warning shots from Tidwell halted Launderville but Mullins dashed into the cafeteria nearby.

Janie's mother, Mrs. C. S. Lewis, told officers that the tall youth in a black leather jacket grabbed her daughter as they stood in line awaiting food service.

The long vigil followed. Limmer and others talked to Mullins time and again trying to persuade him to release his hostage. Officers said he never gave a motive for holding her or voiced any conditions for freeing her.



Home-made Toboggans Zoom Down the Courthouse Hill

Three Belleville boys used some ingenuity and came up with an ideal way to have a thrilling ride. Donald Theriault, Bruce Graham and Kevin Hart collected some giant size cardboard boxes and found an ice-coated hill at the courthouse. They didn't have a towline to get to the top but once they climbed up - - - the thrill of the ride down seemed worth the effort.

Rotating Strike

'Black-outs Are Unlikely' Says Hydro Official

A province - wide rotating strike by members of the Ontario Hydro Employees Union could cause power blackouts throughout the province today, but this is unlikely.

Norman Manning, public relations officer for the Eastern Region Ontario Hydro office here in Belleville, described rumors of black-outs about noon as a "total misconception".

He admitted, however, that the strike and a storm in the United States, in particular New York, would complicate matters.

Mr. Manning said that the OHEU had withdrawn staff from the Lakeview generating station in Toronto. This station supplies 20 per cent of Ontario's power requirements.

Management personnel will take over the running of this station, running four or possibly five of the seven generators, he said.

"In addition to that some union people are out of two plants, one in Toronto and another in Windsor."

With the cutdown in power due to the walkout, Ontario Hydro procedure would be an attempt to buy power from the United States. At present this operation is under way.

However, a snowstorm that has hit New York and other parts of Northern United States will complicate the procedure.

Barring any unforeseen breakdowns of equipment and barring any mistakes made by inexperienced employees, we should pass until tomorrow morning without any real crisis," Mr. Manning said.

If the snowstorm situation in the United States hinders the obtaining of power, Ontario Hydro still has more tricks up its sleeve.

The first step, according to Mr. Manning, would be to drop the power, for 15 or 30 minutes, of secondary customers to whom the loss of power is not critical.

He said the next step would be to reduce voltage by two and one half percent to make sure the working generators were not overloaded.

If necessary, the third step would be to drop voltage by the same amount again, thus causing a total deficiency of five per cent.

If expensive Ontario Hydro equipment was still in danger, Ontario would be subjected to 15-minute power stoppages.

Ameliasburg Not Committed: Reeve

PICTON (Staff) — Ameliasburg township has made no commitment to join Belleville and Hastings county says township Reeve George Cunningham.

At yesterday's meeting of Prince Edward county council, deputy reeve Donald Thompson of Picton asked Reeve Cunningham if a statement in the Picton Gazette by Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott was correct.

The Gazette reported Mayor Scott at city council last week as saying Ameliasburg had asked to be included in any regional government discussions.

Mr. Cunningham said his township had asked to be invited to any discussions by Belleville and Hastings on regional government.

"We are on the boundary — sort of in the middle so to speak and have to look both ways," he said.

"We were shocked to learn the Belleville Fire Department was going to ask $32,000 from us for fire protection and we cannot stand the extra two mills this would mean to the township mill rate.

The reeve said that even with the expenditure of $32,000, Ameliasburg would not be represented on the Belleville Fire Commission, nor would it have any equity in the equipment which it helped to buy.

Residents to Get Chance To Protest Apartment Unit

TRENTON — Trentonians will know in the near future if a 50-unit, $500,000 apartment building is to be built here, barring objections from nearby residents.

Council last night passed a bylaw by which they will advertise for 21 days their intention to meet with the Ontario Municipal Board to rezone land owned by J. Scalleta Real Estate.

The land is at the top of Dundas St. West in the immediate area of Westmount subdivision and would have to be rezoned to allow the building to be constructed.

During the three week advertising period anyone opposed to the rezoning will have an opportunity to object.

The proposal for the apartment building was made on Jan. 13 and two weeks later council was faced with a delegation opposing the project.

A local barrister, W. G. Weston, spoke on behalf of 23 homeowners in the immediate area of the proposed site who believed the apartment would lower property values in the area.

"The parking lot and traffic which will result will have a detrimental effect on property values," stated Mr. Weston.

He asked council to take a second look at its move to advertise a meeting with the OMB, adding that maybe council was too hasty in its decision.

But council held its stand when councillor E. M. Parker said there was a need for this type of housing in Trenton and as a result the advertisement would go through.

At last night's council meeting Clerk-comptroller A. Larry said:

"A letter will be written to those within 400 feet of the area and this will inform them of the bylaw and proposed rezoning."

It is then that complaints may be filed, to be followed by the hearing with the OMB where both the town and any objectors will present their case.

Rent for the proposed units is $140 a month for the two bedroom units and $150 a month for the three bedrooms.

Trenton Guards Get Raise

Trenton school guards will be getting three more dollars per week.

Council last night approved a request by Thomas Taylor, representing the town's schoolguards, to boost their weekly pay from $20 to $23 a week.

The request found backing from councillor Stanley Ketcheson who believed the guards deserved the hike for the "fine job they are doing".

"Our schoolguards are doing a great job and their request isn't a large one - we should grant it immediately" said the former chairman of the Trenton Board of Education.

The destiny of the old post office will be up for discussion in two weeks.

Councillor Stanley Ketcheson chairman of the general government committee, last night informed council that his committee had studied the problem of what to do with the old structure and proposals will be put forth next week.

"We have been studying the problem and will be ready with two or three proposals by next council meeting," stated councillor Ketcheson.

In the December municipal elections Trentonians voted to maintain the building for municipal purposes. However council, at councillor Paul Tripp's request, decided to have one last look at the subject in closed session.

Labor Says Mayor Scott Lost Job Due to Politics

Mayor Russell Scott was fired as plant physician to Mead Johnson Canada Ltd. — one of Belleville's major industries — because he is actively engaged in politics, the Belleville and District Labor Council was told last night.

LC president Ray Bradshaw told the council the mayor was dismissed from a post he'd held for about 20 years.

He said it would be interesting to see if people in other municipalities are "kicked off 'the job" because they're interested in politics."

"If you want a job — especially in Mead Johnson — stay out of politics," he added.

Later, the BDIC president was queried on his source of information on the Mead Johnson issue.

He said it was contained in a letter sent to Mayor Scott "before the end of the year."

Mr. Bradshaw said he had not seen the letter, but had been told about it by the mayor last week.

However, he quoted one paragraph of the dismissal notice as saying: "An active politician can hardly avoid becoming the subject of some controversy."

IN MEMORIAM

DUNN — In loving memory of a dear mother Ida Dunn who passed away February 11th, 1964.

Through all our troubles,
She helped us along.
If we live like her we will never do wrong.
On earth, she was loved,
In heaven she rests,
God bless you, mother.
You were one of the best.

—Always remembered by daughter Alida, son-in-law Floyd and grandchildren.

THOMPSON — In loving memory of my dear brother, John Thompson, who passed away February 11, 1967.

We do not need a special day,
To bring you to our minds.
For the days we do not think of you,
Are very hard to find.

—Sadly missed by Leonard and Eva.

THOMPSON — In loving memory of a dear husband and father John Thompson who passed away Feb. 11, 1967.

They say time heals all sorrow,
And helps us to forget,
But time so far has only proved,
How much we miss him yet,
Each time we see his picture,
He seems to smile and say,
Don't cry I'm only sleeping,
We'll meet again some day.
He never said goodbye to us,
But perhaps it's just as well,
We never could have said goodbye,
To him we loved so well.

—Ever remembered by wife Phelena, sons Elmer, Don, Lyle and Mervin and daughter Shirley and daughters-in-law, Sally, Muriel, Dorothy, Betty and 12 grandchildren.

CATON — In loving memory of my dear mother, Viola Caton, who passed away February 11, 1967.

If I had all the world to give,
I'd give it, yes, and more,
To hear her voice, see her smile,
And greet her at the door,
But all I can do, dear mother,
Is go and tend your grave,
And leave behind tokens of love,
To the best mother God ever made,
I like to think when life is done,
Wherever heaven may be,
She'll be standing at the door,
Up there to welcome me.

—Never forgotten by her daughter Alice and grandchildren Patti and Gary.

CARDS OF THANKS

I would like to take this opportunity to thank my many friends, relatives and neighbors and nurses of the Belleville General Hospital for their kindness shown myself and my family while I was a patient there. A special thanks to Mr. and Mrs. York and staff and residents of Hastings Manor. Also a special thanks to Dr. Douglas, Dr. Peter Scott, Dr. Hartt, Dr. Manderville and Dr. Totten.

City Consultant Calls Shopping Centre Proposal 'Premature'

A consultant now directing Belleville's urban renewal study scheme yesterday called the city's approval of a $3,000,000 northend shopping centre "premature."

He also said he had no obligation to warn city council before the controversial plaza issue developed into the current Ontario Municipal Board inquiry now deciding the fate of the project.

Allan Brass, association partner of Toronto consultans Proctor, Redfern, Bousfield and Bacon — the firm commissioned by Belleville to blueprint an urban renewal scheme for its central area — made the statements as first witness called by commercial rivals of the plaza venture at the city hall. The firm will receive $81,000 for preparing the survey.

He told Robert Macaulay, lawyer for Oshawa Wholesale and the eastend shopping plaza merchants, that city council's decision to rezone a North Front Street site for the new shopping centre should have awaited completion of his urban renewal study — expected in August.

"It's my opinion it would be premature to proceed with the development like it is until the results of my inquiries are available," he warned.

His statements drew abrasive reaction from counsel sponsoring the development before the hearing.

R. J. Robinson, lawyer for plaza developer Cambridge Leaseholds, rapped the consultant for causing "great inconvenience" by not advising council before the current controversy was generated.

And city solicitor E. Guss Porter demanded if all new development in the city should await the outcome of the urban renewal study.

With Mr. Brass, subpoenaed by Oshawa Wholesale, Mr. Macaulay took the initiative after a four-day wait as the hearing entered its second week

The consultant's testimony opened the case for opposition to the shopping centre project.

Contrasted with other expert witnesses, Mr. Brass' stay on the stand was fairly brief — about 40 minutes. But his testimony noticeably quickened the tempo of the hearing.

Mr. Macaulay queried the witness at some length on details of the study commissioned by Belleville's local government.

Mr. Brass said his study group maintains close liason with the city and any decision to proceed with the plaza development would be taken into account in the renewal scheme involving downtown Belleville and the Foster Ward zone.

Mr. Macaulay inquired if approval of the shopping centre would "make any more difficult" study recommendations or financing of the downtown renewal project.

"It's possible it's possible," declared Mr. Brass.

He revealed that questionnaires to local businessmen and residents would be an integral part of the study's findings and a 33-percent response would give reliable statistics. To date, response to the local canvass has been about 35 per cent.

Cross-examined by Mr. Porter the consultant assured that any recommendation in the report would be "tailored to the city's financial capabilities."

Implementation of a downtown renewal scheme would largely depend on private investment suggested Mr. Porter.

"That's true" agreed Mr. Brass, "and our experience has shown that where the municipality takes the initiative there's no difficulty in attracting participation by private enterprise."

"It will involve substantial expenditure, but we will show that any expenditure will be warranted in view of the benefits to derived therefrom."

"Would you agree it (downtown renewal) would involve very substantial expenditures?" pressed the city solicitor.

"Likely — yes," agreed the consultant.

Inquired Mr. Porter: "Would you say that all development in the city of Belleville, which might conceivably affect your urban renewal scheme should be stopped cold until your scheme comes to an end?"

"Not uncategorically, no," answered Mr. Brass. "I wouldn't make that statement."

"No," rejoined the city solicitor caustically. "I didn't think you would."

Official crux of the controversy is the city bylaw passed in July last year permitting the northend rezoning — and the date was noted by Mr. Robinson as he followed Mr. Porter in cross examination of the witness.

Mr. Robinson wanted to know if the consultant had sought out city council or the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board when the bylaw was up for debate.

Mr. Brass replied his firm was not informed of the ordinance. and "our opinions were not sought."

"Did you make any representations or complaints about it," queried Mr. Robinson.

"No," said the witness. He added his firm acts as advisors to a municipality and do not "take the initiative" in issues.

"There is no obligation . . . to come forward unless you're requested to do so or subpoenaed to do so?" asked the lawyer.

"Yes," agreed the witness.

Mr. Robinson told the witness "it comes as a great inconvenience to have you sit in the background" while the situation developed.

Counsel asked if development of a shopping plaza outside the city limits — say on the northside of the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway — and not requiring an OMB hearing would have caused amendments in the urban renewal study.

Mr. Brass agreed.

"And you would make them?" queried Mr. Robinson.

"Yes," confirmed the witness.

Mr. Robinson also wanted to know what weight was given to council and planning board's decision to approve the plaza-site rezoning.

Mr. Brass said "only from a philosophical point of view."

"There seems to be a paranoia," he said, adding that importance also had been attached to urban renewal by local government authorities.

But, he re-emphasized, the decision to proceed with the North Front Street shopping centre without knowing the result of the urban renewal investigations was not "compatible."

"Yet," retorted Mr. Robinson ,"that decision was made — and you remained silent on it."

Hearing Has Its Lighter Moments

For all its seriousness, the Ontario Municipal Board hearing on the northend Belleville plaza issue has its leavening of light moments.

Like yesterday, when Robert Macaulay, counsel for Oshawa Wholesale and the eastend shopping plaza merchants, was querying engineering consultant Robert W. Smith on North Front Street traffic flow.

The lawyer wanted to know about traffic-light phases. The traffic expert insisted on detailed explanations, using a slide rule, even a blackboard to explain the problem.

Finally, Mr. Macaulay attempted to simplify the problem by analogy:

If God, he said were looking down on traffic lights at the proposed shopping centre at a certain phase, what color would He see — red, amber, or green?

Mr. Smith thought a moment, then replied:

"He'd see red!"

"That," riposted Mr. Macaulay as laughter rippled through the city council chambers, "is the condition I've reached."

Mr. Smith, president of Damas and Smith consultants, was the last witness called before the hearing by proponents of the plaza project.

He explained that traffic control at the project would call for signal lights with three phases — north, south and east out of a road servicing the plaza.

Peak period for traffic flow would be the 4.30 - 5.30 p.m. Friday rush-hour.

Town-planner Called

At one point as the planner was being cross-examined by R. J. Robinson Cambridge Leaseholds lawyer, Mr. Macaulay charged Mr. Stokmans with being "quite patently, a hostile witness."

Mr. Stokmans, as a muncipal civil servant was "in the employ of the applicant," said Mr. Macaulay.

OMB panel chairman W. H. Thompson confirmed the planner was a municipal employee.

But, he added, "I don't think the demeanor of the witness has indicated to me he is a hostile witness."

Cause of the argumentative interlude was Mr. Stokman's statement that a 1967 planning department study on downtown floor space contained a number of errors.

Reason for this, said Mr. Stockmans, was that the survey was undertaken by a team of students temporarily hired to reinforce planning board staff.

The students measured the commercial buildings from the outside. The result was their statistics revealed gross floor area, not the total leasable areas.

The statistics went into an urban renewal study because there wasn't time to correct them, said Mr. Stokmans.

Planning department staff were faced with a "great deal of work" in compiling the statistics.

Correction would have lost the study another six or seven months "which we couldn't afford at the time," said the assistant planner.

"In other words it was better to put out an erroneous report," commented Mr. Macaulay.

Mr. Stokmans said the issue was "not too critical."

Six downtown merchants were called by Mr. Macaulay to testify about variations in the floor space of their premises compared with statistics earlier presented by a Cambridge Leaseholds consultant.

Council Seeks Investigation

The Belleville and District Labor Council is seeking an investigation by the Ontario government before official approval is given to any rates increase by Physicians' Service Inc.

The council last night noted a recent warning by PSI that the service would need a 46 per cent rates increase by April 1.

The council decided to write Dr. R. T. Potter, MPP Quinte, requesting action in the issue.

A letter also will go to the provincial government "demanding a full investigation before granting any rate increase. . ."

Weatherman Co-operates

Deseronto Carnival Huge Success

DESERONTO — All the Deseronto Recreation committee wanted Saturday night to make their winter carnival a complete success was the co-operation of the weatherman, and they got it — a perfect night for an open rink. There was frost enough to keep the ice in good condition, but not enough to scare parents into remaining by their firesides.

And "The kids had a ball", is the general comment. A large rink and two smaller ones were in operation all the time, each with a different type of activity. One small rink was devoted to racing, with Bill Markle, Wayne Brant, committee chairman, Harold Whalen, and Denis Layfield as corner posts. Kim Bongard was the winner for girls under eight, and Sandra Jackson for girls eight to 14. Michael Claus won for junior boys, and Douglas Green for senior boys.

The personnel of the Lands and Forests Department in Napanee, and members of the Fish and Game club in Deseronto battled it out on the other small rink for a 3 - 3 tie in the broomball game — an exciting game with lots of thrills, with Danny Brant, Gordie Kimmett and Brian Jackson as referees.

The largest rink was for free skating, with about 20 of the players in costume. Oldest person on the ice in costume was Bill Markle of Napanee, who, at 75, could hold his own with any of the younger set. He donated his prize money to the committee. Patty Sparks, five, was the youngest, and surprisingly good on skates. Mr. Markle was in full Indian costume, and Patty was dressed like a minute devil. Fay Woodcock and Rose Roebuck, appearing as Siamese twins, carried off the prize for the best couple. Peter Morris, Jr., was a Hawaiian girl, complete with grass skirt and won the boy's prize. Maureen Cassidy, was judged to be the best costumed girl, wearing an old-fashioned costume, long skirt and bonnet and even a muff.

Judges were Mayor James W. Sharpe, Councillor Jack Layfield, Earl Murphy, Denis Vick, and Harold Whalen.

Those helping at the refreshment booth were kept more than busy, selling hot dogs, coffee, and hot chocolate. Mrs. Jean Griffiths and Mrs. Kay Hood were in charge, with Norma Layfield and Frances Brant assisting, and Jack Layfield ending a hand when he could.

Frank Tinney of Deseronto held the winning ticket for the transistor radio, with the draw made by Pat Hogan of the Lands and Forests Department.

New Lighting Proposed

TRENTON — Council last night heard mayor James MacDonald outline a proposed expenditure of some $35,000 for street lighting for the new budget.

But this figure could be cut down to $29,000 keeping it in line with council's usual limit for lighting costs.

Mayor MacDonald emphasized that these proposals were being put forth for discussion and were open to amendments and changes.

"I am putting these forth as my views," said the mayor, "and as a result am open for suggestions on additions or changes."

The proposed expenditure breaks down to lighting sections of six streets as follows:

Marmora Street, $2,000; Sidney Street, $10,400; Byron St. $6,900; Duffering Street, $5,700; King St. $5,700 and Coulter Cr. $4,000.

"The lighting for Dufferin Street can be dropped," said the mayor, "and this will keep us below $30,000 which is our usual limit."

Council will be studying the need for lighting on various streets in the town and will report to the mayor. A final discussion to take in all proposals will result in a new street lighting plan for 1969.

Trenton Police Get Raise

TRENTON — "Belleville and Trenton are close and have a great effect on each other in many areas and this can be seen in the pay raise that police here are getting."

Mayor MacDonald today labelled Belleville's proximity to Trenton as part of the reason for a two stage $800 increase for policemen here.

"The two towns are very close to one another and the police in both cities believe they are taking the same risks so they believe their pay should be on the same level," said the mayor.

The police here will get a $500 increase effective Jan. 1, 1969 and a further $300 increase on July 1, 1969.

A first class constable now receives $6,800 but with this new agreement the salary goes to $7,600.

Language of Diplomacy

If Ottawa succeeds in establishing diplomatic relations with communist China, and one of Peking's representatives promptly defects, the Government should prepare itself for some picturesque "diplomatic" language from the direction of Peking.

Consider Washington's experience. Through its ambassador in Warsaw (where Chinese and U.S. representatives meet occasionally for informal talks), the United States has received a protest from Peking. It has to do with one of its diplomats who defected in Holland and is now in protective custody in the U.S.

The Peking message denounced both President Nixon and former President Johnson as "jackals of the same lair," and demanded return of the diplomat.

So much for recent cautious hopes in Washington that with a change of administration, the U.S. and China might move toward friendlier relations. In this instance China is accusing the U.S. and the Netherlands of engineering the defection. It claims further that the U.S. was trying to "incite" Chinese diplomatic personnel in other capitals to defect.

Mr. Nixon will have to work hard if he is to overcome this sort of attitude. He and Chairman Mao Tse-tung are scarcely "jackals of the same lair." Perhaps if they were, relations might improve. Meantime both Washington, not to mention Ottawa, might as well resign themselves to the fact that east is east and west is west, and never the twain shall meet.

Public Speaking

The marvellous thing that is language — and the English language in particular — has never reached greater heights of expression than it did under the poetic genius of William Shakespeare.

Television viewers were afforded an excellent reminder of this in the CBS presentation of A Midsummer Night's Dream on Sunday night. It was a production, moreover, that was greatly enhanced by the melodious voices and superb diction of the Royal Shakesperean company of England.

In a presentation such as this by professionals, it is difficult to single out any one actor, male or female, as being superior either in enunciation or dramatic quality. But this does bring us to a facet of latter-day educational ability that is both puzzling and intriguing.

Granted that girls in some age groups seem to learn faster than boys, but why is it in a society that spawns much larger numbers of male speakers the girls nevertheless cutshine the boys as orators.

That was the case in the zone finals in Brockville of the Canadian Legion public speaking contest. It spurred Larry Eamon, legion zone commander to ask if the era of the lady politician were descending upon Canada?

For one thing the number of girl entries far outweighed the boys. There were 14 girls and only six boys, and all eleven prizes were taken by the girls. Their subjects were varied and interesting — from the history of music to smoking, violence and such assortments as peanuts, skunks and the hippies.

Ideally, schoolgirls who display such ability should be afforded similar opportunities when they grow up. Yet the procession of male speakers at service club and other public functions underlines the inferior role adult women are obliged to fill in public life.

Obviously the girls have the ability, but when they grow up the tendency seems to be to get married and leave the talking (in public at least) to the men.

Biafran Flare-up

Anyone thinking the lack of news of late from Biafra was indicative of a slackening in the tempo of the ugly conflict in that area of West Africa will have been rudely awakened by last week's bombing incident.

An estimated 300 persons were killed and hundreds more wounded in an attack by a Nigerian fighter-bomber on a crowded Biafran marketplace. The village of Umuohiagu was bombed and strafed in what was described as the second worst incident of its kind. Last year an estimated 500 persons died in the bombing of a market in Otuocha.

The military value of such an attack is absolutely nil. The Nigerians know that . . . but denied what only months ago was regarded as certain victory against breakaway Biafra, the Lagos government evidently is now turning to terror tactics against the civilian population.

De Gaulle a Stumbling Block

Nixon in Moves to Bolster European Unity

By HAROLD MORRISON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

President Nixon's first planned trip overseas is seen in Europe as a possible voyage of rediscovery leading to a reassertion of Europe's place as the focal point of American foreign policy.

While many European governments have long been critical of American invasion and control of key European industries, the concentration by former president Johnson on the far-away Pacific and particularly Vietnam caused much resentment and concern in some European capitals.

The suspicion that Johnson had become disenchanted with Europe —probably because of outspoken criticism of his Vietnam policies —was followed by fears that Nixon's entry to the White House might lead to American isolationism through increased preoccupation with rising domestic problems.

But despite the explosive nature of these domestic issues, Nixon appears determined to recapture the old spirit that the president of the United States should also be the active leader of the Western allies.

(In his election campaign he came out in support of Britain's determined efforts to enter the European Common Market and in support of a strengthening of the North Atlantic alliance. Some reports suggest he considers European unity so vital that he may try to entice President de Gaulle into a more conciliatory attitude by offering France greater U.S. nuclear co-operation.

It is unlikely, however, that de Gaulle would be eager to respond. De Gaulle is still seeking a European position of his own —indeed, a form of European leadership that would make him an acknowledged power to negotiate from strength in dealings with both the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

Realism would suggest Nixon is well aware that until there is a change in French leadership, France is unlikely to fly willingly under the American wing. Nixon is more likely to stand back and let the Europeans try to work out their own destiny, though perhaps with a little subtle persuasion from the sidelines.

At the moment, efforts for an enlargement of European unity are virtually paralysed. Britain is attempting some subtle manoeuvres of her own, but France is watching closely, ready to pounce on the slightest suspicion of poaching.

Where Nixon might succeed is in strengthening individual links between Europe and the United States. Britain has always considered it has a "special relationship" with the American administration and there is a great deal of concern in the British capital that Nixon, as a special inducement, might seek to provide de Gaulle with some form of preferential treatment.

Letters to the Editor

Too Many Fathers Leaving Family Responsibilities to Mother?

Editor,

The Intelligencer.

I read with interest Thursday's editorial "Education Board Meets."

Mr. Everett Fairman's statements that "fathers don't count anyway" was no doubt said in a humorous vein.

However, there is an undercurrent of uncomfortable truth in his observation, for it is a regrettable fact that a good many fathers don't count all that much in today's society because, sad to say, in far too many cases they don't want to count!

Modern housewives and mothers are assuming greater and greater responsibility for the rearing of today's children, not necessarily because they want to but due to the fact that too many fathers are opting out in such areas as education and general upbringing. Mothers outnumber the fathers ten to one at most home and school meetings; more notes to teachers are written by mothers than by fathers; mothers are generally better informed on such things as educational programs and courses offered their offspring than are their spouses. While there are many fathers who actively participate in all phases of family life, it is a well-known fact that many feel their responsibility begins and ends with providing a home and financially supporting their families and acting as disciplinarian (usually, I'm afraid, after the child's breach of conduct has been brought to their attention by the mother!)

Mothers are usually the ones who see that the children attend school, church and Sunday school regularly, see the dentist and have their inoculation shots when needed. Modern fathers don't explain social behavior to their sons anymore—they learn the facts of life at school from films and health classes, or from their family doctor, or as in a lot of cases, from discussions with their mother!

We mothers don't ask for all this responsibility — it is just becoming more and more an accepted part of our role as a modern mother.

Mothers are taking over in the field of sport — if only as chauffeurs and fans — and becoming more active in what was previously male-dominated areas such as Cubs and Scouts. Home and school members (mostly mothers) were responsible for exerting greatest pressure on educationists to introduce kindergartens, oral French, libraries and suchlike into the public school systems. It is true, there were some active, informed men involved too, but sadly they were a minority.

Bravo, Mr. Fairman, for your too-true-to-be-funny comment. You've placed your finger directly on one of the sore spots in today's mother-father role. Perhaps bruising the male ego a bit will cause those concerned to take an honest look at the area they ignore in their roles as fathers and cause them to contribute more to today's family life than financial support and occasional discipline.

MARION ANDREWS

Sunday and the Scriptures

Editor,

The Intelligencer.

Regarding the letter to the Editor Feb. 3 on "Politics and the Sabbath day" may I add a few words.

It is stated therein that the day of the Sabbath has been changed and to support this certain Bible verses were quoted. Actually the Christian Sabbath day was not changed. The Bible verses quoted were taken from the Old Testament which was given to the Israelites. Lev. 16: 29, 31 and Lev. 23:31. In the same way the seventh year in Israel was also called Sabbath Lev. 25:2. The Sabbath was given to Israel in connection with all other precepts and laws and those who go by the law must observe every law of God.

"For as many as are of the works of the law are under curse; for it is written, cursed is everyone that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them" Gal. 3:10.

Jesus never recognized the Sabbath after His resurrection. He met many on the first day, and He met with His disciples on the first day as recorded in Luke 24 and again after this He met with the disciples on the first day of the week John 20:19. The only reason Paul went into the synagogue on the Sabbath was because this was the most effective way that he could contact them to preach to them. This he explained in 1st Corinth. 9:20.

Presently we live in the age of grace.

"For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of works, lest any man should boast. Salvation is the gift of God." Eph. 2-8-10.

All those who have experienced God's grace and Salvation will voluntarily and glady do all they can to keep the Lord's day holy.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A report, considered by experts to be one of the greatest state papers in the English language, was presented to Parliament in London 130 years ago today —in 1839—by the Earl of Durham. Durham had been sent to Canada in 1838 as governor-general and lord high commissioner with almost dictatorial powers. His report laid down the principles that have guided Britain's colonial policy ever since—and led to the union of Upper and Lower Canada and eventually independence. Durham died in 1840, five days after royal assent was given to a bill uniting Upper and Lower Canada.

1922—The discovery of insulin for the treatment of diabetes by Frederick Banting and Charles Best was announced in Toronto.

1956—Former British foreign office employees Guy Burgess and Donald Maclean turned up in Moscow after being missing for five years.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1944—military officials announced that Canadian-American special service forces were fighting with British and Americans on the Nettuno bridgehead south of Rome; American aircraft bombed Frankfurt by day; Allies recaptured Tumg Bazaar in Burma which Japanese forces took Feb. 4.

Women Must Realize Their Full Potential in Society

From a speech by Sylva M. Geller, director of the women's bureau, Canada department of labor

The factor which is new in the role of women is that, more than ever before in recorded history, woman is in the position of being able to make choices as to her future.

In the society which is only beginning to take shape at this time, she may fulfill herself and thereby enrich the environment in which she lives, by acquiring education and skills; by becoming a housewife and mother; by entering into a career, not only once but at least twice during the economically productive years of her life; or she may choose a combination of these roles.

The new society may enable her to make her choice freely, having regard to her family situation, her own potential, and the welfare of the community in general.

Perhaps for the first time, society will neither disdain nor adore woman in her new role, but will accept her as the partner of man. This will entail some positive action on the part of woman herself.

Politically she must accept the responsibility of citizenship to the full; this requires not only that she exercise the franchise which has been hers these 50 years, but also that she actively participate in the political life of the community.

Obviously such participation will have to be geared to other responsibilities. But if woman continues to absent herself from the law-making chambers of the various jurisdictions then it may be anticipated that there will continue to be a dearth of legislation which alone can fully assure her the partnership in human affairs which she seeks.

In the field of education, woman also must participate more fully in the opportunities which are opening so as to acquire higher levels of learning and broadening skills. The potential of woman has already been scholastic records of the last few years. Only woman herself can ensure that her educational background is consistent with her educational potential.

In the field of employment, although society as a whole must in its own interest ensure that women are properly and fully employed when they are in the labor force, woman herself also has a part to play. The present readiness of women to accept jobs classified at a level considerably lower than those for which they are capable cannot bring society nearer to the goal of full utilization of all potential skills.

There will still remain for women the challenge posed by the traditional prejudices which will take generations to eradicate completely. Certainly the best weapon in this struggle will be that of woman's competence. For by a clear demonstraton of competence of a high order those still nurturing the prejudices of previous ages must eventually be disarmed.

Women should arm themselves with the education; with the skills; and above all with the sense of humor most likely to penetrate the wall of intolerance.

Saturday Mail for Urban Canadians Will End Feb. 15: Postmaster General

OTTAWA (CP) — Saturday mail delivery will end for millions of urban Canadians after Feb. 15.

The five-day delivery week starts officially Monday, Feb. 17, after abortive plans to launch it Feb. 1 ran into a postal-union protest.

The unions are still unhappy with resulting changes in their work patterns but Postmaster-General Eric Kierans — who says the shorter delivery week and changes in procedures will save $13,000,000 a year — insists he is sticking to the Feb. 17 starting date.

The department today released details of how the day-shorter delivery week will affect Canadians:

—There will be no change in postal service in smaller centrès generally served by post offices operated in conjunction with private businesses or homes.

—Rural route delivery service to boxes remains unchanged, although at one time it too was destined for extinction.

—In communities not served by carriers and where service is provided from self-contained post office buildings, first-class mail and daily newspapers will be processed for delivery and up to four hours of wicket service will be provided on Saturdays.

—These wicket transactions will include general delivery, sale of postage stamps and money orders and acceptance of items for mailing. Lock-box service will be maintained and mails will be received and despatched at post offices.

—In areas served by carriers, sub post offices located in drug stores and similar businesses will remain open to provide wicket service, including mailing of items requiring weighing and documentation.

—Main post offices will provide lock-box service for four hours on Saturday, allowing those who feel they must have delivery to arrange receipt through such boxes.

—Special delivery mail will be unchanged. Weekend street letter box collections will continue to be made and mail will continue to be received and despatched.

Although weekend mail will continue to be processed, the number of staff required will be cut to a minimum. The greatest numbur of employees will work a Monday-to-Friday week.

Mr. Kierans has said the changeover will not result in any full-time employees being laid off. There has been no hiring since last Oct. 1 to prepare for the new delivery week. Should employees have to be transferred, their expenses would be paid.

The main change in the duties of carriers is that they no longer will pick up mail at post offices twice a day. They now will work on straight-through delivery — one morning pickup, allowing them if they wish to remain on their routes and take their lunch break there.

The 25,000-member Council of Postal Unions has protested this straight-through delivery, mainly because the department refuses to credit them with the time taken in returning to offices for lunch or washup.

The washup-time dispute has been referred to an adjudicator and the other contested time remains a point of contention.

There are about 6,500 residential letter carrier walks in Canada. Each walk has an average of 450 maximum points of call of which 300 now are covered in the morning. Since many points receive no mail on a given day, the department estimates only 20 letter-size items which would have been delivered in the afternoon now will come 24 hours later.

The unions disagree with the department estimates and claim the public will suffer a greater delay.

Mr. Kierans says:

"The benefits to postal workers and the savings to the taxpayers at large fully warrants the changes."

Kurata Wants Opportunity To Defend Himself

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Judge Lucien Kurata, whose conduct has been investigated in closed session by Ontario's judicial council, said Monday he has "pleaded" with Attorney-General Arthur Wishart for the opportunity to defend himself in a court of law.

Judge Kurata, 46, a Toronto magistrate for three years, told a news conference he learned last week that the five-man council has recommended a public inquiry into allegations against him of improper assault and interference with the administration of justice.

Established under last year's Provincial Courts Act, the council deals with questions concerning the conduct of provincial judges.

Kudge Kurata, who has not been assigned to any court since November, said the council's hearing involved allegations of a Metropolitan Toronto policewoman.

He demanded that he be tried "under the Criminal Code in a court of law" on the two charges and on a charge of attempting to commit suicide.

"I have been falsely accused of an improper assault upon a policewoman on Nov. 15, 1968, in my office at the old city hall," Judge Kurata said. "I have denied the allegation since it was first made against me. . .

"She (the policewoman) also implies an improper attempt on my part to interfere with the administration of justice—an allegation I have also insistently denied and again a matter that should be disposed of in a court of law.

"I have also been accused of making an attempt upon my life on Sept. 1, 1968. This information was brought to the attention of the attorney-general shortly thereafter."

"The judicial council which convened last December to hear the charges against the judge consisted of G. A. Gale, chief justice of Ontario; Dalton Wells, chief justice of the high court of appeals; Chief Provincial Judge Arthur Klein; Chief Judge Harry Andrews of the family and juvenile court and W. G. C. Howland, treasurer of the Law Society of Upper Canada.

In Ottawa, Attorney-General Wishart declined to comment on Judge Kurata's plea for an opportunity to defend himself in court.

Tommy Douglas Scores Easy Victory in B.C.

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP) — T. C. (Tommy) Douglas scored an easy victory in Monday's Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands federal byelection.

His political image refurbished by a 6,814-vote margin, the national leader of the New Democratic Party said it will probably be at least a week before he heads for Ottawa and the Commons seat denied him in the general election last June.

"I'm going to spend a few days going around the riding to express my thanks personally to my constituents for their vote of confidence," said Mr. Douglas.

He termed Monday's victory, which retained the Vancouver Island seat for the NDP, a memorable landmark in a political career spanning 35 years.

"I've been in closer battles, but this certainly ranks as one of the most memorable," the 64-year-old veteran of 16 election campaigns remarked.

"It is not a personal victory but rather a mandate from the people of this area to tell the government that Canadians demand leadership rather than inertia."

Mr. Douglas took the lead on the first poll reported Monday evening and increased it steadily through the night. With all 218 polls reported, Mr. Douglas had 19,712 votes, Liberal Eric Winch 12,898 and Magnus Verbrugge, the Progressive Conservative candidate, 1,982.

Present standings in the 264-seat commons: Liberals 154, Conservatives 72, NDP 22, Creditistes 14, Independent 1, vacant 1.

The riding had been held through six federal elections by New Democrat Colin Cameron, the party's financial critic in the Commons until his death last July.

Mr. Douglas increased the NDP margin by more than 2,000 votes. In the general election last June 25, Mr. Cameron got 15,273 votes for a 4,095 lead over Liberal Mladen Zorkin's 11,178. The Conservative candidate got 8,773 votes and Social Credit, which didn't contest the byelection, received less than 1,200.

The victory celebration at NDP headquarters here Monday night was joyful bedlam. More than 500 workers and supporters jammed into the CCF Hall, which normally seats about 200, cheering and singing.

They clambored onto tables and chairs to cheer Mr. Douglas repeatedly as he told them NDP followers throughout Canada were rejoicing "because in this critical stage the people of this country are demanding effective action from the government."

"We need action instead of inaction."

The result climaxed another comeback victory for Mr. Douglas, who was first elected to Commons in 1935 under the banner of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, forerunner of the NDP.

He resigned in 1944 to lead his party to victory in Saskatchewan. Returning to federal politics as national leader of the NDP after a string of provincial election successes in Saskatchewan, he was defeated in Regina City in 1962.

He moved to British Columbia, gaining a seat in the Commons as the member for Burnaby-Coquitlam in a 1962 byelection. Then in the general election last June 25, he again was upset. Losing in Burnaby-Seymour by 138 votes to Ray Perrault, former B.C. Liberal leader.

The bearers were Stan Sheppard, Frank Belsey, Ray Finkle, Harry Trepanner, Robert Holland and Frank Kirby.

HAROLD RAY HARPER

Ill since early in December, Harold Ray Harper, 28 Hastings Drive, died Tuesday in Kingston General Hospital. He was in his 46th year.

Born in Port Perry, Ont., he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Russell Harper and for the past 11 years had lived in Belleville where he operated a service station. Before coming to this city he had lived in Oshawa.

A veteran of World War II, he served with the Queen's Own Rifles, enlisting in Toronto in 1943 and seeing service in England, France, Holland and Germany. He received his discharge in 1946. He was a member of the Belleville Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion and of Eastminster United Church.

He is survived by his wife, the former Helen Marie Lambe, one daughter Lynn, at home; three brothers, Clifford, Oshawa; Emmerson, Scarborough, and John of Nipigon, and a sister, Mrs. Hugh (Aileen) Rogers of Bowmanville.

The funeral will be held Thursday from the John R. Bush Funeral Home with service in the chapel at 1.30 p.m., conducted by Rev. Alexander McDowell. Interment will be in Union Cemetery, Oshawa.

MRS. ANDREW McCRORY (Stirling)

Ill only for the past two weeks, Mrs. Mildred Myrtle McCrory, 88 Emily Street, Stirling, died Monday in Kingston General Hospital. She was in her 50th year.

Born at R.R. 3 Stirling, she was the daughter of Harry Hagerman and the late Ethel Hagerman and for the past 25 years had lived in Stirling where she was a member of St. Paul's United Church.

Besides her husband she is survived by four sons, Douglas of Belleville, Donald, Ronald and Alan of Stirling, Mrs. Eugene (Ruth) Akey of R.R. 2 Holloway and Mrs. Clarence (Betty) Brown of Stirling.

There are two brothers, Arthur Hagerman of Beeton, Ont., and Albert R.R. 3 Stirling, and one sister Vera.

The funeral will be held Thursday from the Hogle Funeral Home at Stirling with service in the chapel at 1.30 p.m. conducted by Rev. J. Bruce Small. Entombment will be in Stirling Cemetery vault.

MRS. NETTIE MAY ELLIOTT

The funeral of Mrs. Nettie May Elliott was held Monday afternoon from the John R. Bush Funeral Home with service in the chapel conducted by Rev. J. F. Bunmen. Interment was in Belleville Cemetery.

During the services Mrs. Arnold Dilts sang "In The Garden". Alec Gordon acted as accompanist.

The bearers were Ralph Sine, Ken Thompson, Freeman Howes, Arthur Bates, Harry Sears and Charles Treverton.

The bearers, all grandsons of the deceased, were Edward Dawson, Roy Dawson, Larry Dawson, Elmer Bowman, Bill Vanclief and Marshall Wood.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market held a fractional gain in moderately active mid-morning trading today.

The industrial index was up .03 to 193.03, just below its record last week. Advances outnumbered declines by a small margin.

Hand Chemical rose 1⅝ to 22, General Distributors 1 to 19½, Erie Diversified 1 to 22, Trans-Canada Pipe Lines ¾ to 42 and Stelco ½ to 27½.

Among the heaviest traders, Van Ness gained $1.10 to $4.85 and Bahamas-Caribbean 15 cents to $1.15.

On the downside, Bartaco lost ⅜ to 20⅛ and Federal Farms ½ to 6¾.

Trading in Canadian Pacific Investments warrants continued to be held up because of an influx of orders since the weekend. The warrants last traded Friday at $7.85, up 45 cents on the week.

Brokers said demand for the warrants is coming from Europe where a market advisory service has just recommended them.

Canadian Pacific Investments preferred stock was up 1¼ to a record at 35½.

Atco Industries fell 1⅛ to 18⅛. The stock's decline this week follows the report of slightly lower annual earnings.

Among western oils and mines, Pacific Pete fell ⅜ to 27⅝, French Pete 30 cents to $8.40 and Great Plains Development ¼ to 34½.

Falconbridge rose 1 to 121 and McIntyre Porcupine 1 to 122.

On index, western oils lost 1.03 to 246.49 and golds .69 to 242.23. Base metals advanced .05 to 120.55. Volume by 11 a.m. was 1,371,000 shares compared with 1,262,000 at the same time Monday.

The market advanced to within a fraction of its record in active trading Monday.

MR. AND MRS. LLOYD A. WHITE

White – Sheffield

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Belleville was the scene of the Feb. 1 wedding, when Frances Burnett Sheffield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Burnett Sheffield, of Belleville, was united in marriage to Lloyd Archibald White son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl B. White of Old Barns, Nova Scotia. Rev. Laurie Sutherland was the officiating minister. Rendering appropriate nuptial selections was organist Frank Martin.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white floor length gown of peau de soie, in princess style, featuring a wide yoke of Swiss eyelet. The sleeves of the gown were also banded with Swiss eyelet. Her veil was a circlet of embroidered Swiss eyelet, and tulle. She carried a bouquet of talisman roses and trailing ivy.

Her attendant was maid of honor, cousin of the bride, Lorraine Sheffield. She was attired in a floor length pink chiffon gown. Her bouquet was of pink and white carnations.

Attending the bridegroom was the brother of the bridegroom, Phillip White, of Chester, Nova Scotia. The ushers were Robert Sheffield, of Toronto and George Sheffield of Belleville, both brothers of the bride.

The wedding luncheon was held at the Maple Inn, in Bloomfield. Both the mother of the bride and the mother of the bridegroom wore corsages of pink and white carnations to complement their attire.

The bride's travelling costume consisted of a carmel colored suit trimmed with white Norwegian fur. After they return from a wedding trip to Quebec City, the couple will be residing at Macdonald College, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Que., where the bride will continue her teaching studies.

Events in Centennial Year Contributed to the Arts

CALGARY (CP) — Canada crossed the threshold from a pioneer country to a sophisticated nation when Canadians became aware of the arts in Centennial Year, says Mrs. D. W. McGibbon of Toronto.

She is a member of the Canada Council, first vice-president of the Canadian Council of Arts, chairman of the Ontario Theatre Study and a member of the executive of the Dominion Drama Festival.

"Expo and other projects throughout the country contributed to this emergence," she says. "Not all of these were perfect, but things were done and we learned.

"We're at a stage now where we're trying hard to improve the lot of the artist and the general arts picture in Canada."

The Canada Council grant system is no rubber-stamp operation, says Mrs. McGibbon.

"The application goes to at least three people, two of whom know the applicant personally. Then the staff goes over it. Finally the award group deals with it."

Club Activities

BETA SIGMA PHI PSI

The regular meeting of Phi Psi Chapter Beta Sigma Phi met at the home of Miss Beth Bird.

A letter was received from International informing the group that a new cook book was being planned with receipts of casseroles and bread.

A letter announcing the convention in Halifax to be held this Oct. was received.

Plans were made for the wine and cheese party for May 31 with Mrs. Carolyn Michaud as convener. An invitation from Gamma Mu was received by all members to attend a regular meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 4.

Sandra Findlay led a discussion entitled "Am I a practical person". Everyone present found this helpful in their lives.

To end a pleasant evening refreshments were served by hostess and co-hostess Mrs. Irene McInnis.

LOSS TEMPORARY

The department of national health and welfare says that weight lost from a steam bath is temporary and will be recovered at the next meal.

United Church Congregational Meet

Bridge St. United Church held its annual congregational meeting recently, with Dr. H. M. Davis presiding over proceedings, and Dr. J. G. Demeza acting as secretary.

The opening devotional service was conducted by Dr. Davis.

The annual reports for 1968 were then presented. The Board of Session report showed a slight increase in membership. The Session was also pleased to report that it had recommended George Phillips, a Sunday School teacher, to the Belleville Presbytery, as a lay preacher. He has been appointed to full time service on the Plevna Charge in Kingston Presbytery.

Newly elected to the Board of Session was R. E. Berry. Re-elected were: K. M. Bird; John Brown; E. W. Dickens; R. O. Dulmage; C. A. Faulkner; T. K. Franklin; J. R. Grant; George Greatrix; C. H. James; R. E. Kuntze; Donald Leslie; Dr. Elizabeth Scott; W. G. Slack.

New members elected to the Committee of Stewards were: A. McLean Haig; Arthur Hall and Byron Taylor. Re-elected were: Charles Bristol; A. D. Cameron; Clayton French; E. G. Gurnett; J. Bryson Leslie; Jack Mather and C. B. Morgan.

J. B. Leslie is the new chairman of the Committee of Stewards and Jack Mather continues as secretary.

The treasurer's report, presented by G. B. Hyde showed that receipts just met expenditures for local church operation for the year. The Building Fund debt was reduced by $4900 to $26,800. In summary, the congregation provided a total of more than $86,000 during 1968. More than $31,000 of this was used for Christian purposes outside of the local church.

The report of the Board of Session expressed appreciation for the leadership and service, given freely by many able and dedicated volunteers, and to all members of the church staff.

The United Church Women and the AOTS Men's Club both reported a busy year, with many successful activities in 1968.

J. K. Franklin expressed the appreciation of the congregation to the minister and his wife Dr. and Mrs. Harry M. Davis. Dr. Davis acknowledged this expression of affection with gratitude.

At the conclusion of the scheduled agenda the secretary read a letter to the congregation presented by the minister, Rev. Dr. H. M. Davis, stating his desire for a change in pastoral relationship, after having served at Bridge St. United Parish for fourteen and a half years.

In accordance with church procedure the matter was referred to the Official Board for consideration at its next meeting.

Following adjournment, refreshments were served by the women of the U.C.W.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

The engagement is announced of Elizabeth Amy, daughter of Mrs. Mercy Follwell, and Mr. Wm. H. J. Follwell of Belleville to Mr. Barry Maitland Turpin, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Turpin of Bloomfield. Wedding to take place in Holloway St. United Church on Saturday, March 15, 1969, at 3.00 p.m.

• • •

Previous to the marriage Mrs. Paul F. Poirier (nee Diane Barton) was honored at a shower given by Miss Judy Welch of Toronto and another at the home of Mrs. William E. Riley of Belleville. A luncheon and presentation was also held in her honor by co-workers at the Children's Aid Society, Toronto.

• • •

Mrs. Charles Bristol, Belleville attended the memorial service in Toronto on Sat., Feb. 8, of her aunt, Audrey (Mrs. L. E. Wray) who died recently in Del Ray, Florida.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

CANNIFTON-CORBYVILLE

The monthly meeting of Cannifton-Corbyville Women's Institute took the form of a social evening and dinner at the Sun Luck Gardens, the first of last week.

Sixteen members were present to enjoy the tasty meal followed by a short business meeting and concluded with a social time. It was decided that a donation would be sent the 75th anniversary fund; also that the deed has been received for the community hall which will be known as the Cannifton-Corbyville Bethany Historical Site.

Mrs. Welsh, program convener for the evening, read an article dealing with human relations followed by a poem. A number of games were enjoyed and the winners of these were: Mrs. M. Palmer, Mrs. F. Reid, Mrs. Kleinsteuber, Mrs. Milton, Mrs. Latchford, Mrs. M. Treverton and Mrs. H. Moore.

Thanks was expressed to Mrs. J. Latchford and Mrs. D. Windsor who were responsible for making all the arrangements.

CLUB 4-H NOTES

MELROSE KRAFTY KITTENS

The second meeting of Melrose Krafty Kittens was held at the home of Mrs. J. Sherman with six members present.

Mrs. McLaren discussed color and color schemes. Mrs. Sherman gave a talk on how to create a design.

Each member then worked on samples of the blanket stitch. The next meeting will be held Feb. 10, at the home of Mrs. McLaren.

Cowgirl Adopts Vietnamese Child

VANCOUVER (CP) — Carmel Gowan, who twirls a mean lariat, needs just seconds to lassoo a fractious calf.

It takes a good deal longer, the attractive cowgirl from Swift Current, Sask., reports, to get your brand firmly affixed to an orphan you want for your own.

The Saskatchewan cowgirl admits unusual circumstances contributed to the delay in her case.

For one thing, Miss Gowan, 33, is single and is constantly on the move as a nightclub entertainer and circus performer — not the normal qualifications of adoptive parents.

For another, Kim, the eight-year-old girl she finally adopted, lived in Vietnam.

Miss Gowan met Kim while entertaining United States troops with her rope-spinning act in Vietnam in 1965.

"I'd had no intention of trying to adopt a child," Miss Gowan said in an interview while visiting relatives and performing in Vancouver. "I was already supporting a child in Korea, but I decided I had to do something about Kim.

"I started adoption proceedings and it was five months before the papers went through. Then it took another seven months for me to get her into Canada. I guess they investigated me because I'm not married and most of my work is in nightclubs."

Kim, a boisterous, dark-eyed youngster, travels with her mother. She now speaks good English and gets her education by correspondence courses.

"I wish more people would get interested in helping those poor Vietnamese children," says Miss Gowan.

"Many get no education, not enough to eat, and suffer disease."

IODE Plans to Celebrate 69th Anniversary

TORONTO (CP) — The Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire points to an impressive record of service in many fields as the national women's organization prepares to celebrate the 69th anniversary of its founding Feb. 13.

The IODE, which describes its aims as the unity of Canada and the betterment of mankind, now has more than 25,000 members and raises and disburses some $1,000,000 annually for education and other fields of service. Last year more than $350,000 was spent by the order on education. Schools receiving IODE aid totalled 1,950.

All schools in the Northwest Territories receive substantial aid from the IODE, and to combat the high dropout rate in all of the eight secondary schools serving Eskimo and Indian pupils in the Northwest Territories, "incentive awards" are given to encourage the students to return to school to complete their courses.

Canadian arts supported financially include the National Ballet, National Theatre School of Canada and the National Youth Orchestra.

Junior chapter members have stocked a Dominica Bookmobile with more than 4,000 books, and recently acquired a new project called "Operation Surusikuluit" meaning "dear little people." Educational toys and supplies will be sent to all pre-school classes in the Northwest Territories.

IODE assistance has expanded to include schools of nursing, art, music, teacher training, ballet, theatre, and to community colleges, schools of technology and design.

The work of the IODE's Commonwealth relations department is done mainly in education. This year two undergraduate students are studying medicine at Indian Medical Colleges. One student from Barbados is taking a post-graduate course in Canada.

Approximately $60,000 was awarded from the order's First and Second World War memorial funds to provide post-graduate scholarships of $3,000 each for study in Canada and $5,000 each for overseas study.

The IODE continues to provide furnishings and equipment to assist such groups as the blind, handicapped and aged. Donations to institutions include color television sets, babies' cribs, hospital kitchen equipment, outfitting of a research laboratory, washing machines, heart monitor and a hospital playroom.

Clothing is made in quantity for distribution both in Canada and abroad. In the last year 711 cases with clothes for the needy were shipped.

Work with the Indian and Metis people continues to expand. Close contact is maintained with the "friendship centres" and food, clothing, games, musical instruments and furnishings are provided for their use.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT W. HUTCHINSON

Hutchinson – Mountney

The East Chapel of the Timothy Eaton Memorial Church, Toronto, was the scene of the recent wedding, when Rev. Charles R. Plasket united in marriage Sylvia Clara Mountney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Mountney of Belleville, to Robert William Hutchinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hutchinson, of RR1, Ida, Ont. Rendering appropriate nuptial selections was organist Malcolm McGrath.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a street-length empire style dress of wool crepe, featuring a high mandarin collar, and long sleeves tapering to wide cuffs, closed by covered buttons and loops. Her veil was shoulder-length, caught to a small floral headpiece. She carried a bouquet of phylonopsis orchids, with white satin streamers.

Matron of honor, Mrs. Bruce Thomson, wore an A-line street-length dress, in pale blue-green crepe. The neck and cuffs of the dress were trimmed with white lace. Her floral headpiece was the same color as her dress. She carried a nosegay of white rosebuds.

Best man for the ceremony was Bruce Lloyd; and the usher was Julian Ciupak.

For the reception at the Board Room, Sutton Place, the mother of the bride was attired in a rose-colored silk dress with a matching three-quarter length coat. Her corsage was of phylonopsis white orchids. The mother of the bridegroom chose a mocha-colored silk dress with embossed, elbow-length sleeves, and a white corsage of phylonopsis orchids.

After their return from a short honeymoon, the couple will be residing on Dovercourt Road, in Toronto.

MR. AND MRS. PAUL FRANCOIS POIRIER

Poirier – Barton

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Belleville was the setting for a candlelight wedding ceremony when Diane Elizabeth Barton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Barton, Belleville was united in marriage to Paul Francois Poirier, Toronto, son of Mrs. Arthur Leonard Poirier of Halifax, Nova Scotia, and the late Mr. Poirier. Rev. Laurie Sutherland, minister of the church, officiated and appropriate nuptial selections were rendered by organist Frank Martin.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length white velvet Victorian gown featuring a high empire waist and highlighted with a matching attached velvet hood lined with white satin. She carried a nosegay of white roses.

Maid of honor Miss Mary Reid of Belleville wore a floor length gown styled similarly to the bride's but in primrose yellow, while the bridesmaids Mrs. Sheila Barton of Carleton Place and Miss Judy Welch of Toronto wore gowns styled identically to the maid of honor. All wore yellow and white imported Swiss embroidered bows in their hair with streamers extending to the floor. Each carried a lighted miniature hurricane lamp trimmed with white hyacinth bells.

Michael Briks of Toronto attended the bridegroom and the ushers were Fred Barton Jr., brother of the bride and Neil Read of Toronto.

For the reception at The Belleville Club, Pinnacle Street the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a floor length aqua crepe dress in Grecian style with matching tinted baby mums in her hair. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a floor length peacock blue velvet dress with high empire waist, and a corsage of baby 'mums.

Leaving on a wedding trip to Ottawa the bride donned an imported Irish knit bell-bottom pant suit with matching vest and beret, and enhanced with an Italian brown satin long sleeved blouse.

On return the couple will reside at 287 St. George St., Apt. 7, Toronto.

Cobourg Presbyterial U.C.W. Meets

By DORIS CLARK

"The man who can handle facts and things will always end up working for the man who can handle people." So says Richard Needham, prominent Canadian columnist.

There it is again — the importance of good human relations. Yet there are folk who haven't a clue about getting along with the people at work, at play, or even at home where they keep the ones they care most about.

"Daddy, can I talk to you about something?" — "Not just now, son. I'm tired and have a lot on my mind."

And the questioning child subsides. The question never gets asked.

Or at work: "Marion, I've decided to transfer you to the accounts department. Your new duties start next week." Just like that! Marion wonders whether the change is a rebuke or a step forward. What on earth would be wrong with asking her what she would think about a transfer; letting her in on it?

Giving the other fellow credit for ideas and intelligence and a right to know about things which concern him — this is a prime characteristic of the person who knows how to handle people.

Dear Doris: I am 15 and I don't know how to dance. It's not funny like some people think. It's awful when we have a school dance or something. I try to do some but I just get mixed up and can't do anything.

I don't want to ask a girl to teach me because when I do they say I don't know them very good (when they do help me). Could you send me a leaflet or something to help me (teen dances mostly)? — Help a Fifteen-Year-Old.

Dear Help: Is it the rhythm you can't get? Then practise marking time to your own dance record first.

Next thing is to loosen up a little, move arms and legs the way the TV teens do it. Or get the help of a girl who has a little more patience.

Here's a tip: The swaggerers and swingers you see out on the dance floor have more nerve than anything else. You will make out, once you get going.

• • •

Dear Doris: I read in your column about the person who told a psychiatrist she wanted to help people, and instead of steering her he sent her a bill for $25. She mentioned a book called "The Power of Thoughts". Could I get this book?

I think it could help me as I have the same problems she mentioned. If this book helps me this person's efforts have not failed. — Thought Power Needed.

Dear Thought: You and two others have written in about this. Unfortunately the kind hearted reader signing "Anonym" is so far just that. I do wish she had given a proper name and address!

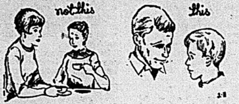
How about that, Anonym? Want to give a little help to three readers, and probably others? I promise it won't cost you anything but another stamp!

• • •

(When writing in, allow Doris four weeks for private reply, which will be sent if a six cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.)

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "We know Jim is going to smoke whether we forbid it or not, so I told him if he had to smoke to do it in front of us. It's better than having him deceive us."

Father: "You know as well as I do that there's a great deal of harm in smoking. Your mother and I don't smoke and we don't want you to acquire the habit."

It's impossible to police a teen-ager's every act, but parents should not appear to condone anything they believe is wrong or harmful by permitting it just because the youngster "will do it anyway."

Many Clueless in Handling People

CAMPBELLFORD — "There is a great need for the church to become involved in the changes taking place in the world today," so said Rev. Gordon Winch of Toronto on Wednesday to the United Church Women of Cobourg Presbyterial meeting held in Campbellford.

Rev. Winch spoke of his work as a padre of the pubs in Toronto. In the pubs and beer parlors he met people who have fears, hopes, and problems like everyone else. He was gratified by the appreciation of the people with whom he talked.

Fifteen months ago the United Church opened a Distress Centre in Toronto and Rev. Winch has been appointed as director. There are 90 volunteer helpers who service the phone 24 hours a day. To date they have received over 8,000 calls from those in trouble.

The volunteers are university students, housewives, retired persons and businessmen. They are taught that the most important thing is to know how a person feels, to understand him and show friendship.

Mrs. W. T. Jones, Cobourg, president of the Cobourg Presbyterial presided over the meeting with 250 women from 40 groups attending.

Warkworth UCW opened with worship service. Mrs. H. Pierce, Campbellford, welcomed the women to St. Johns' church.

The treasurer, Mrs. Crowhurst, Port Hope, reported the unified budget of $25,000 had been sent to headquarters.

Mrs. D. Lain of Stanwood sang a solo accompanied by Mrs. D. Bennett at the organ. Mrs. J. Beach of Frankford displayed the literature.

Lunch was served by the women of St. John's UCW.

Hoards UCW opened the afternoon session with a worship service. Miss Vina Neal brought greetings from conference.

Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Day, United Church missionaries in Hong Kong were afternoon speakers. They work under the Church of Christ in China which is a United Church.

In Hong Kong the church reaches out to those in need and they are conducting a program of self help rather than welfare, ten per cent of the people are Christians. They spoke about the problems in mainland China today. All church buildings are closed and it is illegal to carry out Christian worship, however they feel that Christian parents will find a way to raise their children as Christians.

Rev and Mrs. L. Woods, St. John's church sang a duet.

The offering was sent to the United Chuhch Moderator for "Just One Day's Pay".

Mrs. H. Morgan presented the slate of officers and Rev. C. McLaren, Brighton, installed the oficers for 1969.

Ann Landers

Ethics of Profession Probably Violated

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The letter from the M.D.'s wife was extremely revealing. The woman was obviously attempting to defend the medical profession against the accusation that some of the Great Healers make passes at women in the examining rooms. She tried to put the blame on the patients by telling about the various types who have propositioned her spouse.

ANN LANDERS

This woman's husband may be gentle and compassionate as she described him — a man in whom a woman would find it easy to confide — but he also has a very big mouth. A doctor who goes home and tells his wife about the patients who propositioned him in the office is violating the ethics of his profession.

I can tell you from experience that the doctors' wives at our club are charming but they drink a lot and they talk too much. If the husbands of these women are taking their professional secrets home, I feel sorry for their patients. — ANTI-CLATTERTRAP.

DEAR ANT: I'm not at all sure that wives of M.D.'s drink more than wives of lawyers or paperhangers, but your point about keeping confidences is well taken, and I thank you for making it.

* * *

DEAR AN NLANDERS: Jay and I have been going to-
to meet his mother. He has askedth aonly ....N NN gether for two years. Next week he is driving me to Louisville to meet his mother. He has asked that I tell her I am 27 instead of 30. Also, he'd appreciate it if I didn't mention my previous marriage. If religion comes up I'm to say I'm an Episcopalian (I'm really a Baptist.) And oh yes, he thinks she would be more favorably impressed if I said I taught school rather than admit to being a hairdresser.

According to Jay, these are not lies, they are small distortions designed to make an old lady happy. What do you think? — ZAPPED.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Jay and I have been going to-you're not going — in which case he can find himself an Episcopalian schoolteacher, about 27 years old, who has had no previous marriage.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was horrified to read of the secretary who took it upon herself to surprise the boss and straighten around his desk drawer. One morning she ran into pornography that kept her blushing until five o'clock.

That secretary must be new in the work world or she would have known about the written law: The Boss' Desk Drawers Are Inviolate. How would she like it if the boss decided to surprise her and straighten around her purse? — NO SNOOP SECRETARY.

DEAR NO SNOOP: The operative word is "surprise." No secretary should take it upon herself to straighten around her boss's desk drawer unless she has his permission. On the other hand, any one of my eleven secretaries is welcome to straighten around my desk drawers any time they wish to do so. I appreciate sharp pencils, a well-stocked paper clip box and pens that write.

Women's Institutes

MOUNTAIN VIEW W. I.

Mrs. Robert Barber opened her home for the February meeting of the Mountain View Women's Institute, with Mrs. Wellet acting as co-hostess. There were approximately 25 members in attendance.

The meeting was conducted by president, Mrs. W. Nightingale, and, in the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Grant Minaker acted in that capacity.

Mrs. Margaret Wallbridge spoke briefly on the motto, after which Mrs. Frank Roblin gave a humorous reading. It was decided to hold a bake sale at the next meeting, which is to be held at the home of Mrs. B. Summer in March.

The topic for the month was health, with Mrs. David Farmer as convener, who read a short piece on safety. Mrs. Farmer then introduced Mr. Harvey of the Children's Aid Society of Prince Edward County. He showed a film on cancer, at the same time narrating the film, and giving additional information on the subject.

The meeting was closed and lunch was served by hostess and co-hostess, Mrs. B. Summer and Mrs. K. Motley. Later a social hour was enjoyed.

Congregational Meeting

HOLLOWAY ST. UNITED

Rev. W. Lamb opened the annual congregational meeting with a scripture reading and a short devotional. Clerk of Sessions, Douglas Ptolemy presided during the meeting. Roscoe Dryden was appointed secretary.

The reports from various organizations were reviewed. Mr. Stephens, retiring Clerk of Session, was called on to thank the session members. He was later presented with a gift.

George McDonald made a presentation to Mrs. Marion Doxsee, who was the church secretary for a number of years, and has now joined the staff at Albert College.

Four new members were appointed to session: Mrs. Pearl Holmes, Lloyd Churchill, Sid Wilkinson and Howard Skelly. Two new members were appointed to the stewards: Mrs. Marion Doxsee and Paul Kennedy. Douglas Macpherson was appointed a signing officer on the building fund.

Rev. Wagar moved a vote of thanks to leaders of the organizations and a social time was enjoyed.

Private Duty Nurses Assemble

The annual meeting of the Private Duty Nurses' Community Nursing Registry was held at the home of the president, Mrs. Joan McDonnell, Foster Avenue on Tuesday evening.

Opened by the president, the minutes were read by Mrs Pearl Herrington in the absence of Mrs. Edith McLenren; also minutes of the last meeting and financial reports were read by Mrs. Joan Young; treasurer's report by Mrs. Alice Thurston, and corresponding secretary and publicity reports by Mrs. Pearl Herrington.

It was decided that the Registry go on 24-hour Telephone Answering Service with the director, Mrs. Joan Young as consultant. This to begin immediately.

The meeting was adjourned by the president and lunch was served by the convener, Miss Vivian Grose.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Continuation of Gourmet Menu

By MARY MOORE

Yesterday I gave you the recipe for Glazed Shrimp-Stuffed Avocadoes and promised to go ahead today with the next item on my gourmet menu, Veal Cordon Bleu with Mushroom Gravy.

I am making no excuses for the price of the veal ($1.98 per pound) because two pounds served six people and lots of times you pay $4.00 and more for your Sunday roasts.

VEAL CORDON BLEU WITH MUSHROOM GRAVY

(Serves 6)

2 pounds veal cutlet pounded by butcher with his mallet to ¼" thickness
3 oz. package smoked chipped beef, wafer thin (Or equivalent in sliced cooked ham)
12 thin slices Edam cheese (a little more than ½ pound)
2 medium-sized eggs
2 tablespoons water
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup melted butter

Fresh bread crumbs from about four slices buzzed in blender or grated. During the morning of the day of your dinner party cut slices of veal into oblongs 4 x 5" or 9 x 2". You should have 12. Cover one half of each with a slice of Edam cheese and a folded slice of chipped beef (or ham). Fold bare half over to make a turnover and gently press together. Beat eggs with water and salt in shallow bowl. Pile crumbs on dinner plate at right of beaten egg. Dip veal turnovers in egg, then crumb both sides. Pour melted butter all over large shallow baking dish (preferably one of those corning ware baking platters that can be carried to the table) and arrange crumbed veal turnovers on it. Cover with saran and chill in refrigerator to set and firm up. One hour before mealtime take veal turnovers from refrigerator to warm to room temperature. Heat oven to 350 deg. Fahr. and bake them for 25 to 30 minutes until golden. Serve these sizzling hot with —

MUSHROOM GRAVY (serves 6)

¼ pound mushrooms scrubbed and sliced
1 tablespoon butter
1½ tablespoons flour
1 chicken oxo cube
1 beef oxo cube
1 cup boiling water

In a frying pan gently saute mushrooms in the butter until coated, then add flour, mix in well, then add oxo cubes and boiling water and stir until thickened and oxo cubes have dissolved. Pass boiling hot in gravy boat to serve on or beside Veal Cordon Bleu. The grandest five-star restaurant in Paris cannot beat this wonderful dish.

NOTE: Tomorrow I am giving you a recipe for heart-shaped maraschino cherry upside down cake for Valentine dessert but on Thursday will give you the methods and sauces I used for the endive, baked bananas and baby carrots on my gourmet menu.

TUESDAY

Dinner Menu

Baked Back Bacon or Cottage Roll with Raisin Sauce; Candied Yams or Carrots; Brussels Sprouts; Individual Dessert Fruit Salads: Orange and Grapefruit Segments, Pineapple Ring, Cheese - Stuffed Prunes, Cottage Cheese Dressing; Coffee.

Robarts Smiling

He May Be Only Premier Sure of Some Benefits

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario Premier John Robarts was smiling broadly and almost dancing on his one good foot as he walked away Monday from the first day of the federal-provincial conference on the constitution.

He had good reason, for he may be the only premier with nothing to lose as the government leaders talk today about money.

If the combined efforts of 10 premiers force a concession from the federal government on some immediate relief from pressing financial problems, Premier Robarts will have scored a victory since he helped get fiscal matters added to the conference agenda.

If there are no concessions, Mr. Robarts can point to Ottawa when Treasurer Charles MacNaughton brings in a budget, expected to include tax increases, on Feb. 19—Ash Wednesday.

Mr. Robarts said Monday that discussions at the conference will include immediate financial problems as well as the "constitutional aspects of fiscal matters" proposed by Prime Minister Trudeau. Any provincial arguments which do develop will help win public sympathy in Ontario for Mr. Robarts's contention that tax increases are due to a poor break for the province in tax-sharing arrangements with the federal government.

Mr. Robarts, his left foot still in the cast he has worn since he slipped on ice in Toronto about six weeks ago, said he expected a wide-ranging discussion on money matters. Wording of the item on the agenda did not worry him because "once you start to speak you can say almost anything you like."

Earlier in the day he had warned Mr. Trudeau that urgent fiscal problems of the provinces could not be ignored while government leaders discussed constitutional change.

Ontario will have to cut its provincial programs in such fields as education or increase taxes if it does not get "a more reasonable division of resources," he said.

"If that happens you will change the face of the nation far more than you ever will by changes in the constitution."

The Ontario premier has been pressing for a larger share of "growth taxes"—personal and corporate income taxes—since a five-year projection showed that the province's expenditures would grow by 75 per cent but revenues only 40 per cent between 1969 and 1973.

West Attacks Fiscal Policies

OTTAWA (CP) — The western provinces Monday cold-shouldered Prime Minister Trudeau's proposed official languages bill and launched a heated attack on Ottawa's fiscal policies.

Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia lined up behind Premier Walter Weir of Manitoba during the opening session of the constitutional conference when he blasted Ottawa for its "invasion" of provincial fields of taxation.

Mr. Weir asked for and got a revision of the agenda giving discussion of current fiscal arrangements with the provinces priority over linguistic rights.

The west's deep distrust of Quebec's demands on Confederation and its suspicion of the intent and possible consequences of the language bill came to the surface in all four opening submissions.

The language bill, given first reading in the Commons last October, provides for establishment of bilingual districts in areas where there is a linguistic minority, French- or English-speaking, of at least 10 per cent.

Within these districts federal government services and provincial courts would conduct their business in either language.

Premier Weir led off for the west with a request that Ottawa submit the bill to the Supreme Court of Canada for a ruling on its constitutionality. The three other Western provinces supported his position.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett of B.C. told the conference the sparsity of French-speaking persons in many parts of the country "makes it inappropriate for a constitution to require equality of language rights in every corner of the nation."

Premier Harry Strom, Alberta's newly-elected Social Credit leader, said alienation of minorities should be resolved primarily by the provincial governments.

Deputy Premier D. G. Steuart of Saskatchewan, filling in for ailing Premier Ross Thatcher, lashed out at the attention Quebec's demands on Confederation are getting from Ottawa.

"It would be folly . . . to assume that Quebec's problems are the only ones, or even the most important ones, to be dealt with at this conference," said Mr. Steuart.

Robarts Denounces Medicare

ing powers between the federal and provincial governments.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia said the real trouble is caused by a clause in the British North America Act which stipulates that the federal government can raise revenue "by any mode or means." This means Ottawa can move into any tax field now occupied by the provinces.

Premier Walter Weir of Manitoba said he is more concerned about the immediate situation, but could make proposals for constitutional reform in the fiscal field at some time in the future.

He asked Ottawa to freeze all of its participation in shared-cost programs now, and consult the provinces on changes in taxes, new programs, or withdrawals from existing programs.

Mr. Trudeau said both the Bennett and Weir suggestions were worth discussing by the conference.

Mr. Robarts said Ontario wants some ground rules written about participation in shared-cost programs. Ontario did not like being forced into such programs and "we want the fiscal equivalent."

He intervened in the discussion on tax revenues when Mr. Weir said he would not repeat Manitoba's objections to the medical care insurance plan because it "is over and done with—it would be beating our heads against a stone wall."

"We don't feel that way," the Ontario premier said. "We still object to medicare and will continue to do so.

"I serve formal notice now that we want the fiscal equivalent." He interrupted an interjection by Mr. Trudeau to say:

"We want some ground rules, Mr. Prime Minister. We can show where federal withdrawal from some shared-cost programs cost us $225,000,000.

"This is our objection to shared-cost programs. We object strenuously to use of the federal spending power to alter the constitution. Medicare is a glowing example of that."

Mr. Robarts lifted his head towards the television cameras and said he was not speaking to the conference but to the people of Ontario.

"You," he said to Ontario people, "are the ones who will put up the $225,000,000 the federal government will extract."

Then he told the federal government that "if we don't succumb to your blandishments or yield to your pressures, the Ontario taxpayer will be getting nothing from these taxes they pay."

Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand of Quebec strongly backed up the stand of the Ontario premier, warning that lack of federal responsibility in tax-sharing and in making intrusions into provincial fields such as medical care insurance "is leading directly to the ruin of the federal system."

Not only had the federal government withdrawn from arrangements such as help to build technical and vocational schools, but it pressed the provinces to launch such new universal programs as medical care insurance.

"We just don't have the means though we may ardently wish to do so."

This was a provincial field of jurisdiction and, to finance its intrusion into this field, the federal government without consultation slapped on a two-per-cent social development tax that further restricted the province's access to tax revenues.

Quebec taxpayers would be paying $120,000,000 without receiving any benefit.

"Are you not aware that we are thereby destroying and sapping the confidence we would like to have in the federal system."

Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland urged the other premiers not to cut themselves off from Ottawa. He said Quebec and the four Atlantic provinces need Ottawa's financial help, and it can only be had as long as the federal government has power to tax all of Canada for the benefit of the poorer provinces.

"Is the federal government to be charged only with the normal responsibilities of government, such as defence, transportation and foreign affairs, or is it to help shape, mould, guide the general superintendence of Canada as Canada?" he asked.

Mr. Trudeau said the debate had led to the point where the federal government needed to know the rules or guidelines for the exercise of federal spending power.

Why was it all right for the federal government, with provincial agreement, to exercise it in rural development, for example, but not in the field of medical care?

SEED TALK

BIRDSFOOT TREFOIL
The Poor - Or Low - Land Alfalfa

When you start to list the benefits of Trefoil as a forage crop it reads like a sure-fire stock promotion: Trefoil is permanent; it produces the finest quality of hay; never gets woody or over-ripe; grows on low land; grows on light or poor land; never causes bloat; gets thicker every year by self re-seeding; withstands close grazing; is more winter - hardy and drought resistant than Alfalfa; is actually inexpensive to sow.

The disadvantages are few and are easily overcome through good management practices. Slow-establishing, Trefoil takes almost an extra season to reach peak production and the oat companion crop should be cut and removed at the dough stage to allow the seedlings every chance to establish. Trefoil is not as productive as alfalfa although it compares favorably in yield with red clover.

Most important of all is the fact that Trefoil is a permanent legume adapted to practically all off-type soils where alfalfa does not succeed.

Bilingualism Secondary

Quebecers Want to Get Society in Their Image

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand said Monday French-speaking Quebecers want "to build a society in their image" out of Quebec province more than they want coast-to-coast bilingualism.

The new Quebec premier, describing himself as "optimistic, perseverant and tenacious" in his debut at the constitutional conference, expressed theories of Quebec nationalism opposed by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Mr. Bertrand said he has not come to Ottawa "to water down" the constitutional policy of the late Premier Daniel Johnson, champion of the two-nations thesis rejected by Mr. Trudeau.

Premier Bertrand said:

"Men may come and go, but the reality of Quebec endures."

His portrait of "the reality of Quebec," unlike Mr. Trudeau's, is that "we would . . . be merely scratching the surface if we were to equate Canada's constitutional problem with a question of personal or linguistic rights."

Snubbed here was Prime Minister Trudeau's priority project for English-French cultural equality, a Canadian charter of human rights that would entrench linguistic rights in the constitution.

Mr. Bertrand said:

"If there is a crisis in Canada, it is not because our country is made up of individuals who speak different languages. It is because Canada is the home of two communities, two peoples, two nations between which relations need to be harmonized."

He said language is not the only difference between French and English Canadians, arguing that a French-speaking person "speaks differently because he is different," feels, reacts and approaches things differently.

"The important thing for French Canadians from Quebec is not to be allowed, as individuals, to speak their mother tongue in regions of the country where it has little chance of being understood.

"What they want is the opportunity to live together in French, to work in French, to build a society in their image and to be able to organize their community life so that it will reflect their culture."

What they want, in effect, is "a completely new constitution" granting Quebec "powers proportionate to the responsibilities" it has as mainstay of French Canada, a province where 80 per cent of French Canadians live.

Maritimes Support Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Constitutional changes that weaken the federal government will be opposed by the Atlantic provinces. The premiers of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland made that clear Monday.

Premier Smallwood said Newfoundland would veto, if it could, any proposal that would dilute the strength of Parliament or the central government. Ottawa now provides about 62 per cent of provincial revenues in Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island in equalization payments and other financial aid.

The central and western premiers have made it known they want a bigger share of taxing powers now held by Ottawa. The Atlantic leaders expressed fear that a tax-shorn federal government would have to cut provincial aid programs, hitting hardest at the Atlantic group.

Premier Robichaud of New Brunswick said regional inequity is mainly a matter of nature and accident. This inequity probably could not be entirely wiped out but the constitution should take note of it and envisage policies to deal with it.

"Policies and programs to achieve regional equity are only effective if there is a strong federal government to help with such objectives and their realization," he said.

New Hastings School System --Two Fewer Administrators

The school system in Hastings County is now operating with two fewer administrators than in 1968.

The figure was revealed yesterday by Hastings County board of education chairman James Clarke. Last year, he said, 11 superintendents, all in the $20,000 to $23,000 annual salary range, worked for school boards and the department of education in Hastings. At the present time nine are working with the county board.

Two superintendents, Paul Anderson, Napanee and R. A. Dunnsmore, whose inspectorates included parts of Lennox and Addington, Prince Edward and Northumberland counties as well as Hastings, will remain with the Ontario department of education. The county board can avail itself of their services on a request basis.

Colin McLeod, Kingston, another department of education employee, has accepted the position of director of education in Lennox and Addington.

At present, in addition to director of education Eric Runacres, eight superintendents and assistant superintendents are now working in Hastings county on a temporary basis.

"I intend to move slowly in making permanent postings to the top academic administrative posts in the county," Mr. Runacres said.

North Marysburg School

More Room Needed: Principal

PICTON (Staff) — The Prince Edward board of education was told last night that additions would have to be made to one of the existing schools.

David Lockwood, principal of North Marysburg Public School, said that he has eight grades in seven rooms making conditions overcrowded.

"Under these conditions," he said, "teachers and students are performing at substandard levels."

He said there isn't enough visual presentation, making it difficult for the child who is struggling.

Mr. Lockwood proposed to the board that they add three more classrooms to the existing facilities at North Marysburg.

According to Mr. Lockwood, if this were done it would alleviate the present problem of overcrowding, make room for a kindergarten in school and allow him to help children who are emotionally disturbed.

He said that with this addition students living on the Glenora Road would be able to attend North Marysburg instead of being bussed several miles to the west as they are now.

The board asked John McNeil, director of education, to look into the problem and report back to the board.

Drivers to Make Decision

PICTON (Staff) — The Prince Edward board of education decided last night that it would be left up to the discretion of bus drivers whether or not weather conditions were bad enough for buses not to run.

Board members felt, since weather conditions were never the same all over the county, the drivers would have the best chance to know what the road conditions were like in their area.

A motion was passed requiring bus drivers to inform the director of education, John McNeil if their bus would not be running. He would in turn tabulate and then inform the people concerned.

The board decided to buy a panel truck for use by the maintenance staff. Of the three tenders, one from Poblin Motors, Picton, was accepted at a price of $2,621.

A design for the official seal of the new board of education was chosen from submissions by elementary students from the county.

Members chose a design submitted by Colin Brown, a grade seven student at Pinecrest Elementary School.

This will be the board's official stamp and will appear on all business forms.

Mothers Place at Home Principal Tells Association

A case against mothers with small children working outside the home was made at the annual meeting o,f the Belleville branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association.

Guest speaker D. W. Balmer, principal of the Duke of York School in Toronto, told his listeners that children need loving parents to be with them from birth until they are self-sufficient adults.

"Children mature themselves by pushing against limits set by loving parents", he said. "They must have opportunities to push and need limitations set for them.

"Children need parents who are at home - - - and in today's society one third of mothers work".

He suggested that the need of the mother in the home was made more important by the fact that due to the demands of business more and more fathers are away from home for longer and longer periods.

"Being a parent is a full time job," he said.

Mr. Balmer said that today's youngsters work harder in school than their parents ever did, they think deeper, love more, express their feelings more and look better than today's adults did at their age.

But problems have been created because childhood has been lengthened. They can't vote until they are 21, can't quit school and go to work until they are 16, and yet physically they become adults at 12 or 13, or up to two years younger than today's adults did.

The speaker said the problems of high school drop-outs begin long before the students enter high school. Parents must be helped to be able to help their children handle their feelings and the children need re-assurance, not reprimands, when they feel badly.

The most important thing parents or other adults should do in dealing with young people was first to realize that all too often the adults have a fixed concept of the child.

"This is a dehumanizing factor. Each young person must be seen for what he is — an unique individual."

Also Mr. Balmer said that adults should not be critical of young people.

"They must be accepted with their strengths, rather than their faults looked for. They must be helped to have confidence and security — then change can be brought about, and only then.

Mr. Balmer's remarks were highlighted by illustrations from the lives of pupils and teachers in his own school, which is located in an economically and culturally deprived area of Toronto.

In his school the traditional middle class oriented courses of studies have had to be scrapped and courses used that are meaningfully adapted to the life situations of the pupils.

The teaching staff, together with social workers, psychologists, volunteers and others, act as a team in meeting the needs of the pupils.

In addition to Mr. Balcer's talk, the annual meeting heard a message from branch president H.A. Messacar and from the various committee chairmen.

Officers were re-elected for another term.

They are: president, H. A. Messacar; vice - president, Linton D. Read; secretary, Mrs. Irene Raney and treasurer, Mrs. J. R. Reynolds.

Directors elected were as follows: F. Beeby, Mrs. Dorothy Blakely, Peter Clinkard, Dr. E. B. Conn, Rev. R. Crooks, Mrs. J. English, Mrs. H. J Fast, Mrs. J. Fletcher, Miss Ruth Gaw, M. M. Hackett, Mrs. W. Hurst, R. E. Henderson, Mrs. L. Jourard, Dr. C. R. Lenk, Mrs. J. A. Lomas, D. Lockyer, J. McLauchlan, Rev. J. MacGillivray, H. A. Messacar, Mrs. I. Raney, L. D. Read, Mrs. J. R. Council Meets As Committee

PICTON (Staff) — Closed sessions still continue to be a feature of Prince Edward County Council.

Karden George Foster said yesterday that meetings involving committee of the whole were not public. He declined to comment on what was to be discussed at the afternoon session.

The county council meeting was held one day early (Monday instead of Tuesday.

Car Represents Cash Now Going Up in Smoke

'Smoking Doesn't Make Sense' Students Point Out in Display

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
(Staff Reporter)

"Smoking doesn't make cents" the students at Sir Mackenzie Bowell School have decided.

To prove their point they have set up a display in the school's auditorium on the theme, and will hold open house Wednesday and Thursday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and from 7 to 9 in the evening.

The project was the inspiration of principal S. E. Palmateer, who put a committee of grade 7 and 8 pupils in charge of the details.

"We know, as a result of surveys, that smoking is becoming a serious problem among senior elementary school pupils," Mr. Palmateer said. "In this project we have taken an economic, rather than health, approach to the subject."

With the co-operation of 15 city merchants, the pupils have brought $8,000 worth of merchandise into the auditorium to illustrate their contention that smoking is expensive.

A mathematically-minded pupil designed a poster illustrating the cost of cigarettes over a 50 year period. He proved, for instance, that smoking at the rate of 20 cigarettes a day costs $9,120 for 50 years.

As part of their language and art classes other pupils prepared stories, poems, and cartoons to illustrate that "smoking doesn't make cents." The theme slogan was suggested by one of the pupils.

Other posters show the result of the survey conducted among Sir Mackenzie Bowell's 231 pupils, all attending grades 7 and 8 and all in the 12 to 14 age bracket. Of the 220 pupils answering the survey questions, 20 smoke one to two cigarettes a day, 12 smoke three to five, eight smoke six to 10 and one confessed to smoking 11 to 15 cigarettes a day.

A pupil - conducted survey of 203 pupils revealed that 37 now smoke, 124 had once smoked but stopped and 42 had never taken a puff.

In a teacher - conducted samplings of the reasons pupils smoke, 12 said they lit up because the rest of their gang did, seven said they tried smoking out of curiosity, four started on a dare and two smoke because their parents do.

For the next two days, junior and intermediate students from all city elementary schools will view the display. Albert College and Ontario School for the Deaf students, as well as the general public, are also invited to visit the project.

Comrade Says Canadian Tour 'A Useful Trial'

MOSCOW (Reuters) — A Russian sports writer has warned Soviet hockey players not to become too complacent following their recent successful tour of Canada, the official news agency Tass reported Monday.

"It would be wrong to believe that the utter defeats of Canadian ice hockey teams during the tour of the first national team of the U.S.S.R. predict a funeral ceremony in Stockholm," wrote Boris Korolev in the popular Soviet weekly Football-Hockey.

His reference was to the upcoming world hockey tournament in Sweden.

Korolev, Novisti press agency correspondent in Canada, emphasized that Canadian hockey officials regarded the Soviet tour as a useful trial for their national team, Tass said.

But, he wrote, the Russian players also gained a good lesson before the world tournament.

He quoted Russian ace Boris Maiorov as saying that Russian rookie players benfited from the tough play of the Canadian defencemen.

Korolev felt the tough defensive play was made worse by the referees, who let the Canadians break the rules in games against European teams, Tass reported.

"In this sense, Korolev says that Canadian referees are 'the most dangerous enemies of Canadian hockey,' " Tass said.

The agency said Korolev sharply criticized the hostile climate created by Canadian fans during games between Russia and Canada in Winnipeg.

"The spectators were partisan and refereeing was the worst during the whole tour of Canada," Tass quoted the correspondent as saying.

"This might have been ignored were it not for the fact that the 1970 world championship will be held in Canada, specifically in Winnipeg," Korolev wrote.

Hurray for the good old U.S.L.T.A.!

(That's United States Lawn Tennis Association, for those of you not in the racquet.)

Without any fanfare, the organization casually dropped the weekend bombshell that, henceforth, two categories of netters would be recognized under its jurisdiction, having the effect of permitting so-called amateurs to accept prize money.

In addition to "amateurs" — tennis players who receive no recompense other than expenses —the U.S.L.T.A. also will officially extend its privileges to "players" — who will be allowed to compete for tournament prize money.

"Officially" is the key word here. Anybody who knows a tennis ball from a head of lettuce can tell you that amateurs have accepted "unofficial" booty since caveman Og slipped caveman Ik a Brontosaurus steak for helping him win the Neanderthal neighborhood wife-rolling contest.

"The entire purpose of this move was to get rid of sham amateurism" commented U.S.L.T.A. president Alastair B. Martin on the new ruling.

"In the past, amateurs have been forced to accept payments — usually under the table — or give up the game." Amen. Alastair — are you listening, Bunny Ahearne?

It's about time we all sat down and took a good look at the myth we have created for ourselves that truly amateur athletes — by virtue of practising some masochistic form of financial celibacy — are the most noble of all sporting men and women.

Everyone's got to eat — even amateurs!

So why do we find ourselves confronted with situations like these:

Top-flight U.S. golfing "Amateur" Charlie Coe finishes second in the prestigious Masters tourney a few years back; Charlie takes home a silver plate for his troubles to preserve his "status" while the third-place finisher pockets the twelve-grand runner-up purse.

Some ship-disturbing yokel starts foaming at the pen because Nancy Greene's hometown jeweller bestows a watch for her Olympic and World Ski cup wins;

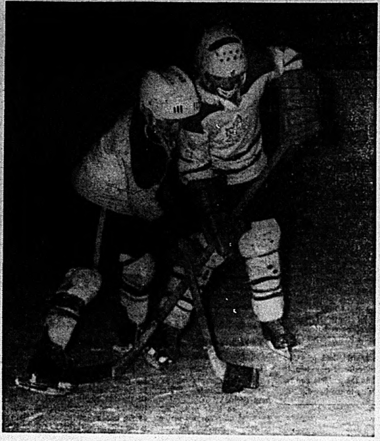
Canada's peach-fuzz platoon — the National Hockey Team — salvage their amateurism and a perfect eight-for-eight record (all defeats) against a touring Russian crew that is about as close to the definition of amateurism as John Ferguson is to sainthood;

Not to mention the threats of top American track and field performers to vault their pasttime into a professional status, and even the furor caused in curling's usually staid circles by Ron Northcott's suspension for actually accepting prizes for being the best curler in the world.

Shame on you Ron. Better you should have eight mortgages on your home to carry Canada's colors all over the globe than accept a tea kettle with no strings attached.

For most of us, "amateurism" these days means "second-rate." while "professionalism" implies "the best there is."

So until further notice, the score is tennis — 1, other sports — "love."



Crossing Paths

Centre Roger Suddard and defenceman Robert Thompson reach an impasse during a practice of the Towers Food City Novices, Belleville's all-star representatives in that age category. Sporting a nifty 25 wins and two ties in 36 games played this season, the Food City youngsters are readying for zone playoff competition, which begins next week.

To Err Is Human... Except in Gardens

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leaf officials say they will try to replace goal judge Eddie Mepham because he apparently erred in ruling that a puck did not completely cross Oakland Seals' goal-line during a National Hockey League game here Saturday.

Toronto lost the game 4-1 and was trailing by this score in the third period when Mepham ruled against a shot by Toronto's Floyd Smith. Manager-Coach Punch Imlach said TV playbacks of the shot showed it was in.

The decision to replace Mepham was made Saturday night and Harold Ballard, executive vice-president of Maple Leaf Gardens, said "he is out" following a Sunday meeting with Imlach in Chicago.

NHL referee-in-chief Scotty Morrison, who attended the game, said he will discuss Ballard's decision with NHL president Clarence Campbell "and I'd say there's no chance he'll go for this."

But Mepham said in an interview:

"I never saw daylight between the line and the puck. It was partially over, but not completely. My view was not obstructed and I am still convinced I was right. It wouldn't have been honest to rule any other way.

CLARENCE CAMPBELL

In Montreal, Clarence Campbell, NHL president, said that Mephram's future remains up to the league, not the hockey club.

Campbell said that he knows of "no reason" why Mephram should not continue as a goal judge.

Goal judges are not paid. Mepham said the Leafs reward him with two tickets in the blues for each game and an honorarium of $75 after the season.

Esposito's Pace Could Produce 123-point Season

MONTREAL (CP) — It appears to be a question of when, rather than whether, centre Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins will break the 100-point season barrier.

Statistics released today by the National Hockey League show that Esposito piled up another nine points in four games last week to widen his margin atop the individual scoring race to 14 points.

At the same time, he equalled the total Chicago's Stan Mikita had last season when the black Hawks' centre won the scoring championship.

Esposito, with 23 games still to play, has 87 points, including a league-leading 53 assists. The record for points in one season is 97, shared by Mikita and team-mate Bobby Hull, and the mark for assists is 62, held by Mikita.

At his current pace and projecting it to the end of the season Esposito could finish with 123 points, including 79 assists.

Bobby Hull, who held the lead for most of the first half, has been bumped down to third place by Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings. Howe has 73 points, including 29 goals, while Hull has 71, 34 of which are goals.

However, both Esposito and Hull, who shared the lead in goals a week ago, were passed in that department by Detroit's Frank Mahovlich who scored five times, including the fourth game this season in which he had at least three goals. Mahovlich's splurge boosted his total to a league-leading 36 goals and equalled the second-highest total he has run up in his 12-season career.

Mikita slipped to fourth place with 69 points, four more than veteran Alex Delvecchio, centre for Howe and Mahovlich. Another centre, captain Jean Beliveau of Montreal Canadiens, is sixth with 64 points.

Right winger Ken Hodge of Boston and centre Red Berenson of St. Louis Blues are tied for seventh place with 60 points each. Little Yvan Cournoyer of Montreal, with 59 points, Norm Ullman of Toronto Maple Leafs and Canadiens' Bobby Rousseau, each with 55 points, round out the top 10.

While Jacques Plante and Glenn Hall continue to lead the Vezina Trophy race with a combined goals-against average of 2.09 a game, Detroit netminder Roy Edwards has slashed his personal average to 2.05 from 2.45. Edwards was beaten only twice in four games and recorded two shutouts last week to bring his total to three for the season.

Roster Like Nats' Program; Stars' Performance Also Similar

TORONTO (CP) Last fall, Minnesota North Stars training camp roster read like a program for the Canadian National Hockey team.

Coach Wren Blair had five members of Canada's 1968 Olympic team signed to professional contracts and held the rights to three others. Even in September, the experts picked Minnesota to finish near the top of the Western Division of the National Hockey League.

But five months and 54 games later, the North Stars are languishing in fifth place, three points away from a playoff position and centre Danny O'Shea is the only Canadian National team graduate not playing in the minors.

Gary Dineen and Barry Mackenzie went to Memphis South Stars, Minnesota's farm club in the Central Hockey League. Defenceman Marshall Johnston, who spent two weeks with the parent club earlier this season, is playing with Cleveland Barons in the American Hockey League and goaltender Ken Broderick is with Phoenix in the Western League.

"I think the fact that Dineen, Broderick, Mackenzie and Johnston are playing in the minors indicates how far they slipped back playing with the national team," Blair said in a recent interview.

WREN BLAIR

Back at Helm

"I don't think they played 75 key games in five years with the club. That's as many key games as a guy plays in one season in the NHL. And in five years, he will play more than 400 crucial games.

"It's like a golfer who shoots 75s. If he plays every day with someone who shoots 70s, his game will improve. But if he repeatedly goes out with a duffer who plays in the 100s, his game falls apart."

Dineen was probably given the greatest advance billing for a future in the NHL. In August, 1967, Blair brought him to Minneapolis, wined and dined him and offered him $50,000 over two years to turn pro.

He turned it down to stay with the Nationals for the 1968 Winter Olympics.

"Dineen's working hard in Memphis and he has the longest way back of any of them," Blair said.

"If anything keeps him out of the NHL, it will be his lack of a quick start and checking.

"At training camp, I figured Dineen was 35 per cent away from playing in the NHL. He's improved maybe 20 per cent, but whether he can come the rest of the way is another story."

Dineen and O'Shea posed a problem for Blair even before they stepped on to the ice at training camp in Haliburton, Ont.

Published reports said O'Shea had signed a two-year contract for $75,000 and the original $50,000 offer to Dineen now had grown to $100,000.

"I had guys coming up to me and saying: 'If O'Shea and Dineen can get that much, why can't I have X number of dollars this season,' " Blair said.

"When they came into my office, I told them I'd show them O'Shea's or Dineen's contract. But if I showed it to them, they would have to accept the terms. No one took me up on it."

O'Shea is playing well for the North Stars on a line with Danny Grant and Claude Larose. In 52 games, he has 12 goals and 21 assists and Blair says he's interested in becoming a better hockey player.

"As a centre, Danny must improve his playmaking and he needs to forecheck more," he said.

"But he's learning to control the puck better. Before, he used to beat the puck to death at centre ice, then leave it behind him when he skated into the offensive zone.' '

Blair, who coached Whitby Dunlops to the world amateur hockey championship in 1958, believes the present national team program has only proved we can't do much worse.

"But I don't feel the NHL should play the Russians unless they turn pro," he said.

"Right now, Canada is using fifth-level players because we live in a democracy and a youngster has the right to make money in hockey if he has the talent.

BARRY MACKENZIE

Former 'Nat' Demot d

"When the Russians play in the world championships, they use first-level players, in effect professionals. Canada should be allowed to play under the same conditions."

Fines Pad Kitty

No suspensions were imposed with the fines.

The $300 assessment against Hicke combines the automatic fines of $100 for the match penalty he was given, plus the $200 automatic levy for engaging in a stick-swinging duel.

Rolfe also paid $300 for the same offences, but was billed the additional $200 for being the "instigator and aggressor."

The NHL president announced the fines following a week-long investigation of the incident.

The incident occurred with approximately five minutes remaining in the game which Los Angeles won 8-5.

Police vs. Firemen

STAFF — The Belleville Police and Fire Departments will take the afternoon of Sunday, February 16 off, to help save a hockey team.

The policemen and firemen will play an exhibition game with the proceeds going to the Belleville Morrisons Junior "B" hockey club, who are in the red after a poor season, both at the gate and on the ice.

The benefit game which starts at 2 p.m., will be spiced by the antics of local clowns, and precedes the Morrisons' 3:15 p.m. encounter with the third place Kingston Frontenacs.

A highlight of the afternoon will be the annual trophy presentations to the outstanding players on the 1968-69 Belleville Morrisons' Junior "B" hockey team.

The three awards are: The Bucky Ethier Trophy, donated by the Gerald Ethier family to the Rookie of the Year, the Art Culloden, Bill Foster Memorial Trophy donated by Bobby Hull to the team's Most Valuable Player, and the Bill Cook Memorial Award, which will be presented by Mrs. Keith Cook to the player best combining sportsmanship and ability.

Fitness Experts At YMCA Saturday

STAFF — The guessing will be over on February 15 for 25 Belleville men and women who will find out just how physically fit they really are.

The 25 will take part in the Belleville Family YMCA's Fitness Testing Clinic, and will be tested by a team from Toronto Central YMCA under the direction of Physical Director Mr. Floyd Johnson.

The clinic will include a quick medical examination, and an evaluation of general strength, flexibility, endurance, balance, agility and circulatory and respiratory function at rest and under stress of exercise.

Such impressively named mechanical devices as fat calipers and back dynamometers will be employed in the tests by the YMCA physical fitness experts.

The tests will be followed by a personal consultation with the clinic director, and a luncheon meeting at which Mr. Johnson will give an overall evaluation and make recommendations for future activity.

The Clinic will measure your physical fitness level and show you what type of exercises are needed to improve your physical condition, all for a fee of $10.

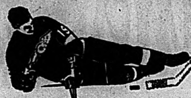
Gordie Howe's HOCKEY



If a player is down on the ice he isn't necessarily out of the play. He can sometimes smother the puck but must remember not to touch it with his hands and end up with a penalty.

As you can see from the illustration, the player isn't smothering the puck but his body is a barrier the attacker can't lift the puck over.

Hawks Need Big Win

STAFF — This year's 39 game OHA Senior "A" schedule was thrown into the melting pot, and for the Belleville Mo-Hawks it has all boiled down to the last three games of the season.

The Mo-Hawks trail the Kingston Aces by two points in the battle for the sixth and last playoff spot in the eight team league, and tonight Belleville travels to Kingston for the first game of a crucial home-and-away series with the Aces.

The series resumes with a 9 o'clock game Friday night at the Belleville Arena, but the big game for the Mo-Hawks has got to be tonight's encounter in the Limestone City.

BCI Stages Annual Midget Hoop Tournament

STAFF — The host Belleville Collegians will be among the favorites Saturday when BCI plays host to its fourth annual Midget Basketball Tournament.

BCI, atop the seven team Bay of Quinte league with a record of five wins and two defeats, will face strong opposition from the undefeated Orillia squad and 14 other teams in the double consolation tournament, which starts at 8 a.m.

There are five entries from Belleville: BCI, Moira, Quinte, Nicholson Catholic College and defending champion Centennial, who have won four games and lost five so far this year in Bay of Quinte league play.

Other entries include Donovan Collegiate and O'Neill Collegiate, both of Oshawa, Kenner Collegiate of Peterborough, Lakefield, Norwood, Anderson Collegiate of Whitby, Cobourg East and Cobourg West, Orillia, Trenton and Centre Hastings High School of Madoc.

There will be two consolation tournaments, one in the Boys' gym and one in the Girls' gym, with the championship winners from each gym playing off for the grand championship and the Rawson Bus Lines trophy in the seven p.m. final. The host school will also present individual trophies to the members of the championship team.

The consolation final will work on the same basis pitting the consolation winners in each gym in the consolation championship at 7 p.m.

Old-Timers Play Exhibition for Frankford Arena

The Frankford Arena fund will be the winner Thursday, February 13, when the Frankford Hawks of the Centre Hastings Hockey League take on the Frankford Old-Timers in a 9:15 p.m. game at the Stirling Arena.

Proceeds from the game will go towards defraying the cost of Frankford's new artificial ice arena, which is currently under construction.

Canada Needs Planning But Who Should Do It?

TORONTO (CP) — Most speakers at Canada's first conference on urban transportation said Monday that the country needs unified planning for transport and urban growth.

But two questions remained—who leads the planning and who pays?

Transportation financing was to be the theme for today's addresses and discussions.

In a luncheon address Monday, the vice-president of General Motors of Canada Ltd., said transportation and land use planning must go "hand in hand."

F. W. Walker Jr. of London, Ont., also said user charges should cover the cost of transportation services "to the maximum extent possible."

In contrast, H. Edward King of Toronto, president of the Canadian Transit Association, said fares cannot support the cost of planning and technological change necessary to re-design and build urban transportation systems.

Fugitives Are Found Inside Pen

KINGSTON (CP) — Two prisoners who hid for two days inside Kingston pentientiary were found Monday crouched amid dirt and rock in a crawl space beneath the prison.

A prison official said Gordon Stover, 26, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and Thomas Brydges, 25, of St. Catharines, probably climbed into the crawl space through an opening in the floor in one of the shops near the boiler room where they worked.

The prisoners were found at a spot close to the main gate of the maximum security compound.

Drapeau Hammers at Tax Theme

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean Drapeau, reconsidering his role as mayor of Montreal as a result of financial austerity that has hit the city, ended his third scheduled special television address Monday night—and left his future still in doubt.

Mr. Drapeau began the appearances in French and English last Thursday to explain a statement made Jan. 29 that he may not remain as mayor because austerity is stifling his hopes for Montreal.

His general theme in speeches Thursday and Friday, an assault on federal fiscal policies, was continued Monday.

Throughout, Mr. Drapeau has insisted that if there is any concrete hope of a change in federal fiscal policy toward municipalities, he might remain.

The 5-2year-old mayor began what he called a "period of reflection" Jan. 29 when the city announced austerity had forced closure this year of Man and His World.

He said he wanted to explain to the public on television why he is reconsidering his role as mayor, a post he has held since 1962.

The announced closure of Man and His World was not "the reason" for his reflection but "the signal."

In his television talks he was sharply critical of federal "encroachments" on the financial resources of cities, and Monday he reiterated that municipalities should retain "traditional" sources of revenue.

The "traditional" revenues, he said, are more important than "help" from the federal and provincial governments.

Mr. Drapeau said the city of Montreal, for example, is caught in a tax jungle. Residents paid taxes to the city, which in turn used some of these funds to pay federal and provincial sales taxes.

"Out of the taxes we collected" in the last eight years, the city had paid a federal sales tax of $9,500,000 and a provincial sales tax of $5,700,000.

Taxes of Montreal's 15-mile subway system finished in 1967 had cost $13,400,000, boosting the project's total cost to $85,000,000.

Unless the Man and His World deficit of more than $5,000,000 is written off by Ottawa or Quebec City, the city of Montreal's only alternative of continuing the exhibition is by dipping into current revenues.

But that would mean another increase in taxes. The city raised property taxes 23 per cent in December and Mr. Drapeau said it cannot afford another increase.

Tweed

TWEED — Mr. and Mrs. Alfred E. Northey, of Northbrook who have recently sold their business in that hamlet, have purchased the home formerly owned by the late Mr. and Mrs. Sandy Drysdale. The Northey store has been sold to Mr. and Mrs. Butson of Burlington and they are taking possession this week.

Mrs. Alma White of Plevna, received news of the death of her grandmother, Mrs. John Mundell, at Garrick, Saskatchewan. The deceased was 96 years of age.

Exploration for Mines Is Keener Than Ever

TORONTO (CP) — It's been nearly five years since a mining discovery has caused much widespread excitement in Canada. But despite the comparative quiet, exploration for new mines is keener than ever.

Spurred by world metal markets which are growing by as much as 10 per cent a year, prospectors staked an estimated 180,000 mining claims across Canada last year, an increase of more than 30 per cent from 1967.

Assorted sized companies—ranging from two- or three-man partnerships to industry giants such as International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd.—poured $70,000,000 into the search for new metal sources, the Mining Association of Canada estimates.

Projections of future spending swing widely because so many unknown factors are involved year to year, but some industry officials expect exploration spending to cost $100,000,000 or more annually by 1975.

Mining officials keep pointing out that exploration doesn't necessarily mean new mines in the offing.

After Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. announced in April, 1964, that it had discovered one of the world's major copper, zinc and silver orebodies near Timmins, Ont., the news touched off one in the wildest staking rushes in Canada's history.

This led to some of the most detailed and extensive exploration of land in Northern Ontario that the world has seen—but it produced no new mines.

Nevertheless, much of the recent hurry to stake mining claims results directly from indications of possible orebodies and the hope that they just might, despite the odds, mean a mine.

This is shown in northern Saskatchewan, where a government spokesman says almost the entire area covering 32,000,000 acres is solidly staked.

The number of claims staked in the province rose to 10,300 last year from 5,144 in 1967.

Back of this excitement was the announcement late in 1968 by Gulf Minerals Ltd. that sections of one diamond-drill core from its exploration work near Wollaston Lake has uranium showings five times better than established uranium mines at Elliot Lake, Ont. Prospectors also are interested in base-metal opportunities.

Uranium, and expectations that it will be a key world metal in the 1970s as demand grows for it to power nuclear power-generating stations, touched off a small rush in New Brunswick.

J. C. Smith, deputy minister in charge of mines, said more than 500 claims were filed in less than a week following a report that uranium traces had been discovered in the southern part of the province.

In northern New Brunswick, interest in potential base-metal prospects raised the province's total number of claims staked in 1968 to 5,693 from 5,350 the previous year.

The areas of hottest exploration, however, remain in British Columbia, the Northwest Territories and Ontario.

In B.C., prospectors filed 60,000 claims, most of them in the northern section of Vancouver Island, the interior B.C. highland valley and near Smithers in central B.C.

In all areas, the big search is for copper and molybdenum.

Most of the activity in the Northwest Territories, where 44,489 claims were staked last year compared with 28,622 in 1967, centres on the Coppermine and Artillery Lake areas.

Extensive exploration in the Coppermine area already has outlined copper showings that would be a mine if transportation to markets were less of a problem.

Sixty miles east of the old gold-mining town of Red Lake in northwestern Ontario, a fresh rush for land has developed from reports by Selco Exploration Co. Ltd. that exploratory drilling had shown copper, zinc and silver mineralization in the rocks.

Selco, the Canadian exploration arm of Selection Trust Ltd. of London, staked 800 claims in the area and hundreds of others were snapped up quickly.

Opening of a large block of land north of Elliot Lake for staking resulted in a large increase in the number of claims in the Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., mining district as prospectors checked for uranium showings. The number of claims filed there rose to 10,700 from 5,392 in 1967.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Stubborn Father Refuses To Have Growth Examined

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: What do you do about a wonderful but procrastinating daddy who has a growth on his arm and absolutely refuses to see a doctor? It has grown in size and there are red and purple discolorations around it.

No matter how much nagging Mom and I do, he just won't have it attended to. Perhaps if he sees this in your column, he may realize how we are both so worried about him and he'll do smething about it. I hope it works. — Miss A.

Comment :It's worth a try. I've knon stubborn men (and women) who gave in, at last, to the proddings of good sense. Why doesn't your dad go to the doctor? I've found that some don't go simply because they "can't take the time" from business. Others do not want to spend the money. And still others are secretly afraid of the doctor's verdict.

Of course, I can't tell what is wrong with your dad. It may only be a harmless growth that he can get around to having emoved some day — and nothing will be lost but time.

But there's also the possibility it may be cancerous. If so, then every day that passes may be a step toward doomsday.

And how ironic it would be to find, at last, that one has an incurable condition which might have been 90 to 95 per cent curable in its early stages — which is the usual story with skin cancer.

I suggest your dad stop worrying you and your mother needlessly. Let us hope he will pick up the phone and make an appointment with his doctor.

Here's a letter from a 78-year-old grandmother in reference to the father, I mentioned recently, who spanks his baby for crying:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I read about this man with horror. What does a 6-month-old baby know about crying or minding? This man is a mean, dumb creature and his child will grow up a nervous wreck. Any person with an ounce of brains must know that such a young baby must cry once in a while. Try hitting yourself and see how it feels! If I were your wife I'd run off with the baby and leave you flat. — Mrs. W.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Two surgeons have advised that my husband have a colostomy at once. He is 74. We are both upset. What shall he do? — Mrs. T.

Comment: I don't know the actual reason for it, but a common one is obstruction in the bowel due to a growth. Better have it done. You will become more upset the longer you wait.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Why do doctors ignore the glaringly obvious fact that the difference between cigarettes, cigars or pipe is paper? Firemen have been overcome from inhalation of paper, wood and cloth fumes with no nicotine present. Yes?

Comment: Is paper the only difference? The New Yorker magazine gently spoofed me last year when I gave an equivocal answer to a similar question. Is paper the difference? My answer is still "Yes — and No."

• • •

For Mr. H. (Pittsburgh): The term "frozen shoulder" is usually applied in cases of bursitis where excruciating pain has prevented shoulder movement for weeks. Such loss of movement causes the stiff, frozen joint. This is why we advise bursitis patients to "keep climbing up the wall" with the affected arm (in spite of pain) to prevent such a complication.

Transporters Enjoy Boom in North

EDMONTON (CP) — Transport companies, using means as old as man and as new as the jet age, are enjoying a boom in Canada's North, largely as a result of Arctic oil exploration.

The four tons of oil it takes to heat a house this winter in the Arctic coast town of Inuvik, 1,500 miles northwest of Edmonton, were barged through Great Slave Lake and down the Mackenzie River. The tossed salad its inhabitants had for dinner came by air.

Crown-owned Northern Transportation Co. Ltd. is spending $12,000,000 this winter for three new tugs and 24 new barges. They will bring its fleet to 25 tugs, 134 barges and two deep-sea vessels. About 40 per cent of their domestic freight consists of bulk products.

President William Gilchrist says Northern expects to haul 265,000 tons down the Mackenzie this year, most of it from the Great Slave Lake railhead of Hay River, 700 miles north of Edmonton. Last year, 206,000 tons of freight made the journey.

Meanwhile, Pacific Western Airlines anticipates its mainline northbound freight, exclusive of charters, will total more than 12,000,000 pounds this year. In 1958, PWA's Arctic haul was 754,735 pounds.

OWA and other air carriers say their shipping costs, while superficially higher than those of surface transport, are competitive when hidden factors are considered.

W. C. Herbert, PWA public relations officer, says warehousing for material not to be used for months is expensive to build and maintain. Insurance and tieup of capital added to the costs of surface transport.

Mr. Herbert says river transport will last until fuel and other bulk commodities can be carried by air at comparable cost, which he considers "foreseeable." Meanwhile, the airlines are shipping everything from radishes to oil derricks.

Bruce Hunter, general manager of Northern Transportation, says there is plenty of room in the Arctic for everyone.

"The way things are developing up there, they're shipping it all ways—truck, barge and air."

A problem common to all carriers is the dry run south. At the present exploratory stage of the oil industry, the incoming plane, barge or truck has to return empty.

Conservative Wins Byelection In Social Credit Stronghold

EDMONTON (CP) — Social Credit complacency—at least that's what the party president called it—was jolted Monday night when a Progressive Conservative swept to victory in an Alberta byelection to fill a vacancy created by the retirement of premier E. C. Manning.

Bill Yurko, 43, took the lead in Strathcona East after one-quarter of the polls had reported and eventually tallied 3,785 votes to Social Crediter William Johnson's 3,315.

Liberal candidate Percy Marshall got 774 and Garry Allen of the New Democratic Party 381.

Because the riding had been held by Mr. Manning since it was created in 1959, the Tory victory was described by Mr. Yurko as "a hole" in the Social Credit dike of Alberta politics, a dike that has been standing for more than 33 years.

Mr. Yurko's victory gave the Conservatives seven seats in the 65-seat provincial legislature. Social Credit has 55, there are two Liberals and an independent.

"Our people were sensing victory too fast," said Orvis Kennedy, president of the Alberta Social Credit League, commenting on the turnout of only about 8,000 of the 19,000 eligible voters.

Mr. Yurko said he expects to be seated in the legislature March 3 and will concentrate on urban affairs, transportation and schools. The spring session opens Thursday.

In Ottawa, where he is attending the federal-provincial constitutional conference, Premier Harry Strom said in an interview he does not regard the byelection as a major test of Social Credit popularity in Alberta.

"We are naturally a little disappointed, but in view of the very light vote, we don't feel it's any major reflection on the Social Credit party," Mr. Strom said.

The new Alberta premier said it was not a case of the people indicating dissatisfaction with his administration's policies. Government business would continue as usual.

Opposition Fails to Include Crown in Water Control on Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — An opposition move to have Crown agencies brought under the control of the federal Navigable Waters Act failed in the Commons Monday night.

Pointing to the effects of provincial hydro-electric projects on the Nelson River in Manitoba and the Peace River in British Columbia, MPs argued that Crown agencies should be made to conform to the standards set for Canadians in general.

But James A. Richardson, a Manitoban and a minister without portfolio in the Trudeau cabinet, replied that it was inappropriate to launch such a debate "on this little act."

The government's position was that this was a minor bill and it did not want to launch a "major constitutional issue" in the debate.

The bill amending the Navigable Waters Act was one of four to receive third reading in the Commons Monday but it ran into the heaviest seas.

Also passed were bills dealing with the marking of precious metals, establishing a freshwater fish marketing corporation, and amending the Aeronautics Act.

Debate on third reading of amendments to the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act was still under way as the House rose.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis promised to bring in a further bill amending the act to raise the maximum fishermen may borrow under its provisions to $25,000 from $10,000.

A bill extending the Export and Import Permits Act for another five years received second reading after Conservative Douglas Harkness (Calgary Centre) urged that it be used more often to protect Canadian agriculture.

On the Navigable Waters Act, a New Democrat move to have the bill sent back to committee was beaten down 80 to 57 in a roll-call vote.

The Liberals voted alone against New Democrats, Conservatives and Creditistes.

The bill finally won third reading on division after the opposition tried in vain to have Mr. Richardson agree that it should be amended to include Crown agencies.

Most hydro-electric projects in Canada are the work of provincial agencies.

Ran Harding (NDP — Kootenay West) said there have been "sad experiences" in B.C. because no agency can insist on a proper job being done.

Conservative House Leader Gerald W. Baldwin (Peace River) said conservation authorities are worried about the effect the Peace River dam will have on fish and game.

The dam already had resulted in an inadequate flow on other rivers.

David Orlikow (NDP — Winnipeg North) said there are reports the flow of water to the port of Churchill may be cut by as much as 75 per cent as a result of the Nelson River dam.

He and Stanley Knowles (NDP — Winnipeg North Centre) referred as well to the case of 600 Indians and Metis who will be forced to move elsewhere because of the planned diversion of the Churchill River flow into the Nelson. Their best hunting land would wind up beneath 35 feet of water.

Ban on Strikes Urged In Essential Services

TORONTO (CP) — Strikes should be prohibited in private industry as well as public services if the industry has a virtual monopoly on an essential service, Leonard Reilly (PC—Toronto Eglinton) said in the legislature Monday.

The Progressive Conservative whip said "no group should have the right to deprive people of the necessities of life."

He referred to a recent strike by oil truck drivers in New York city which deprived 250,000 homes of fuel delivery.

"Regardless of the circumstances and the reasons behind the strike, innocent people were involved in what many erroneously consider to be a private war."

Mr. Reilly's remarks, which began during Friday's session, came in response to controversial proposals made in a report to the legislature last fall by the late Ivan Rand, former justice of the Supreme Court of Canada.

He criticized the report's proposed establishment of an industrial tribunal to arbitrate all industrial disputes with no right of appeal.

"If we are to have a tribunal, the right of appeal must be included and the tribunal's powers must be very carefully defined by the legislature."

He expressed disappointment that the Rand report made no clear proposal to guarantee the rights of a worker to remain out of a union, particularly where conscience forbids giving financial support to a certain union.

In the legislature business Monday:

—Dr. Morton Shulman (NDP—Toronto High Park) proposed an amendment to the Department of Correctional Services Act which would allow prisoners to "receive visits from husbands or wives . . . for the purpose of continuing or resuming their marital relations." Dr. Shulman said such a bill would aid rehabilitation of prisoners and reduce the incidence of homosexuality in the province's reform institutions.

— Harold MacKenzie (L—Ottawa Centre) called for the Ontario Water Resources Commission to eliminate pollution on the Ottawa and Rideau Rivers or give a detailed account of why it can not. He said the pollution could affect the mental health of Ottawa-area residents should beaches become unusable. He said the beaches are a necessary recreation "and it's easy to believe the incidence of mental instability will increase among our adult people without the therapy this type of recreation affords."

Powers to Subpoena Witnesses Questioned

TORONTO (CP) — Fred Cass, Speaker of the Ontario legislature, said Monday he will look into the powers held by standing house committes to compel witnesses to appear before them.

Mr. Cass was replying to Donald Jackson (NDP—Timiskaming), a member of the committee on natural resources and tourism, and George Ben (L—Humber), member of the committee on health, who both said problems had arisen within their committees about their power to call witnesses.

The health committee voted last week to subpoena witnesses from the Ontario Hospital at Brockville after certain hospital staff members turned down invitations from the committee to clarify charges about the hospital laid by Morton Shulman (NDP—High Park).

Mr. Ben told the legislature some committee members are wondering whether they actually have the power to subpoena witnesses, what penalties they can impose for failure to appear and whether they offer witnesses the protection of the Canada Evidence Act.

Strictly Personal

Monk Perceptive Observer

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

By one of those coincidences that always, when they happen, give us a frisson of mortality, I was in the midst of reading his latest book when news arrived of the death of Thomas Merton in a literally shocking accident.

He had long been one of my favorites, this Trappist monk, born in France of an English father and an American mother, who took himeslf to a monastery in Kentucky, where from his vantage of seclusion he became one of the most perceptive observers and objective commentators on the malaise of our time.

The book I happened to be reading is "Zen and the Birds of Appetite," which is Merton's unique dialogue between our Judeo-Christian tradition and the religious experience of the East, especially the dazzling precepts and tremulous insights of Zen Buddhism.

Zen has become quite fashionable in the West today, particularly in upper-class American society, where it has gained a certain intellectual cachet, like sporting Cardin clothes or toting Guicci luggage. But, as Don Marquis wryly observed many years ago "An idea isn't responsible for who believes in it."

One of the most splendid qualities of Merton was his intellectual and emotional "openness." A devout Catholic and a deep respecter of the "rationalism" of Thomas Aquinas, he was also catholic in the lower-case sense of the word — he found much of value in Zen, in the Protestant mystics, in the Hebrew hasidim, in Freud and even in Marx.

He knew how to draw out of these contrasting and conflicting philosophies what was best and most useable: unlike most advocates of a cause, he was not interested in what was wrong with other causes, but in what was right with them. He knew that there are more questions than there are answers, and that, in his own words, "a man is known better by his questions than by his answers."

Father Merton's life was tragically cut short at the age of 53, while on a trip to the East to visit with the Dai Lama. He was continually inquiring, probing, reflecting, dissatisfied with traditional answers merely because they were traditional, and seeking some newer synthesis of ideas and feelings to help mankind out of the morass of anomie into which modern civilization has fallen.

The best way to honor the memory of this fine man is to buy his book, "Conjectures of a Guilty Bystander," a culling from his notebooks of the last 10 years, to learn what questions we ourselves should be asking, of society, its institutions, and our own placid consciences.

Fewer Canadians Go to U.S.

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of Canadians emigrating to the United States dropped sharply in 1966 after six years of hovering at the 50,000-mark.

A written Commons return tabled Monday by Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin showed that the figure fell from 49,656 in 1965—close to the average for the five previous years — to 28,837 in 1966.

The drop of about 40 per cent was unexplained.

The figure rebounded to 38,854 in 1967. The figure was 1968 so far is unavailable.

The information was given in reply to questions by Lionel Beaudoin (Creditiste—Richmond).

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For February 12

Your birthday today: Social interests expand in the coming year. Almost everything that happens brings chances for new mostly favorable contacts. Impatience is the strongest temptation and the most confusing. Romantic interests flourish according to eligibility. Today's natives focus their attention on major issues, suffer great trioulations, and are either benevolent or very intolerant (no middle course seems available.) The mental expression is forthright.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Your self-restraint and safety-consciousness today will be a source of pride later. Nobody is willing to co-operate in timely cadence at the moment, so lengthen your own stride to stay in step. Travel tends to complications.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): If you can stay with routines, do so. Travel, advertising, dealings with authorities become confused. Keep your morale high.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Squabbling seems the normal order today. Since you are neither angel nor devil, state your views once, very simply, and stop there. Make peace this evening.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Exciting, possibly disturbing news comes from near — and far. Emotional ties bind abruptly. Just don't take on more than you can handle. A small party is good this evening.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Personal goals are strongly supported, particularly when they relate to people and materials located at considerable distances. Catch up on your correspondence, contract negotiations and leave the glad-handing to others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Material security is a primary consideration today. You may save yourself much inconvenience by doing a complete survey of what you have and how it is protected. Stay with standard methods rather than experiment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): The competitive pressure continues, is even a bit sharper in some key items. Put your very best features forward, and with your normal tact make your case.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Emotional pressures and the things are near the surface. Money should be very carefully checked as you go. Lending is not favored.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Dramatic features in the news distract you momentarily from your organized course. Neighborhood rumors are to be discounted. Your levelheadedness now can bring much satisfaction later.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Unscheduled visitors, delayed news of older people, and chronic problems come to your attention. Responsibilities may pile up. Ask for help: perhaps you should not atempt all you are asked to do.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Wait for the whole story before you react to informal presentations of facts. More people are involved than you think at first. There may be some new responsibility, concern for family matters.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Despite your rather sensible economy lately, there is the possibility that you will need additional resources. Do what you must do, as simply and directly as possible, then rest tonight.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Classic Character

Death of Karloff Removes Figure from Past

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The death last week of Boris Karloff removed another indelible figure of the movie's colorful past. There aren't many left.

Karloff became a classic character, thanks to his playing of the monster in Frankenstein, directed in 1931 with a fine baroque touch by James Whale. For the remaining 38 years of his professional lifetime—and he remained active almost until his death at 81 in London—he was identified with that role.

But unlike other actors who felt their careers overwhelmed by a single memorable role, Karloff bore no bitterness toward the monster.

"He was the best friend I ever had," Karloff once said.

"Certainly I was typed. But what is typing? It is a trademark, a means by which the public recognizes you. Actors work all their lives to achieve that."

Bela Lugosi, who became identified as Dracula at the same time and frequently co-starred in scare movies with Karloff, was less pleased with his fate. He claimed the vampire had blighted his career, and he died broke.

"Poor Bela," Karloff once reflected. "He had the same break I did, but he never learned his profession. Sad to say, Bela was not a very good actor."

Boris Karloff was. Born William Henry Pratt, he trained in repertory theatre in British Columbia and came up through the extra ranks in films. Even after his movie fame, he returned to the stage to play the kindly grandfather in On Borrowed Time. He played Indians in Unconquered and Tap Roots, but most of the time he was appearing in something like The Man They Could Not Hang or Abbott and Costello Meet Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

Through good pictures—Isle of the Dead, Bedlam—and bad—The Raven, The Ghost in the Invisible Bikini—Karloff retained his sense of proportion. Ten years ago, he was making a futuristic Frankenstein 1970 at Warner Brothers when the studio was grinding out a half-dozen Western series for television.

As he gazed around at the crowd of handsome gunslingers in the studio commissary one lunchtime, he commented: "I hope these cowboys are saving their money."

Most of the TV cowpoke stars soon fell into limbo, while Karloff's services remained in demand. When he was 72, he returned to England to live after 50 years in America, but he flew to Hollywood for work six to eight times a year.

"Imagine at my age," he said wonderingly, "still active in my profession and commuting 12,000 miles to work! I must be the luckiest man in the world."

A year ago, when he came here for Targets, he had trouble getting around because of an arthritic knee, but he was as bright and cheery as ever.

"I am one of that very small family of the human race who happens to thoroughly enjoy his work," he commented. "I have had an extraordinarily gratifying life."

Curling Rink Proposed

TWEED — Members of the Tweed Curling Club will be asked to vote on the advisability of erecting their own curling rink at the estimated cost of $75,000, members decided at a special meeting held in the Hungerford Township Hall, in Tweed Village.

Those attending represented about one-half of the actual membership. They heard Sanford Wilson present the lengthy report prepared by a fact-finding committee appointed last spring to study the feasibility of erecting a curling rink with four sheets of ice.

Mr. Wilson reported that members of this committee had visited curling clubs at Belleville, Picton, Pembroke, Cobden, and Winchester, to study building construction and discuss costs with the members of the clubs visited.

After a six-month study, the committee presented a set of plans for the members' consideration. The committee also presented an estimate cost of the completed building, which would be in the neighborhood of $75,000 The proposed annual operating costs which would include repayment of principal, interest, operating costs, which would be approximately $12,000 to $14,000 a year. This would be met by membership dues, which would be increased by about 20 per cent over the present annual dues of $40 for men and $20 for women. A joining fee of $100 was also proposed at this time. This could be paid over a five-year period of $25 a year for a total of $125.

Rental of the rink facilities would also bring added revenue. The fact-finding committee estimated that the joining fees and promised donations would amount to $25,000 and that an additional $50,000 would be borrowed from the bank.

Last season the Tweed Curling Club paid the Community Centre approximately $3,200 for rental of ice time and had ended the season with a surplus after all other costs had been met.

The members attending the meeting decided that a letter containing a complete outline of the proposed plans, along with a ballot, be sent to all members of the Club, along with a request that they study the information carefully, and then vote either for or against the construction of a separate curling club building immediately south-east of the present Community Centre.

Freeway Operation Prohibited

TWEED — Ontario's new legislation, governing the operation of motorized snow vehicles, which became effective last Nov. 1, has now been amended to permit the operation of these vehicles on all King's Highways, except freeways.

On those King's Highways, where operation of motorized snow vehicles was previously prohibited and is now allowed, they may not travel on the actual roadway — that part of the highway that is ordinarily used for vehicular traffic — but may travel on the shoulder or right-of-way, provided that they are operated as far away from the roadway as is practicable under the circumstances. Before entering or crossing one of these roadways, the vehicle must be brought to a complete stop, and before entering the roadway, right of way must be yielded to all oncoming traffic which constitutes a hazard. The crossing must be made at an angle of approximately 90 degrees.

Previously, motorized snow vehicles were not permitted to travel along or across any King's Highway other than those listed in specific schedules. On those highways listed in the schedules, the vehicles may still be operated on the roadway.

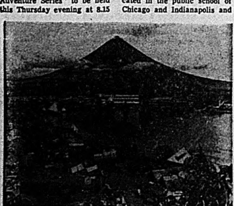
Freeways where operation of motorized snow vehicles is still prohibited are Ottawa Queensway; Queen Elizabeth Way; Highway 27, from the Queen Elizabeth Way to Highway 7, and Highways 400, 401, 402, 403, 405 and 406.

Operators of these vehicles must still obey the rules of the road and other requirements spelled out in the original legislation. For highway operation, the operator must be insured under a motor vehicle liability policy and the owner is required to produce evidence on request — it is not necessary to have a driver's licence, but the operator must be at least 16 — the vehicle must have at least one white or amber light on the front and one red light on the back at any time when lights are required.

On or off the highway, the vehicle must be registered and carry a licence plate on the front.

Philippine Islands Featured

The Philippine Islands, a tropical setting with an oriental atmosphere, a Spanish heritage, and a strong American influence will be next in the Kiwanis Club "Travel and Adventure Series" to be held this Thursday evening at 8.15 p.m. in Belleville Collegiate auditorium.



The narrator for this the 4th program will be Russ Potter who was born in Battle Creek, Michigan. He was educated in the public school of Chicago and Indianapolis and attended Indiana University as a scholarship student majoring in journalism and speech. While still in college he won recognition for his poetry, published in several national anthologies.

Following his studies at the Chicago Art Institute, he worked as a theatre manager, then went with NBC as a radio announcer and script writer. During World War II he produced and MC'd a network program emanating weekly from a Navy convalescent hospital.

His travel film career began in 1956 with "Inside Russia." He then produced the first comprehensive motion picture of India, titled "India, Land of the Spectacular" followed by "Belgium of the Masters", the color film saga of Europe's most opulent little country. Since then, he has several additional films on different parts of the world.

Lawyers Will Sum Up Plazà Rezoning Case Before OMB Today

By HARRY MULHALL

Staff Reporter

The Ontario Municipal Board hearing deciding Belleville's disputed plaza-site rezoning request draws toward its conclusion today.

The inquiry adjourned last night until 1 p.m. today when lawyers for both sides in the protracted controversy were scheduled to sum up the views of the contestants — the city and plaza developers, Cambridge Leaseholds, being challenged by Oshawa Wholesale (parent of Towers Discount Department Store) and merchants of the eastend plaza.

It will be the final public act in the issue before the OMB begins sorting through a documentation of the dispute which has taken six days of testimony.

More than 50 exhibits have been filed with the OMB panel conducting the sessions — a paper mound of statistics, surveys, graphs, plans, even a local Bell telephone directory — for perusal by the inquiry.

The final expert analysis was given by Toronto planning consultant John Miller on behalf of Oshawa Wholesale.

Mr. Miller's testimony challenged a key document in the issue — a market analysis of the Belleville area presented by Cambridge in its support of its case that there is sufficient population potential and current consumer resources to justify the new shopping centre project.

Mr. Miller disputed two assumptions by Cambridge — the amount of retail selling space in the city and population growth.

Cambridge projects a Belleville population of 51,900 by 1981.

Yesterday Mr. Miller, basing his interpretation on traditional growth trends of 1.4 per cent, estimated a total of 38,000 Bellevillians by that time.

And, said Mr. Miller, "There will be no unsatisfied (consumer) potential in the Belleville area until the 1981 figure is reached."

Mr. Miller, a one-time assistant Belleville city engineer, told the hearing he believed Cambridge Leaseholds "are sound-businessmen.

But, he said, his principle concern was that the city's downtown business area was 'not in a strong, viable condition."

He noted vacant sites left after several fires in the Front Street district.

"I would feel that if these were a strong, viable business districe the business community would be chomping at the bit to get a new building up there fast.".

"You're saying there is some blight downtown?" queried OMB official B. E. Smith.

"Yes, this is a fair statement," agreed the consultant.

Mr. Miller also noted an economic study was now underway in conjunction with the city's current urban renewal scheme.

"This economic study is very important and the impact of such an economic study on the central business district could be strong, he added.

Resumption of the hearing was delayed until this afternoon when Robert Macaulay, lawyer for opponents of the plaze project was called to Toronto late yesterday.

Disputing Mr. Macaulay's presentation will be E. Guss Porter, city solicitor and R. J. Robinson, counsel for Cambridge Leaseholds.

Damage Over Million

Montreal Students Wreck Computers

Students Mill in Front of Building

This was the scene when non-striking students arrived in front of Sir George Williams University computer centre yesterday morning and found the building closed and occupied by other students battling police. Most of the students outside the building voiced opposition to the occupation, sometimes shouting "Go, cops, go."

Police Arrest Ninety

MONTREAL (CP) — More than 90 persons were arrested Tuesday after a group of sit-in students went wild at Sir George Williams University and caused more than $1,000,000 damages to its computer centre.

Police ended the 10-hour rampage by breaking past student-erected barricades as firemen fought a blaze amid debris from broken computers, windows, typewriters and furniture.

Firemen contained the blaze, but smoke and water damage was widespread.

Even before firemen began pouring water into the ninth floor to quell the flames in the computer centre, corridors in the university were flooded with water from fire hoses opened by the occupiers. Escalators and stairwells were choked with furniture tossed by the dissenting students.

After it was all over, Malcolm Stone, university information officer, described the scene:

"The computer centre is a total wreck. There are bits and pieces of whatever goes into making a computer lying all over the floor. There's intricate wiring by the bucketfull, shattered crystals and water up to the ankles. Every window in the centre is smashed."

They're Only Acting!

U.S. Tells Tapei Regime To Keep Ties With Canada

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has advised Nationalist China to keep some sort of diplomatic relations with Canada even if Ottawa recognizes the Peking government, officials say.

They said that even though the state department Tuesday formally declared it was "very much concerned" about Canada's overtures toward the mainland Chinese, the United States does not want the Nationalists to break off all ties with Ottawa.

U.S. concern over Canadian recognition of Peking also extended to "other members of the Pacific community toward such developments," state department spokesman Robert J. McCloskey said.

These nations are South Vietnam, Thailand, South Korea, the Philippines and, to a lesser extent, Japan where heavy pressure already exists for recognition of Peking.

TAIPEI (AP) — Nationalist China reacted today with caution to Canada's latest move to open talks with Peking representatives in Stockholm for establishing diplomatic relations.

There was no official comment on the announcement Monday by Canada's external affairs minister, Mitchell Sharp, that he had instructed his embassy in the Swedish capital to make contact with the Chinese Communist embassy.

Reuters reported the contacts had been made before Sharp's announcement.

The Chinese Nationalists, who strongly oppose any two-China arrangement, are taking a wait-and-see attitude toward developments in Stockholm.

Official sources said they would not take the initiative to sever relations with Canada unless Ottawa officially announces its switch of recognition.

Quebec Premier Favors Human Rights Charter

OTTAWA (CP) — Quebec favors a written guarantee of human rights in a revised Canadian constitution provided Ottawa refrains from using the measure as an excuse to meddle in provincial affairs. Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand said today.

Section

Mr. Bertrand took up discussion of the federally-proposed human rights charter at the constitutional conference. Prime Minister Trudeau opened the final day of the three-day federal-provincial meeting at 10:05 a.m. EST.

The Quebec premier told the conference he recognizes there might be disadvantages in entrenching the human rights charter in the constitution, but Quebec believes the benefits would outweigh the drawbacks.

Mr. Bertrand said he favors entrenchment of rights applicable at both the federal and provincial levels, but on condition the federal Parliament would not interfere with provincial matters under the charter.

In addition, Mr. Bertrand said, constitutional human rights should be established at the same time as a new constitution, but not before.

He said the human rights charter would be linked to other constitutional changes, including establishment of a constitutional court and perhaps also changes in the form and function of the Senate.

Ontario Accepts Rights Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Attorney-General Arthur Wishart said today Ontario is willing to accept the federal government's position that a bill of rights written into the constitution should include minority language rights.

Kennedy Assassination No. 1

Befuddled Witness Sure He Heard Plot to Kill

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A key witness at Clay Shaw's trial testified he was befuddled at times—but remained "100 per cent sure" he heard Shaw plotting to assassinate President John F. Kennedy.

Perry Raymond Russo, 27, insisted that his expressions of grave doubt made to various people before trial started were due to enormous mental pressures generated by the case.

Russo, ending nearly 10 hours on the stand, stepped down Tuesday.

In his long cross-examination, defence lawyer Irvin Dymond bore down hard on statements Russo made to police Sgt. Edward O'Donnell during an interview after a June, 1967, lie detector test.

Before the test, Russo had told the preliminary hearing he was at a party at Ferrie's apartment in September, 1963, and overheard the plotters.

"Do you deny that when you were asked if Clay Shaw was at the party, you replied, 'Do you want to know the truth? I don't know if he was there or not?' " asked Dymond.

A—With some explanation, yes. At that time so many people were pressuring . . . it was getting hard for me to tell if he was there or if he wasn't.'

Q—But you did tell him it was hard to tell if Shaw was there or not?

A—After explaining, yes.

Q—Did you tell Sgt. O'Donnell that if you had to give a yes or no answer as to whether Shaw was at the party, you would have to say no?

A—Probably not in those exact words but in essence, yes.

Kennedy Assassination No. 2

Sirhan May Change Plea If Promised Life Term

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Reports circulated today that Sirhan Bishara Sirhan might change his plea to guilty from not guilty in the gunshot assassination of Senator Robert F. Kennedy.

Such a change, if it occurred, would result from either an understanding or a firm belief that a life term in prison—instead of death—would be the maximum penalty, the Los Angeles Times reported.

The only likely obstacle would be Sirhan's own refusal to change his plea, The Times said. Sirhan, 24, from Jordan, was described as fearful a change of plea would rob him of the opportunity to publicly air reasons for the assassination.

The Times said Sirhan's defence lawyers huddled with the defendant, his mother, and brother Tuesday to discuss the possible guilty plea.

Speculation also rose Monday night when Evelle J. Younger, Los Angeles County district attorney, said without elaboration in a television interview that the Sirhan trial could take "three months or three days."

Court sources said a change in plea represented one way to drastically reduce the length of a trial that has already consumed nearly six weeks just in making preliminary motions and selecting a jury.

For either a conviction or a plea of guilty to murder in the first degree, the death penalty or life imprisonment is mandatory under California state law.

Municipal Board Hearing

Plaza Would Slow Downtown Core Redevelopment: Wills

A new shopping centre could seriously jeopardize the future of Belleville's downtown commercial district, a city businessman warned yesterday.

Mystery also surrounds the northend plaza development, William Wills told the Ontario Municipal Board hearing at city hall, now deciding the fate of the $3,000,000 development.

Mr. Wills, Guaranty Trust Belleville manager, who also described himself as a "downtown ratepayer" volunteered testimony as the last witness before the inquiry begins final legal arguments today.

"It seems unfortunate, now that a detailed urban renewal study is in progress, that a development should be allowed that will almost certainly retard, or even prevent entirely the use of this study," he said.

About 85 per cent of Bellevillians live south of the CN railroad and when the present Sidney Street and upper bridges are replaced the downtown area will be "even more accessible" to consumers.

Another shopping centre could detrimentally affect other commercial assessments and "seriously jeopardize the future of our central downtown area at a time when it is on the threshold of development."

Bellevillians have a large investment in other commercial areas totalling $18,000,000, he said.

"If increased assessment is our concern, redevelopment of our downtown will provide this to a much greater degree and will also provide more employment for our citizens," claimed Mr. Wills.

A new plaza does not necessarily create new jobs or consumers but seeks customers in the same area.

Mr. Wills said he was disturbed by "certain aspects" of the plaza issue.

Without mentioning names he noted Mayor Scott's claim before the hearing last week that support for the project among people who contacted the mayor had been overwhelming.

"Unless this can be documented I suggest this can only be accepted as hearsay and not based on fact," cautioned Mr. Wills.

"There is also a great deal of mystery — even I understand, among members of city council as to the extent of this new development. Why?

"Surely the mayor and other officers of the city negotiating with the developer must know the full plans. If they do why can't the press and general public also be made aware of these plans? If they don't know it would seem premature to approve the development on these grounds alone."

Belleville must grow in an orderly manner and will ultimately require new shopping areas, he believed.

At this time what is needed is a positive redevelopment program for existing areas. Business and property owners are "not so short-sighted and selfish" to deny a new commercial development "if there was a real need."

"However, new developers coming to our city must not be allowed to arbitrate as to what they think we need or do not need," said Mr. Wills. Such a decision is up to Bellevillians and city council "in the light of all the facts" and professional advice.

The North Front street plaza site may be well chosen for future developments, but Mr. Wills recommended a moratorium on the project at this time.

"This I believe, is purely a case of first things first," he said.

Attempts to File Petition End in Failure

Attempts to file a petition disputing the northend plaza project before the Ontario Municipal Board failed for a second time yesterday.

W. H. J. Thompson, chairman of the board hearing, now nearing its end at city hall, again ruled the petition inadmissible, after objections from R. B. Robinson, lawyer for plaza developer Cambridge Leaseholds.

The document was originally turned back when the hearing opened last week. Former city councillor George Wishart was given instructions to verify each signature and the property status of the petitioners.

Yesterday it was once again presented — this time by a downtown businessman, William Wills.

Mr. Wills, who appeared before the hearing to dispute the shopping centre scheme in favor of the downtown business district, said Mr. Wishart unexpectedly had been called out of town.

This time, the signatures were supported by affidavit, he said.

City solicitor E. Guss Porter described the move as "rather unusual."

Mr. Thompson said if the OMB panel accepted the document it would be "a matter of bending over backwards to be fair."

If those opposed to the project did not come forward and be sworn before the inquiry "the board doesn't place any great weight on it," he added.

"With the remarks you've made," said the city solicitor, "I don't believe I've any great objection (to accepting the petition)."

But Mr. Robinson strongly opposed the document.

Only Mr. Wills, who had been sworn, could be questioned.

"I've no idea what the petition says," argued Mr. Robinson. "It may be couched in the extremest possible terms" and anyone who signed it could not be examined.

"I don't want to hear what Mr. Jones wishes to state by way of a written signature to a sentence I haven't seen," protested the lawyer.

After a brief conference with his panel colleague, E. B. Smith, Mr. Thompson said the board would uphold counsel's objection.

Education Week Activities Planned

Teachers, students, administrators and taxpayers will be challenged to come to grips during education week with an issue of the day: unrest in education — change to what?

The slogan will dominate programs arranged for education week, March 3 to 8.

B. D. Summers, principal of Sir Winston Churchill School heads a committee of teachers trustees and representatives from educational institutions in the county who will co-ordinate the week's activities.

At a meeting last night at Sir Winston Churchill School, the committee decided to extend its activities to cover all Hastings county, with special emphasis on the north.

"Unrest in education is not confined to the students you read about in the newspapers," Mr. Summers said this morning in explaining the national organizers' choice of slogan.

"All involved in education feel a lack of direction in the course to be taken in the next few years. Proposed changes in schools and teaching require more than mere willingness — they require direction, materials and involvement."

Part of the purpose of education week this year will be to involve parents and taxpayers in the educational process and give this important segment a chance to have its voice heard, the principal reported.

Kick-off event of the week will be a breakfast and presentation of the Sir Mackenzie Bowell award for the most deserving contribution to education in the county. Panel discussions and open house in several schools are tentatively planned.

Spring, Summer Or Winter

Children at St. Peter's School in Trenton seem to be undecided which season it is. Some of them play on swings and slide down playground slides. Others play hockey and skate to prove that winter is still here.

Gas Shortage Creates Problem

Running out of gasoline is something normally associated with highway motoring but usually there is a service station not far away or a good Samaritan passes along.

But along a timberland skidoo trail 15 miles from the nearest settlement there are neither good Samaritans nor gasoline stations.

Just this was learned Monday by two Belleville men, LaSalle Ambulance owner Stu Meeks and city fireman Jack Finkle when they were travelling on a cross country trek from Marmora to Coe Hill.

The 50-mile cross country snowmobile trail had been marked by the Marmora Snowmobile Club, and the two Belleville men set out on separate machines with what they considered plenty of gas.

But after going up a number of false trails they eventually found themselves out of gasoline — and still little more than half-way to Coe Hill.

They stayed overnight at a hunting camp where they found two quarts of Naptha gas, which they mixed with stove oil and the next morning Mr. Meeks set out for a lumbering camp nine miles away to get more gasoline.

In the meantime, when the two men failed to return to Marmora, the provincial police were notified and a search and rescue helicopter from Trenton cruised the area in search of them.

The helicopter crew spotted Mr. Finkle at the hunting camp while Mr. Meeks was away for more gasoline.

With extra gas supplied the two men made it back to Marmora Tuesday night, but not before Marmora snowmobile enthusiast Dan Bateman and Belleville firemen had started out to give assistance.

"We weren't in any danger," said Mr. Meeks this morning, "we decided to stay overnight in the cabin rather than start out at night for more gas."

This morning Mr. Meeks said that next Wednesday, he and three other local snowmobile enthusiasts, along with Jack Fraser of Marmora, would make the Marmora-Coe Hill trek to properly mark the proper trail.

"We are going to take lots of gas this time," he said.

Quinte Venturers Plan Conference At CFB Trenton

TRENTON — The Quinte region's first venturer scout conference will be held at CFB Trenton Saturday when delegates will be chosen for a national conference in Ottawa.

The venturers are an offspring of the boy scouts of Canada organization and have been in existence for about one year.

But their short existance will not deter their numbers. Approximately 110 boys are expected to invade Breadner School at the base for the conference.

Arnold Williams, publicity director for the conference, explained today that nine representatives from Saturday's conference will be chosen to go to the national conference in Ottawa from June 22 to 26.

"The boys will be electing their own representatives to go to Ottawa — they will be making their own decisions," stated Mr. Williams.

He added that venturers are between the ages of 14 and 17 and that the organization places the emphasis on outdoor activities.

"One of the clubs that we are really proud of is a venturer search and rescue company," he said, "they do a great job and are on call 24 hours a day."

The national conference in Ottawa will be the first of its kind to be held for the venturers.

IN MEMORIAM

CONBOY — In loving memory of my dear husband who passed away so suddenly Feb. 12, two years ago.

The rolling streams of life flow on,
But still the vacant chair,
Recalls the love, the voice and smile,
Of one who once sat there.

—Lovingly remembered by his wife Lena.

CONBOY — In loving memory of my dear father and grandfather Gordon Conboy who passed away Feb. 12th 1967.

In our hearts your memory lingers,
Always tender, fond and true,
There's not a day, dear father,
We do not think of you.

—Lovingly remembered by daughter Jean, husband Clifford, grandchildren Deborah, Stephen, Nancy, Leslie and Gregory.

This new unit is currently under construction at St. Mary's School in Trenton. It will have two hexagonal sections which can be divided into as many as six classrooms through the use of sliding doors.

'School in the Round' Takes Shape

TRENTON — A school that can change the size and number of its classrooms as quickly as a sliding door can be moved — that's what one school here will be offering soon as Trenton leads the Quinte area in modern school design.

The new addition is being constructed at St. Mary's School.

Three sections, two hexagonal and one rectangular, make up the addition. The unit will contain six classrooms, a library, supply room, principal's office, reading clinic and nurse's office.

But the unusual and unique part comes when you find out the full story behind the six classrooms.

Each of the two hexagonal units is divided into three classrooms by sliding doors. These doors can be moved into various positions to allow the teachers to choose the size of the classroom.

The whole room can be used as one large classroom or can be divided into two rooms or the maximum of three.

At the centre of these units is a tower like structure. It is from here that the sliding doors stretch to meet the walls.

The whole setup resembles a sort of "school in the round."

Neil Robertson, one of Trenton's representatives on the regional Separate School Board, was at the site today and explained the setup.

"This is definitely the coming thing," he said, "schools need to be flexible if they are to keep up with modern times."

"With these units we can make the size of the classroom fit the number of students," explained Mr. Robertson.

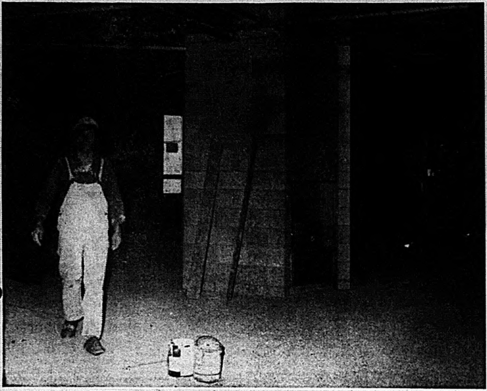
"It should make quite an impression when it is opened."

And if everything goes well the new $241,000 addition should be in operation by March 20.

"We don't know the exact date of the official opening but after seeing how the work has been going lately we feel we can have students in here any time after Mar. 15," said Mr. Robertson.

Meanwhile the gymnasium at St. Mary's school is used as a three classroom unit.

It took eight months of "red tape to be cut", according to Mr. Robertson, before construction began in August of last year.



At Work in A Hexagon

A workman labors on the centre of the new hexagonal classrooms at St. Mary's School in Trenton. This structure is at the centre of the rooms and from here the sliding doors will stretch to adjoining walls to allow the teacher to choose the number and size of her classrooms.

Communication Next Fad: Soutter

Donald Soutter, managing editor of the Intelligencer, addressing the members of the Belleville Ministerial Association yesterday, caught their attention with his opening statement, "If there is going to be a fad to sweep the country in the 1970s, then that fad has a good chance of being communication."

He referred to the late John F. Kennedy as one who knew what it meant to communicate. "He used it to such advantage that he was elected president of the United States." Mr. Soutter said. "Pierre Elliott Trudeau has the same knack and has even brought this down to the common denominator of discussing government policy during confrontation with students, as witness his recent NATO discussions at Queen's University."

He said the problem affects our own community. "Police Chief Douglas Crosbie says there is a communications gap between the police and young people. The schools are faced with an ever increasing communications problem. City council and the industrial commission last year emerged as antagonists, for lack of communication."

The editor challenged the clergy to work through their local newspaper. But, he said it must be remembered that the newspaper wants to print news;" news that helps to educate people, that has a message, something with which people can identify themselves; something which helps people to stay abreast in this era of day to day split-second changes."

Mr. Soutter made some comparisons between the newspaper and a sermon. The news presentation must be sharp and clear. A sermon must be based on a message and make people think.

The contents of today's newspapers must be readily understood. They must contain a background and interpretation of the news events which allows the reader to identify himself with the news and make a decision for himself as to how the day's news may affect him. So the minister may base his sermon on a passage of Scripture. But he must background the thought, expand it and present it in light of the circumstances of the day.

In the stepped-up pace of today, few could read the entire newspaper. So the paper is departmentalized. "Responsible people — with integrity when it comes to weighing the value of news — attempt to help the reader. Large heads draw attention to some stories and pictures are used for impact.

"So the minister must evaluate and weigh the day to day circumstances which press upon him and his parishioners. He attempts to decide on a course of action which will benefit his followers. He makes a selection in his attempts to pass along the ideas and fundamental beliefs which caused him to take up the ministry. He is a man of integrity when it comes to his beliefs. So are newspaper editors."

After the 15 minute talk by the editor, there was a frank discussion for the rest of the hour. Ministers asked about how to prepare material for publication and also whom to see at the newspaper office in various circumstances. They were informed of the problems and aims of newspapers and challenged to contribute more to the community through the newspaper.

We Shouldn't Recognize Red China: Thompson

By DONALD MacKENZIE

Staff Reporter

Canada will be indicted in the eyes of its friends if it continues to entertain thoughts of withdrawing from NATO or recognizing Red China, a Belleville audience was told last night.

Conservative MP Robert Thompson told the Belleville Canadian Club that "one of the greatest mistakes Canada makes is that she fails to consult those people who should know. In this case the countries next to Red China."

The former leader of the Social Credit party, who ran successfully as a PC candidate in the last federal election, said Canada is alienating these friends.

"What do those 13 million nationalist Chinese feel? How about Australia and New Zealand and Japan, Thailand, Malaysia and Korea . . . just how do they feel about Canada recognizing Red China?"

The MP, who has just returned from Vietnam and has travelled extensively throughout the Asian free countries, answered his own question.

"Whether China and Canada should have diplomatic relations is one thing but what about our friends? Have they been consulted — no. And the answer I've gotten from every Asian politician I've met is quite different from the one Canada is trying to follow."

"We're actually weakening the morale of our own people over there, " continued Mr. Thompson.

However, Mr. Thompson does not feel China should be kept out of the United Nations forever.

"When they're willing to extend to us the same courtesy they expect from us then we should have diplomatic relations."

The MP reminded the Canadian Club members that in Peking and the rest of China there were diplomats, private citizens and press representatives in virtual captivity.

Mr. Thompson did advocate the setting up of diplomatic relations with every free Asian country and helping their citizens to help themselves.

"When we show communist China's people just what can be done in the free world then and only then will they throw off the yoke of communism."

As for NATO, the same basic principles applied, claimed Mr. Thompson.

"For us to walk away from NATO would be to weaken every country in the alliance. We're a unifying force for Europe . . . with a reputation for being a peacemaker and peacekeeper. Our role in NATO may have to change but we can't get out," he stated.

Mr. Thompson also mentioned the current constitutional conference in Ottawa and said he could never see Canada breaking up.

"We are the most over-governed people in the world but our system works and we have done the most in the shortest time.

"As a country," Mr. Thompson said, "Canada defies all laws of geography and economics which naturally makes governing Canada an expensive proposition.

"There is more difference between British Columbia and Ontario than there is between Ontario and New York".

However, Mr. Thompson emphasized that all the countries problems can be solved and that as far as he was concerned not one of the premiers or the Prime Minister attending the conference wanted to see Canada broken.

"Also important to our future is recognizing the fact the Pacific community is just as important as the Atlantic community."

'Once we realize that, then we must realize that no matter how much we do at home it will not be enough unless we fulfill the role we must play throughout the world."

Home and Away

Buying a house has always been a formidable enough undertaking. For most people it pre-supposes that a family is willing to put their all into owning those four walls in suburbia (for the most part) and forgetting any ideas about travel, for example.

But home ownership is becoming such an obstacle that many may be wondering if they would not be better off indulging in a little "jet-setting," than putting their tax-decimated earnings into long-range prospects of owning a home.

A recent Canadian Press feature by Jane Becker pointed out that across Canada the prices of houses have increased no less than 50 per cent in the last five years. In Metropolitan Toronto prices have risen 70 per cent during the same period — to a level where housing experts say only one worker in ten can afford a new house. In Ottawa, a real estate board survey showed houses cost 20 per cent more last year than in 1967.

The Canadian Association of Real Estate Boards says the average price of a house last year was $21,300. This compares with $14,424 five years ago.

Salaries of course have gone up over the years, but inflationary pressures have so eroded them that we are not that much further ahead. Apartment rents reflect the same trend.

As for travel, that costs money too — but at least a man is left with some memories and his mind broadened. Home ownership on the other hand — and these days in particular — leaves a man with the home (maybe), one foot in the grave and few memories outside those four walls.

Going by the Book

When things are done by the book and regulations observed strictly, a man can get into trouble. Two instances of this come to mind in which the actions of sea captains have been questioned. In a third case the man in charge — a test pilot — made a decision that averted possible trouble, and nobody questioned his right to that course of action.

The incidents relate to the U.S. intelligence vessel Pueblo, captured early last year by North Korean gunboats, the Cunard liner Carmania which ran aground in the Bahamas last month, and the Boeing 747 jumbo jet, the world's largest commercial airliner which has just made its maiden flight.

If Commander Bucher of the Pueblo had resisted capture of his ship and crew the Americans would assuredly have died, with consequences that might have pushed the world very close to a third major war. Yet, to have resisted capture would have been to obey navy regulations. Because he did not do things by the book Bucher and his men are alive (albeit after suffering hideous tortures at the hands of the North Koreans). Yet the commander is under threat of court-martial. And this, despite the fact the Pueblo's navigational equipment was faulty and the vessel received no active assistance from U.S. defence authorities in Japan when the vessel radioed its predicament.

Something of the same kind of slavish attention to regulations has been the case with the cruise ship Carmania. The ship's owners have blamed incorrect Admiralty charts for the accident. Yet, incredibly, the captain of the vessel has been demoted. Perhaps other factors were involved that would bear on the captain's responsibility for the ship's safety, but London reports of the secret inquiry say nothing to this effect.

In the case of the Boeing, the big jumbo jet, pilot Jack Waddell cut short an otherwise successful first flight because of wing-flap difficulties. Captain Waddell said he brought the plane back to the field early to be prudent. We imagine Commander Bucher also exercised prudence when he gave up the Pueblo in a situation which offered no other sensible course. The captain of the cruise Carmania on the other hand seems to have been a victim of circumstances outside his control. In short, he has been made the scapegoat in this mishap.

Cabinet Shrugs Off PCs in Defused Question Period

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — The Conservative opposition continues impaling itself on its self-erected stake of "responsibility."

It has submissively watched the government de-escalate the pressures of the Daily Question Period in the Commons.

With little more than a whimper of protest, it permitted another limitation on the duration of this daily cross-examination of the cabinet.

(The fewer minutes allowed for firing pointed or loaded questions across the floor of the House at Prime Minister Trudeau and the 28 men around him the less the chance of hitting a politically - vulnerable spot.)

Then, with only a few limp murmurs of complaint, the Opposition knuckled under to the hard-shelled prime minister's proclamation that his cabinet did not have to be in the Commons every day for this grilling.

(They each get two days of every five of the parliamentary working week out from under the Opposition's guns, which sharply reduces the perils of being humiliated by embarrassing questions.)

Even under the new two-days - off-in-five schedule, the cabinet does not always make it into the Commons for the remaining three days of the week.

There are those trips out of town for speeches — like Postmaster General Kierans' advocating the spending of the defence budget on foreign aid.

There are those junkets — as long as five weeks, some of them — to Samarkand, Marrakesh and such other Faraway Places.

There are those delegations to receive and promise "consideration" no matter how far-out their petitions.

Finally, among a score of other excuses — real and imaginary — there is illness.

So the Opposition seldom sees the whites of cabinet eyes, even for the specified short-order three-day-Commons week.

Now the once-explosive Question Period has been further disarmed.

The prime minister and the entire cabinet escape the firing range each time the House calls a "day-out" for committee hearings.

And "responsibly," the Conservative opposition has gone quietly along with it.

Committees just are not all that good. Remember anything any of these committees ever accomplished? Like straightening out the CBC? They have been trying for years — and for years failing, as the CBC sails on, serenely on its sea of tax dollars.

These committees are controlled by the government. The chairman is almost routinely a government partisan, and not a political neutral like the Speaker in the Commons.

And for basic reasons of press manpower spreading too thin over too many committees, these hearings do not always get the saturation coverage of a House sitting.

Then, after all the whittling away of the Question Period that the Opposition has tamely tolerated, the Conservatives have wasted much of the precious time that remained.

With all the burning domestic issues there are — housing, defence, Red China and Vatican recognition, abortion, tax reform, homosexuality, one (or two) Canadas — the Opposition used up nearly three pages of the Hansard index with questions about Biafra — perhaps as many as 1,000 of them. And they are still asking them.

So with less target practice — a great deal of the restriction self-imposed — the good, punchy, sock-it-to-them questions are not getting asked.

What kind of questions, exactly, are those?

Well, the hottest question of the decade was asked by Douglas Fisher when he was New Democratic MP for Port Arthur. Enquiring in a disarmingly casual way of former Liberal Finance Minister Walter Gordon whether he had any "outside" help in writing his first budget, Fisher was floored by an astonishing yes.

Who?

With astounding naivety, Gordon told him he had been given a helping hand with the traditionally secret budget by, of all the most unlikely people, a pair of Toronto Bay streeters. Poor Walter Gordon was never the same after the dust had settled.

Even when the Opposition stumbles unexpectedly on what should be a hot question, they somehow muff it in the asking. Like the other day when the Conservatives, all of a flutter, wanted to know what the prime minister was going to do about General de Gaulle not inviting the Canadian ambassador in Paris to the state dinner he gave for Quebec Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal.

By rights, it should have been a devastator of a question — if sharply asked.

But it was limply done, and Trudeau had no trouble picking it off, like a ripe peach, savoring it, and tossing it back, almost contemptuously, to the Tories.

With delicious detachment, he allowed that the Canadian ambassador probably knew of better places to eat than with the French president.

The answer completely deflated the Opposition.

Some days — alright then, most days — they just can not win.

"Ah, but mon General, there is a difference— ET VIVE LA DIFFERENCE."

Senator Davey and the Press

Kingston Whig - Standard

To say that the press of a country is at times dull, provincial and even parochial in outlook, displaying a great discrepancy in journalistic standards, is really to describe a normal situation in a free country.

Bitten by some ill-defined bug, Senator Keith Davey recently wasted some of the time of the Senate in saying this and maundering on about the need for what he is reported to have called a "national accounting" of the press and other branches of the "mass media". He talked about the need for the Government to engage in a detached and dispassionate study of the relationship of these news and opinion agencies with the Canadian public.

Senator Davey spoke of increasing monopoly in newspaper ownership along with the dangers of foreign acquisitions. Many newspapers he observed are the only ones in town and he seemed to be bothered about this, although he is not reported to have enlarged on the matter.

The Senator emphasized that no such investigation would in any way interfere with the freedom of the press. On the whole, he said, the press in Canada seldom abuses the public and its bouts of sensationalism and occasional emphasis on the negative (whatever that might mean) "are swallowed up in a sea of solid grey journalism."

From what was reported of this curious speech it is difficult to extract any real meaning. Nobody — and least of all from within the newspaper field — would argue that everything is perfect among Canadian papers. In the first place, of course, there would be no agreement anywhere about what, in newspapers, is perfect. And it is certain that no Government board of inquiry would be able to set a definition that meant anything.

What would be the purpose of such an investigation at Government expense? The question of the channels which distribute the news to the public is a sociological question and as such, deserves, and gets, whatever attention the analysts of the public sector think it deserves. But on the whole newspapers make all their mistakes in the full glare of public scrutiny — unlike governments and most private businesses.

And finally, with a Government which is wallowing in debt and ever busy inventing new taxing devices, how could an investigation into newspapers be justified? Can't Senator Davey think of anything more pressing for his fellow legislators to do?

An 1811 Ad Said It All With Style

Peterborough Examiner

Circumlocution is a luxury that newspapers both despise and welcome. Brevity in the news columns not only means accommodation for many articles, but it is also essential for retaining the impatient eye of the reader. Conversely, in the advertising columns wordy extravagance is not hard to take as long as the advertiser is paying for the space.

There is nevertheless a remaining preoccupation to say things in a roundabout way and it is a long-standing pastime that the English cultivate almost to the proportions of an art. There are some perfect examples in a copy of the London Times dated Wednesday, January 2, 1811 which has been brought to our attention. Here is a typical classified advertisement from the front page:

"A respectable middle-aged widow, free of incumbrance, who has for some years conducted the domestic concerns of a seminary of the first repute, wishes for a similar situation in which she has some experience; has been accustomed to make pickles, pastry, sweetmeats and preserves, or the superintendence of a kitchen, and hopes she will be found valuable in any situation where economy and fidelity is required; can have undeniable recommendation of five years from her last situation. Address to J. A., 4 Charlotte Place, Lambeth Marsh."

The cost of this advertisement in The Examiner now would be $5.12 a day, or at a six-day discount, $26.11. The astute advertiser could get a much better deal by simply stating in the Situations Wanted column: Experienced housekeeper. References.

The cost would be minimal, but of course there would be some prestige lost in deletion of the ability to make pickles.

Letters to the Editor

A Taxpayer's Lament

Editor,

The Intelligencer.

The public debt, having risen to the staggering sum of more than $23,500,000,000, will cost the country $1,604,000,000 in interest and administrative charges this year alone, which makes it the third biggest item on the budget after health, welfare and defence. The government is finally contemplating spending cuts in order to balance the budget. But contemplation is all it apparently amounts to, for much to the dismay of this taxpayer. I see it will cost $350,000 to install air conditioning into the Federal building.

It just so happens that I do not cherish the idea of financing what I consider luxury; if our government had money to throw away I would have no objection to making some employees more comfortable. What about the people working in factories behind machines? Nobody cares about their comfort and they certainly work much harder than someone sitting behind a desk all day in a rather sumptuous new building, such as the one in question. This is only one of many examples of how the taxpayers' money is being wasted. Surely there are much more pressing needs than air-conditioning, such as: public housing, an increase in the old age pension, an income tax cut (ho! ho!) or at least a stabilization of the present rates to name only a few.

It seems to me that if the "spendthrifts" we have elected do not have enough sense to cut expenses reasonably, perhaps we, the overtaxed taxpayers should point out to them where to start. I for one, intend to make my objection known about this particular outrageous waste, to the MP for this constituency. It will likely end up in the basket, but if more people with similar sentiments would voice an opinion, perhaps it would not go unnoticed.

No doubt, it will be no easy task to break the ministers of their free-handed spending, they have had such good practice in it for years. After all, they are the upper elite in the higher income bracket with expensive tastes, it only cost $80,000 last year for prettying up their offices. But what does it matter, they can always hit the "little guy" again, as demonstrated in the last budget. The 2 percent surcharge was levied on the people in the lower income brackets with a ceiling of $102.00 for the $6,000 and above group, whereas a lower percentage rate all across the board would have seemed much fairer in my opinion. Oddly enough, it does not seem to bother our government to have to borrow money from a defeated country like Germany in order to put on a false front by claiming a high standard of living.

How long is this waste going to persist? Likely as long as the taxpayer just complains to the "Joneses, next door" about the rise in the cost of living and taxes, but other than that sits by idly and hands over until he is bled dry.

KAREN E. BRINKERT

That Generation Gap

Editor,

The Intelligencer.

On reading or hearing so much about the generation gap, I for one think it is overdone (perhaps by those who wish to get their name in the newspapers etc).

There always was and always will be a generation gap, just now the changes in education are so apparent.

While dad and mother are paying the bills the children are going on to higher and more education. As Mr. Russell said in his address, the young people are criticizing the older generation, also the churches. If so, it is nothing new as it goes with the generation gap. They seem to have reached the ultimate in bad manners though as for example when they insulted a visiting speaker from United States (Dr. Kerr) in Toronto last week. I also think those who say young people are smarter than their elders are off the track, as their elders and the pioneers did some commendable work under difficult circumstances.

Also these young people who are given so much, do not realize the major part churches, as well as others are doing in all needy causes. And please take the word "hypocrisy" from the churches, as most people go because they have a need. I feel it could be an excuse used by those who are reluctant to bestir themselves in time for church, or have other plans for their Sundays. Still, we are glad our young folks are being well equipped to deal with the complex society we live in today, and certainly hope co-operation will be the keynote for the future with all age groups.

AN OPTIMIST.

Leaders Are Entertained

Scout leaders and their guests were entertained at a banquet and dance last night at the Masonic Temple.

About 150 were present for the event, a prelude to activities associated with boy scout week beginning Feb. 16.

Alderman Richard Ellis brought greetings from Mayor Russell Scott, and thanked the scouters for their contribution to the welfare of youth in the city.

Among the head table guests were Canon R. B. Wright and Mrs. Wright, Guide Commissioner Mrs. T. R. Colden and Mr. Colden, Commissioner Arnold Welch and Mrs. Welch, L. R. Griffith, John Pettifer, Mrs. R. J. Icely and council president John Wieberdink and Mrs. Wieberdink.

Wayne Adams was master of ceremonies for a program of relay games and skits provided by leaders from the fifth and third Belleville troops.

Dancing to the music of the Frank Howard Combo concluded the evening.

Air Service Investigated

Preliminary investigations into the possible establishment of a civilian air service to serve the Quinte area, was the topic of discussion at a meeting today of area industrial commission representatives.

Attending the meeting held in Belleville were representatives from the Bellevill, Trenton and Hastings county industrial commissions.

At a meeting it was agreed to meet with Canadian Armed Forces Base Commander Col. Harold Carswell at Trenton with the view of holding discussions in greater detail.

Some weeks ago the federal department of transport indicated that runway facilities of the Trenton air base would be made available for use by a civilian air carrier.

One of the conditions however, was for the airline or local municipalities to construct their own terminal facilities.

Crosbie Feels Drinking Problem Worse Than Drugs

Belleville Police chief Douglas T. Crosbie feels that drinking by juveniles is a greater problem in this city than is the current use of drugs.

Chief Crosbie made the statement last night in a talk to the monthly meeting of the Belleville Jaycees. During his talk the police chief outlined the problems facing the city police department and what his department was doing to overcome them.

Chief Crosbie blames the problem on the lack of knowledge by today's youth about the harmful effects of drugs and alcohol and stressed the importance of educating the youth beginning in the early teens.

Chief Crosbie said he has spoken in high schools in Belleville trying to acquaint youth with the true facts of what happens when drugs and alcohol are taken.

The police department will soon have a full time aid officer who will be sent to the United States for training and will act as liaison between the youth and the department. This officer will not only deal in the problems of drugs and alcohol, but with all problems facing youth today.

Chief Crosbie also spoke on orientating the public on problems that might face everyday citizens and what the citizens can do to help the department in combatting crime. One of the department's biggest problems is that citizens are not willing to become involved which in reality is only hurting themselves.

Chief Crosbie praised the local news media for the fine work helping the department acquaint the public with the problems facing police today.

Employee Retires

After 26 years of service in the cabinet lock department of International Hardware, Mrs. M. Duncan retired from the company recently.

A dinner party and farewell luncheon demonstrated the high esteem in which she was held by her fellow employees. She was also presented with a certificate of appreciation from the management and received flowers and gifts from the cabinet lock staff.

Mrs. Duncan will remain in the city and looks forward to enjoying her retirement.

Hip Joints of Babies Examined

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Michael Bell has examined the hip joints of 5,585 babies — the total number born at Vancouver General Hospital since March, 1967.

The object? Dr. Bell, an instructor with the University of British Columbia's department of surgery, was trying to determine how many babies are born with dislocated hips and to find out what to do about it.

He reported to the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons in Vancouver recently that 43 of the 5,585 babies had "unstable hips" — a condition that can be difficult to correct if it is not treated early in life.

He said the joints returned to normal within two weeks in most cases, with the aid of casts or braces that keep the baby's legs separated and flexed.

He said that in some African cultures mothers habitually carry their babies with the infant's legs straddling her hips — a position similar to that of the corrective procedure applied in the West.

Because of this, few of them grow up with hip-joint defects.

Making A Scene May End Rudeness

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a young woman who is in and out of elevators at least two dozen times a day. I deliver dental materials from the lab.

ANN LANDERS

A certain fellow in this building also rides the elevators a lot. I don't thing he is delivering anything. I think he just likes elevators.

I have never spoken to this guy but I've come close to slapping him a couple of times. His idea of fun is to snap a girl's girdle when her arms are loaded and she can't defend herself.

I don't want to make a scene but I'd like to put this creep in his place. Any suggestions? — ARLENE.

DEAR ARLENE: Aw, go on. Make a scene — a real good one. You'll only have to do it once.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read the letter from the young mother whose children are driving her crazy. Maybe I can help. My kids nearly drove me crazy, too. It was the pediatrician who saved my sanity.

One day when I complained, he asked, "Are you a 'don't' mother? Do you tell your children, 'Don't write on the wall; don't touch the plants; don't jump on the sofa'?" I had to admit the answer was yes. He said, "Stop telling them what not to do and start telling them what they should do." For example: Here Johnny, write on the paper. Come, Johnny, let's go outside and see how high you can jump. Johnny, let's see how many blocks you can stack up before the tower falls down." In other words, give the child a challenge instead of telling him what he can't do.

I tried it and it worked wonders. My children are a lot easier to get along with now and I'm a — CALM MOM.

DEAR MOM: A calm mom means calm kids. Your pediatrician gave you a very important key to child rearing. Thanks for sharing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In your column on the dangers of being fat, I was hoping you'd say something about what happens to grossly overweight people when they need surgery.

I am a registered nurse and I can tell you — surgeons dread operating on fat people. Sometimes there is so much excessive flesh that it nearly doubles the time of an abdominal operation. This can be dangerous.

Also, it is next to impossible for the nurses and the aides to turn these people in bed. Yesterday it took five of us to give a 300-pound woman a back rub, four to turn her and one to do the massaging.

I know fat people don't think about these things when they are reaching for that third slice of bread or that second piece of chocolate fudge cake, but they should. — TIRED R.N.

DEAR TIRED: My medical consultants tell me that lean surgical patients recover about 25 percent faster than fat patients. And childbearing for a fat woman means added risks. These facts may not curb anybody's appetite but they are worth thinking about.

Cherry Upside Down Cake for Valentine's

By MARY MOORE

You see I have a 12-inch cake plate with a border of red cherries applied to the edge. It is a joy to use and when I turned out this cherry upside down cake the cheers from my crowd were loud.

VALENTINE HEART-SHAPED CHERRY UPSIDE DOWN CAKE

- two-third cup butter or margarine
- ½ cup granulated sugar
- 20 maraschino cherries, halved
- 2 eggs
- two-thirds cup granulated sugar (second amount)
- 6 tablespoons maraschino cherry juice
- ½ teaspoon almond extract
- 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt

You do not have to use a heart-shaped pan but if you have one, do. Mine is stiff pressed foil, 9" wide and measures 8" from heart dip at top to heart tip at bottom.

In pan melt butter in oven. Remove from oven and add the ½ cup amount of sugar and stir to mix and spread. Stand pan in shallow pan containing hot water to keep it warm and to dissolve sugar while you make the Sponge Batter: break eggs into your beater bowl and beat on high speed for 5 minutes. Gradually add two-thirds cup amount granulated sugar and beat 10 minutes in all. Add the maraschino juice and almond extract and beat 10 seconds. Turn off and lift beaters. Sift sifted flour with the baking powder and salt.

Halt at this stage of the batter and arrange maraschino cherry halves round side down around edge of prepared pan, touching. Reserve seven halves to make an arrow diagonally at centre. Use six for straight shaft. Cut remaining halves into four quarters and shape an arrow point at bottom of shaft.

Now go back to batter. Add flour mixture all at once to egg mixture and beat on low speed for 5 seconds. Remove beaters and with rubber spatula stir only long enough to blend in flour. Pour evenly over syrup and cherries in pan and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 30 to 35 minutes but be sure to test for doneness with toothpick at centre before removing from oven. Cake will shrink slightly from sides of pan. Invert on your prettiest cake plate, leaving pan over cake to permit all syrup to flow out and over.

Serve warm if convenient for you. This produces a lovely spongelike batter and the whole business is popular with the children.

Successful Living

Autistic Child Lives in 'A Glass Ball'

By DORIS CLARK

Imagine a child who, at five has a remarkable understanding of colors and numbers, yet who can speak only a few words and does not comprehend most of what is said to her.

This is the story of Ellie, told in a recent book written by her mother. Ellie is not mentally retarded, as you might think at first. She is a victim of a childhood psychosis known as autism.

At 22 months, Ellie did not walk. She would not eat with a spoon, and was content to stay in her crib for hours. Her parents at first thought she was a slow, placid, independent child. But gradually they became aware that something was seritusly wrong, and sought professional help.

Ellie's autism had mysteriously deprived her of the normal curiosity which keeps other children exploring their environment and learning to live comfortably in it. It was almost as if Ellie lived in a glass ball, unaware of the world around her and unable to relate to the people who loved her.

Even now, at nine, Ellie cannot understand an abstraction such as "love' or "tomorrow", although more concrete words such as "kiss" and "Friday" are beginning to have meaning.

Ellie becomes upset if things are not done in the prescribed order. At four she laid out crackers on the floor to represent the members of the household. When one person went out, she removed a cracker until he came back.

Ellie is still uneasy in a room where many people are moving around; but quite happy when they are seated in orderly rows.

Patience and perseverance on the part of her parents and psychiatrists are gradually leading Ellie out of the fog and into the sunlight. Some day, her life may be as normal as any other. The autistic child can and must be helped.

Dear Doris: I am a widow. How do I write my name now, Mrs. George Brown? or Mrs. Mary Brown, or Mary Brown? Just Wondering.

Dear Wondering: On a letter or legal document you sign: Mary Brown. A letter addressed to you puts it: Mrs. George Brown. There is no occasion for Mrs. Mary Brown in personal social usage, for a widow.

The confusion is that quite a number of career women are now using Mrs. Mary Brown, and this is accepted in business or public life.

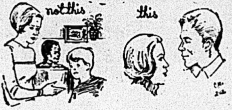
• • •

Confidential to A Close Friend: From what you say, I'd guess that your friend is unhappy, to say the least. Her desire to touch and kiss people may mean several things: (1) she is not getting the affection at home which we all need; (2) she is more demonstrative individual than we are used to; or (3) she needs a "head doctor", as you suggest.

Her own family doctor is the one to go into this. Could you get her to him?

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Jamie, get busy at your homework or you won't be through by bedtime. Come on now, forget about the TV. Why do I have to nag you to study every night?"

Mother: "I'll be in the den with Jamie. I'll write some letters while he does his homework, so I'll be handy if he needs a little help. It seems to be hard for him to settle down alone."

A reluctant scholar in the third or fourth grade may be unhappy about tearing himself away from the family fun. If a parent can join him, at least part of the time, while he studies, it may help to start a new habit pattern.

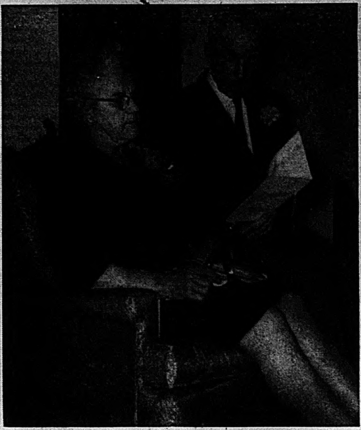
Girl Dancers Entertain Sr. Citizens

Mrs. Lundberg president of the Senior Citizens of Belleville presided at the regular meeting held in the Recreation Centre. The usual opening procedures were followed by the minutes of the last meeting and it was decided that all bills would be paid. At this time Mrs. Gist gave a report on the sick and Mrs. Ferguson gave the treasurer's report.

Mrs. Bedell introduced Mrs. Flora Messacar and girls class who provided the entertainment. Dances performed were the highland fling and the sword dance. To conclude the program Mrs. Storms gave a reading.

Lunch was enjoyed at the close of the meeting served by Mrs. Cook and her committee.

Winner of the door prize was Mrs. Gist.



Messages of Congratulations

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil B. Ketcheson, Zion Hill, read congratulatory messages received on their 50th wedding anniversary. Living room chair was gift from family members at anniversary dinner on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Ketcheson Married for 50 Years

A family dinner on Sunday with more than 30 relatives and friends in attendance marked the 50th wedding anniversary for Mr. and Mrs. Cecil B. Ketcheson, 8th concession of Thurlow township.

Both are lifetime residents of the area, Mr. Ketcheson having lived continuously on the family farm. Mrs. Ketcheson is the former Isobel Marion Bird, eldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard Newton Bird of the Marsh Hill district.

The couple were married at the home of the bride's parents back in Feb. 1919.

Mr. Ketcheson only recently gave up active farming but during the years both have devoted much time and effort toward church and community affairs.

Indicative of the changing times in the rural areas, Mr. and Mrs. Ketcheson have attended three different churches — Zion and Bethel in their own community and now the United Church at Roslin.

The change in church affiliation was the result of amalgamation of congregations to form a larger church body.

Mrs. Ketcheson has always been active in choir work while Mr. Ketcheson as an elder at the Roslin Church.

Some years ago Mrs. Ketcheson was made a life member of the W.M.S., now combined in the United Church Women. The groom of 50 years is a member of Stirling Masonic Lodge.

During his busy farm career Mr. Ketcheson served a total of 14 years on Thurlow council, two of them as reeve of his municipality. He has been a member of the Belleville General Hospital Board of Governors and still acts on the Moira River Conservation Authority.

But despite his long municipal service, Mr. Ketcheson feels that it is he who owes appreciation to his township and community. "They have been good to me," he stated modestly.

Marking the anniversary dinner held at the home of their son Laurison and his wife were congratulatory messages from Prime Minister Trudeau, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, local parliamentary representatives Lee Grills and Clarke T. Rollins, and Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott.

During the afternoon Hastings MPP Clarke Rollins called to offer personal congratulations and to present the couple with a scroll from the provincial secretary.

Family members presented Mr. and Mrs. Ketcheson with a handsome living room chair.

Anniversary guests included Lewis Bird of Peterborough, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brown, and Mrs. Rhea Hay of Toronto, and Mrs. Stephen Smotrych of Hamilton.

Registered Nurses Meet

Collective Action Urged

OTTAWA (CP) —Nurses should not fear the collective bargaining process, says Albert Wedgerie, president of the Registered Nurses Association of Ontario.

"There is nothing unethical or immoral about nurses giving serious thought to their economic position in today's competitive society," he told the Ottawa chapter of the organization.

The traditional image of the nurse was not the ideal for collective action.

"There is a new breed of nurse today, searching for her share of the rewards available in the affluent society, and the profession of nursing now is learning that it has a duty to concern itself with the rights of its members.

"If it is not the right of nurses to bargain collectively, then it is not the right of any other group in society."

Flame Proof Material Used

TORONTO (CP) — Chemist Alec Robertson was naturally frightened when the sleeve of his daughter's dress caught fire. Luckily, it was extinguished quickly, but it set him thinking about ways of flameproofing material.

As a result, after a year's work, a new spray-on flameproof mixture now is becoming available across Canada.

The mixture, called M5, is produced by M. I. L. Industries of nearby Brampton, Ont. where Mr. Robertson works.

M.I.L. president Mike Marmer says they decided to go ahead with development of the spray after Mr. Robertson related the story of his daughter's dress.

"It now is being used by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind," says Mr. Marmer. "They are very pleased with it. And now we're negotiating with matress manufacturers to flame-proof their products.

"This is important because it can prevent many deaths caused by smoking in bed."

To use the mixture, it is sprayed over almost any material. It dries quickly, without discoloring the material. It can withstand repeated dry cleanings, but will wash out with water, requiring a re-application.

WEDDING

McCONNELL — RICHMOND

FRANKFORD — On Friday evening at 7 p.m. in Trinity Anglican Church, Roseanne Doreen Richmond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Richmond of Frankford and Kenneth Conger McConnell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman McConnell, of R. R. No. 3 Stirling were united in marriage by Rev. M. J Caswell in a double-ring ceremony. Traditional wedding music was played by Mrs. Joyce Frost.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length A-line bridal gown of imported crystal peau de soie with rounded neckline, bell shaped sleeves of Guipure lace and high riser sash of matching material.

Her four tiered scalloped silk illusion veil was held in place with a headpiece cluster of leaves with stamens and Borealis tear drops. She carried a heart shaped bouquet of red tear drop roses with satin streamers tipped with tiny red rosebuds.

Matron of honor, Mrs. Beverley Henderson of Lindsay, sister of the bride, wore a floor length A-line Hollywood cerise rose brocade gown with rounded neckline and long bell shaped sleeves of matching material and high rising sash. She wore a headpiece of tiny white tea roses, and carried a bouquet of white baby mums tipped with rose.

Groomsman was Keith McConnell of Stirling, brother of the bridegroom.

The reception was held in the Parish Hall with Rev. Caswell as master of ceremonies.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing an aqua blue fortrel double knit dress with matching hat and beige accessories and corsage of white carnations and tea roses tipped with aqua. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother wearing a navy crepe sheath with beige metallic brocade hat and beige gloves, navy shoes and purse, and carried a corsage of white carnations and yellow tea roses.

For the wedding trip to Orillia, Midland and points west, the bride wore a peacock blue chiffon dress over taffeta trimmed with aurora borealis on neck and cuffs, with black accessories and corsage of white carnations and white tea roses tipped peacock blue.

On their return they will take up residence in Stirling.

Marathon Bridge Concludes

The Marathon Bridge of the Belleville Women's Progressive Conservative Association, convened by Mrs. Kay Bushell and Mrs. Dorothy Tugnett closed with a delicious pot-luck upper Monday night in Kiwanis Centre followed by bridge.

Prizes for the marathon were won by: First, Kay and Jes Bushell; second, L. Spafford and B. Pringle; third, L. Fisher and I. Wooton.

For the evening: First, B. PringleB; second, R. Grey; third, P. Boyce.

All reported having a good time, making new friends and are looking forward to again playing in the fall when it is hoped old friends and new will get together.

A vote of thanks is extended to all for making this project such a success.

Visits Four Countries

Governor General Michener Arrives in Jamaica for State Visit

KINGSTON, Jamaica (CP) — Governor-General Roland Michener arrived here Tuesday to begin a state visit of four Caribbean Commonwealth countries.

The governor-General, accompanied by Mrs. Michener, was accorded a 21-gun salute, an honor reserved for heads-of-state.

The Canadian Forces Yukon carrying the Governor-General and his party touched down at Palisadoes International Airport at 3 p.m. EST after a 6½-hour flight from Ottawa.

He was driven to Port Royal where he boarded a Jamaican defence force coast guard barge for the three-mile trip across Kingston harbor to the pier.

Landing at the pier, he was greeted by Sir Clifford Campbell, the Jamaican governor-general, Prime Minister Hugh Shearer, members of parliament and other dignitaries.

He inspected a guard of honor of the 1st Battalion, Jamaican Regiment, before proceeding to King's House and a state dinner in his honor.

In his address to the dinner guests, Mr. Michener spoke of the special relationship which has always existed between Canada and "our sister countries in the Caribbean."

But, the "most compelling bond" between us, Mr. Michener said, was the Queen.

"I know that most people would agree with us that however indefinable, odd, and perhaps even creaking at times, the multi-racial Commonwealth is an experiment unlike anything which has been thought of before, let alone tried out successfully."

Today the Micheners are to call on Sir Alexander Bustamente, who was prime minister in 1962 when the island became an independent, sovereign state within the Commonwealth. He will also address a Canadian Club luncheon.

Mail Delivery

Rules Change Monday

OTTAWA (CP) — Business in urban centres now receiving mail deliveries two or more times a day, Monday through Friday, won't be affected by new delivery practices announced Tuesday.

The post office department set out the new regulations that go into effect Monday, Feb. 17, with introduction of the five-day delivery week.

The main impact on the changes is on urban residents now receiving home delivery Monday through Saturday. This coming Saturday will be the last time they are visited on a weekend by a letter carrier, unless they receive special delivery letters which are not affected.

Coupled with the day-shorter delivery week is a new system of so-called straight-through delivery for carriers. They will pick up mail for home delivery routines only once a day instead of twice as at present. However, carriers on business walks in major centres will continue to make multiple pickups.

Postmaster-General Eric Kierans estimates the new policy will save the department some $13,000,000 a year.

Storm Takes 125 Lives

NEW YORK (Reuters) — The icy grip of the worst winter in a decade eased on metropolitan New York today, but political storm clouds were gathering over the handling of the current snow crisis by Mayor John V. Lindsay.

At least 25 deaths have been linked to the storm in New York City alone and nearly 100 persons have died in the northeastern United States, unofficial police records showed.

Temperatures above the freezing point Tuesday began melting some of the 15-inch accumulation of snow that fell during the weekend and commuter railways and road traffic began moving again, although it was expected to be several days before they are back to normal.

Politicians of both parties blasted the city's inadequate preparations for such a snowstorm.

Lindsay, who has yet to decide whether he will run again when his term expires this year, defended existing snow emergency procedures and charged his detractors with resorting to election year political manoeuvring.

Lindsay extended the state of "snow emergency" through today and declared "a full-scale war on the snow." He said the sanitation department, which bears the responsibility for clearing city streets and highways, had enlisted the aid of private garbagemen to help in the task.

Slight inroads were made Tuesday in clearing the snow from streets in Manhattan but side streets in the outlying residential boroughs of Staten Island, Queens, Brooklyn and the Bronx remained virtually impassable.

Minimal airline service from the metropolitan area's three airports—Kennedy, La Guardia and Newark—began Tuesday, but potential passengers still faced the problem of getting to the airports on snowbound access roads.

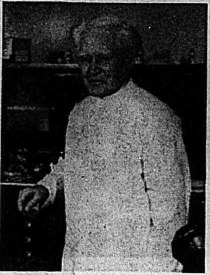
Phone Rates Drop

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadians will be able to telephone almost anywhere in North America for $1 or less beginning March 16—if they call after midnight.

The Trans-Canada Telephone System said in a statement Tuesday customer-dialed long-distance calls made between midnight and 6 a.m. will be $1 or less for three minutes between Canada and the continental United States.

This was a reduction from the current rate of $1.90.

However, the first of three minutes of person-to-person calls within 345 miles would be increased by a maximum of 10 cents.



Still Practising

Dr. E. R. K. Hart, at 95 still practising dentistry at Sackville, N.B., is thinking about retirement, but has no immediate intention of reducing his work week. He has been a dentist in the same building for the last 70 years. (CP Photo)

Blood Hurled at Automobile

BONN (Reuters) — Plastic bags of slaughterhouse blood were hurled at a car carrying Prime Minister Wilson and African war dances were staged in the snow as the British leader arrived at town hall here for a civic welcome.

About 500 Biafran and West German students screamed "Wilson murderer" and brandished posters charging that Britain was responsible for death and starvation in the seccessionist eastern region of Nigeria.

Wilson arrived in West Germany Tuesday for two days of talks with Bonn officials.

Expansion Minded

New York State Courts Canadian Businesses

TORONTO (CP) — New York State is courting Canadian business expansion.

Part of the reason, says the vice-president of one Canadian firm that recently moved in, is that the Niagara frontier is classed by New York as a depressed area which a number of U.S. industries has left.

In addition, New York gets corporation taxes and employment from the Canadian-owned plants.

Recently the Buffalo, N.Y., Chamber of Commerce sent a team to Toronto to interview prospective tenants, and has been advertising extensively on television. It says 10 Canadian companies have opened plants in the area in the last year.

"We try to attract companies that might want to set up branch manufacturing facilities," says Jim Jordan, the chamber's industrial development director. "We're not suggesting that Canadian firms pack up and leave for the U.S."

New York points out that its population of 20,000,000 is about as large as all Canada's, that it is within two days' hauling distance of 60 per cent of the U.S. population, and that a Canadian company manufacturing in the U.S. avoids U.S. customs tariff and has the advantage of selling a home-manufactured products to U.S. customers.

Expanding into the U.S. carries no tax or other penalties from either country. But those who have done it say it has most advantages for companies making and exporting high-tariff items such as electronic goods or who have a larger natural sales market in the U.S. than Canada.

"For a company like ours the scale of the available market is the whole point," says M. M. Koerner, president of General Impact Extrusions Ltd., which makes electronic components and aluminum extruders for items as varied as defence equipment and toothpaste tubes.

"We were shipping three-quarters of what we produced to the U.S. anyway. By opening a plant there we're close to a market 12 to 15 times the size of our Canadian one and we save on transportation costs."

Mr. Koerner says a U.S. tariff on electronic components of 18 to 20 per cent was a factor in his company's move. It has minimized tariffs by manufacturing in Buffalo most of its dutiable goods for sale in the U.S. and continuing to make non-dutiable items, or those for sale in Canada, in Toronto.

Another small Canadian company, Electronic Automation Systems (Canada) Ltd., built a plant in Buffalo in 1964 with the aid of a series of 20-year mortgage loans at interest as low as 3.5 per cent for almost 100 per cent of the building cost.

"We could not have got this sort of loan anywhere else," says G. R. Mounce, vice-president and chief engineer.

The company makes measurement control systems for large paper-producers. Up to 80 per cent of its sales were in the U.S.

"We find American customers generally want to buy U.S.-made goods," says Mr. Mounce. "So an American plant helps our sales, as well as avoids customs duty."

More Students Barricade Themselves in Windsor University

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) —Fifty-five students, who barricaded themselves in a section of the University of Windsor administrative building, were joined by another 30 students Tuesday night.

The 55 students moved into the theology, classics and psychology departments early Tuesday to back demands for a greater voice in departmental decisions after a professor was released.

Dr. J. Francis Leddy, president of the university, said in a statement that U.S.-born Dr. William Kelly, a lecturer in the theology department, was released after his year's probationary period—"the standard probationary period followed by most North American universities."

Dr. Kelly's dismissal sparked the sit-in.

Since then, students have broadened their demands to include a voice in the hiring and firing of staff in all departments, the opening of university policy meetings to students, and an assurance there will be no reprisals against student demonstrators.

At a meeting Tuesday the students discussed forming a negotiating committee to deal with the university administration.

They also discussed a move to allow psychology students access to those parts of the psychology department occupied by the students.

Psychology students warned Tuesday they would cease to support the demonstrators if their work is interfered with.

Chretien Planning Statement On Cornwall Indian Dispute

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien said Tuesday he will make a statement "in the near future" on a dispute involving a 175-year-old treaty which has erupted on the St. Regis reserve at Cornwall.

Indians on the reserve, which straddles the St. Lawrence River, have had American-bought goods seized by Canadian customs officials. The Indians argue that the Jay Treaty of 1794 between Britain and the U.S., named after the U.S. foreign secretary of the day, allows them to take goods across the border without duties.

Former Conservative leader John Diefenbaker asked Mr. Chretien in the Commons what is being done to assure that treaty rights are kept sacred. Although the Supreme Court of Canada had ruled the treaty not binding on Canada, Mr. Diefenbaker said, didn't the minister feel that treaties involving Indians should be upheld "to preserve relations with our first citizens."

The minister said the Jay treaty is different than others entered into by Canada because it was signed between the U.S. and Britain before Confederation.

All Well With Arctic Skiers

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette quotes a University of Glasgow lecturer as saying in Resolute Bayon, Cornwallis Island, that "everything is going very well" for his three-member party which plans to ski to the North Pole.

Dr. Hugh Simpson, a pathology lecturer, his wife Myrtle and Roger Tuft, a teacher, are to start the 1,500-mile surface journey in two weeks.

Dr. Simpson is quoted as saying the most critical factor affecting the expedition is the amount of daylight, but this is "getting better all the time."

Federal Aid Needed in Transportation Field

TORONTO (CP) — The first conference on urban transportation was told Tuesday the federal government must provide more money to provinces and municipalities to solve transportation problems.

Gordon Taylor, Alberta highways minister, proposed that the federal government return 60 per cent of income tax generated in a province and called for a federal-provincial partnership in sharing costly urban expenses such as building expressways and rapid transit systems.

He said Ottawa now returns 30 per cent of income tax raised in a province, but it is not enough to take care of increased provincial expenditures.

Mr. Taylor also called for interest-free or low-interest loans to be provided to municipalities by the Bank of Canada for the construction of new transport facilities.

Lucien Saulnier, chairman of the Montreal executive committee, called for regular urban-provincial meetings to discuss spending priorities which provinces wish to present to the federal government.

Philip Givens, Liberal MP for York West and former mayor of Toronto, urged creation of a federal department of housing and urban affairs to study city problems.

R. C. Barnstead of Toronto, spokesman for the Canadian Trucking Association and president of Smith Transport Ltd., told the conference the federal government has offered to support a study of truck movement in urban areas.

He said traffic congestion and the time loss associated with it causes a waste of money in the distribution of goods in urban areas and he called for street-widening, modern traffic controls and better loading and unloading facilities to decrease the cost of truck transportation.

Arthur J. R. Smith, chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, said a national council on urban affairs should be created to undertake research on present city structures and provide plans for the future.

Shipbuilders Urged to Solve Own Problems

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian shipbuilders should "roll up" their sleeves "and get on with the job" instead of awaiting government help, Phil Gaglardi, British Columbia minister without portfolio, said Tuesday.

"You are some of the most skilled and educated people in Canada," he told the closing dinner at the two-day annual convention of the Canadian Shipbuilding and Ship Repairing Association.

"Surely you can come up with some answers to the problems."

He suggested the federal government confine itself to a governmental role and allow free enterprise to get on with its work.

The government should work on research in the hope of finding a solution to the shipbuilding industry's problems.

"But if you wait for the government to rescue you—you'll starve."

Nova Scotia Man Wins Seat His Father Held

SHERBROOKE, N.S. (CP) — Angus MacIsaac, 25, Tuesday retained his late father's seat in the Nova Scotia legislature, adding muscle to the inherited mandate of Conservative Premier G. I. Smith.

Mr. MacIsaac won a Guysborough byelection for the PCs by defeating Liberal Alick Anderson, 30, by 370 votes in the two-party fight. The byelection was brought about by the highway death last fall of Alexander T. (Tando) MacIsaac, minister-without-portfolio in the Smith cabinet.

Angus MacIsaac won 3,196 votes to 2,826 for Mr. Anderson on the basis of the election night count.

It was the fourth byelection victory for the Conservatives since Mr. Smith became premier in September, 1967, after Robert L. Stanfield relinquished the post to become national PC chief.

EDUCATION

Teaching is communicating. by John Farrell.

The author is a clergyman with broad practical experience in making films and filmstrips and in counseling on the use of the wide range of audio-visual materials. Mr. Farrell makes helpful suggestions on the teacher-student relationship in the learning process.

Living And Learning. (The Report of the Provincial Committee on Aims and Objectives of Education in the schools of Ontario.

This report has been designed to communicate the committee's viewpoints, findings, and recommendations in a manner which reflects the philosophy of the committee. It contains a commentary on the aims of education. The reader will discover that children are the focus of attention as the panorama of their new world of learning unfolds throughout the pages of this book.

Other Schools And Ours. by Edmund J. King.

Many types of people are keen to know how their neighbours live in cultures different from their own. Parents, alert to their own family problems, and, of course, students, teachers, and professors often feel the need for some straight-forward introduction to other cultural assumption. This book will give them that — it imparts an understanding of the main patterns of thought and practice in homes and schools.

The Drop-outs. by Solomon Lichter.

Forty per cent of all children in the United States fail to complete their high school education. This problem has contributed to the current concern — extending from highest government quarters to schools, to homes — with a re-evaluation of our educational system. The Drop-Outs makes a substantial contribution to basic knowledge about adolescents and their school problems.

The Montessori Method. by E. M. Standing.

Dr. Montessori's ideas have been described as pragmatic as those of Mendel, as revolutionary as those of Freud (who once remarked that if all children were brought up according to her principles, most psychoanalysts would be out of work. The key word is "discovery." What Montessori discovered is that children have special periods of sensitivity — to neatness and courtesy, to languages, mathematics, and music — that caught at the right moment can flower in extraordinary achievements.

Education By Appointment. by Dr. B. Frank Brown

This new book by one of America's pre-eminent educators and innovators in the area of secondary education offers many stimulating ideas for the modern high school. The most frequently asked educational question today deals with the problem of how a school system initiates change. The strategies described in this book are the outcome of a three-year program of development which was funded by the Ford Foundation, and explains how they may be implemented in any type of school situation.

A Treasury Of Elementary Teaching Ideas And Techniques. by Louise M. Arangis.

Interest, enthusiasm, and complete class participation — those are the qualities this imaginative book brings to your classes. The book is replete with tested and proven methods for giving students confidence, for knowing how to praise their work in the proper way, and for teaching children the standard subjects in a refreshingly different way.

Campbellford Council Meets

CAMPBELLFORD — A request for co-operation in establishing an international jet airport in Prince Edward County was brought to the meeting of Campbellford Council recently.

The request was brought forward by the Hastings-Prince Edward Liberal Association.

The thirteen page brief stated if such an airport could be established, a city of extremely large population might eventually follow. The paper was given to the legal committee for study, and report.

Clerk Eldon M. Ibey and two Council members had attended a planning meeting held in Cobourg recently. Clerk Ibey prepared a report, given to each council member. The report consisted of questions and answers, to help each member have a better understanding when a representative of the departmental planning branch visits council some time in the future.

Two by-laws were passed, one for the borrowing of $150,000, before taxes are collected, if necessary. The other appointed Mrs. Vera Newman as a member of the Board of the Campbellford Public Library.

A third by-law, which must be passed by council, and approved by the Ontario Water Resources Commission, for the construction of a sewage treatment plant, was also discussed.

ANAF News

On Thursday, Feb. 13 the first general meeting under the new executive will be held, commencing at 8 p.m.

Friday evening is also a first — the first big dance of the year.

The membership chairman reports that dues are coming in fairly well. Eleven new members were passed at the last executive meeting and there should be an initiation and social evening in the near future.

Incitement to Murder Charged

African Nationalist in Rhodesia Sentenced to Six Years

SALISBURY (Reuters) — African nationalist leader Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole was sentenced today to six years in jail after being found guilty of incitement to murder of Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith and two of his cabinet ministers.

Mr. Justice John Lewis, who presided over the seven-day trial with two court assessors, said the guilty verdict was unanimous.

Sithole is leader of the banned Zimbabwe African National Union.

Two other charges which Sithole faced—conspiracy to murder and a breach of the law and order maintenance act—were dropped.

Sithole, 48, a Congregational minister and staunch opponent of the Smith government, pleaded not guilty to all three charges.

A key piece of state evidence was a letter which, the court was told, Sithole smuggled out of Salisbury jail instructing an outside contact to hire paid killers to assassinate Smith, Justice Minister Desmond Lardner-Burke and External Affairs Minister Jack Howman.

The prosecution claimed the Zanu leader wrote the murder plot letter.

The African nationalist leader stood impassively in the dock as the verdict was read.

Sithole, who became a powerful influence in African nationalism in Rhodesia during the last few years, was brought out of jail to face trial.

He has been under detention without trial for four years for political offences.

On the fifth day of the trial last Thursday, Sithole testified that, while Smith, Lardner-Burke and Howman were his political opponents, they were not his enemies.

Sithole denied in cross-examination he wrote the letter from his prison call to an outside contact, identified only as "Mr. X" urging him to recruit three killers to murder the three cabinet ministers.

In answer to a question, Sithole said he did not associate himself with members of his party entering Rhodesia as terrorists.

In a surprise development, State Prosecutor Brendan Treacy produced a letter which, under cross-examination, Sithole admitted he wrote to Herbert Chitepo, a Zanu leader now in Zambia.

Addressed to "Dear Herb and comrades" the letter said the Rhodesian government would remain in power "unless there is decisive intervention from within or without."

Asked what he meant by decisive intervention, Sithole replied: "By Britain, by the OAU (Organization for African Unity) or the United Nations."

Asked if he also meant terrorists, he said: "Well, yes."

Proposed Breath-analysis Law Called Too Tough to Enforce

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal MP Steven Otto said Tuesday the government's proposed breath-analysis legislation is so tough police may not want to enforce it.

"This will result in a non-effective law," Mr. Otto (York East) warned as debate continued on second reading of the contentious omnibus bill to amend the Criminal Code.

The Toronto lawyer said the statutory impairment level set out in the bill would mean a Canadian could be convicted, whether impaired or not, after two drinks.

The level constitutes as impairment a blood alcohol level of eight-hundredths of one per cent. The level would be measured by a compulsory breath analysis taken by police.

A driver who refused to take the test without "reasonable excuse" could be convicted for the refusal and would be subject to the same penalties as those for impairment.

Mr. Otto said all this will have "a fairly serious effect on the drinking habits of Canadians." The government had better make sure they weren't taken by surprise.

"The government should consider seriously whether the people are willing as yet to accept such a law."

It would mean that people who refused "to incriminate themselves" by submitting to the breath test would be guilty.

How could this be reconciled with the charter of human rights being proposed at the federal-provincial conference by the government?

However, Barry Mather (NDP—Surrey) compared the statutory impairment level to a speed limit.

He said it has been shown in tests that drivers become prone to accidents at that level.

The proposed amendments "could save 20 lives a week and millions of dollars in destruction of property.

"What we need is freedom, not for drinking drivers but from drinking drivers," Mr. Mather said.

Melvin McQuaid (PC—Cardigan), a former attorney-general of Prince Edward Island, said he supports 95 per cent of the bill and feels most of its proposals are long overdue.

However, he was opposed in conscience to the abortion sections and he found he would have to vote against the bill. He argued angrily that there was no reason it should not be divided and called upon Liberal back-benchers to buck "the iron hand of the prime minister."

Newfoundland Conservatives Walter Carter (St. John's West) and Ambrose H. Peddle (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador) both castigated the government for not dividing the bill.

Mr. Carter, objecting to clauses that would remove homosexuality between consenting adults from the category of crime, said the human race would be extinct if homosexuality was allowed. He hadn't come to Ottawa "to undermine the social order."

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming), the next speaker, described the Newfoundlanders as being "in the dinosaur class."

Place Ville Marie Armory Bombed

MONTREAL (CP) — A bomb exploded on the front steps of a downtown military establishment Tuesday night in the Place Ville Marie area.

It was the second such explosion at a Montreal military building since Monday.

One guard was injured lightly, but the explosion shattered several hundred windows in surrounding buildings, including the eight-storey section of Place Ville Marie commonly called the Esso building.

The 10 p.m. blast buckled the four-inch oak door of the Regiment de Maisonneuve armory on Catchcart Street, running along the north side of Place Ville Marie which is dominated by a 42-storey office tower.

An armed forces information officer said the guard, Jean-Paul Goudreau, 58, became suspicious when he spotted a package on the steps of the armory and walked away to call military police.

As he moved away from the thick door inside the building, the bomb exploded, sending him to the floor.

He was taken to hospital for treatment of shock, but was able to resume work an hour later.

The armed forces spokesman said damage to the armory was "not serious, but quite spectacular."

He did not know if the bomb was made of dynamite. It appeared "similar to the one" of five or six sticks of dynamite that shattered windows Monday night in a north-end building containing a Canadian Armed Forces technical service unit.

A maintenance man suffered a cut ankle from flying glass in that blast, which also smashed windows in a nearby apartment building and a five-storey office structure.

The explosions this week brought the 1969 total to seven in the Montreal area. There have been more than 50 bombing incidents in the last year, most related to labor troubles.

In Monday's explosion at the four-storey building housing the 11th Technical Service Unit, the bomb also was placed outside.

The building was the site of a terrorist bombing in May, 1963, when it was leased by the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Strictly Personal

Nobody Is Unprejudiced

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

There are no "unprejudiced" people in the world, but there are two kinds of prejudiced people: those who admit it and make allowances for it when judging others, and those who deny it and call it by some other name.

The second kind are the ones so deeply prejudiced they cannot see it as a prejudice, just as a fish does not know it swims in water, but imagines water to be the natural environment of the whole world.

Of course, we can always rationalize our dislike for other groups by pointing to some unattractive traits they have, or seem to have — and then use these traits as a justification for our dislike.

An ingenious study made in the U.S. a few years ago, however, showed that the deeply prejudiced personality does not really base its dislike on the "objective" traits of other groups.

In the context of asking about feelings toward Negroes, Jews, and other minorities, the study also tested the degree of hostility toward fictitious groups — the "Darnireans," the "Piraneans," and the "Wallerians." None of these exists at all.

The deeply prejudiced persons among the interviewees who most disliked real minority groups also expressed the greatest hostility toward the fictitious groups as well. Even though these non-existing groups had no "characteristics" that could be rejected, the prejudiced personality rejected them anyway.

There is no question that groups differ, just as individuals do. Such differences are normal and natural and beneficial to the human race, which requires diverse talents and temperaments and ethnic strains to co-operate and combine their various strengths, and to compensate for their weaknesses.

But there are certain personalities who cannot stand difference. They fear it, even though this fear may be masked as contempt or hate or anger or resentment. Fear of the stranger is the oldest primordial emotion known to man — an unconscious tribal reaction that made all the earliest religions exclusive in their worship of tribal deities.

We must remember that monotheism — which attempted to break down this exclusivity by positing one universal God — is only about 6,000 years old, which is a mere fraction of time compared to man's million or so years on Earth. Since tribalism comes from the ancient animal strain in our nature, it is scarcely surprising that so many people reject those strange and fearsome Darnireans, Piraneans and Wallerians.

Shared Cost Programs Wrong,

A Not-so-conciliatory Robarts Throws Heavy Fiscal Punches

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier John Robarts Tuesday denied speculation that there had been an "arrangement" at the federal-provincial constitutional conference in which Ontario would exchange its support of federal positions for a sympathetic reception to his pleas for "greater elbow room' in growth-tax fields.

"No deals," he told a news conference after he had startled the conference with a demand for the return of about $175,000,000 of $225,000,000 which will be raised from Ontario taxpayers for a national medical care insurance plan.

"We don't work that way."

Speculation began after Premier Robarts, who was instrumental in getting the subject of federal-provincial financial relations added to the conference agenda, made his dramatic demand and continued to dominate the fiscal discussions.

Manitoba Premier Walter Weir, who has insisted that fiscal problems be discussed by the conference Tuesday morning, laid the groundwork for Mr. Robarts' demand when he concluded a brief statement by saying his province would not continue its opposition to medicare because it was "like beating your head against a stone wall.'

"We don't feel that way," Mr. Robarts said.

Ontario would continue to object to the medical care plan which he described as a "Machiavellian scheme, the biggest political fraud ever perpetrated."

He served "formal notice" on Prime Minister Trudeau that Ontario wants the return of "fiscal equivalent"—an amount equal to the estimated value of insurance services Ontario would receive if it participated in the plan.

Mr. Robarts said the federal government's two per cent social services surcharge on income tax, which he insists is meant to pay for the medical care plan, will collect $225,000,000 from Ontario taxpayers in its first year.

His officials estimate the value of services Ontario would receive if it participated at $175,000,000.

Until the subject of fiscal arrangements came up, Mr. Robarts had been generally conciliatory in the discussions of how Canada's constitution should be reviewed and revised.

He supported the federal government's position on the agenda for the conference, made statements which helped relieve the atmosphere of crisis in which the conference began and brought closer to the federal position Ontario's attitude on protection of two official languages and a bill of rights entrenched in the constitution.

But he held back few punches when discussion came to fiscal matters.

Medicare is only one example of the federal government using its constitutional fiscal powers to "amend the constitution without constitutional amendment," he said.

Otawa was using its power to force the provinces into programs they did not want and could not afford. Its weapon was the joint program in such fields as education, health and welfare in which Ottawa provided most of the money while the provinces which joined did the administration.

Mr. Robarts said that to get their share of the federal money—part of which they had contributed in taxes—the provinces were forced into the programs, only to have their own budgets upset when the federal government withdrew its support without consultation.

Shared-cost programs are "really not the right way of doing business," he told the conference.

"We object to the federal spending power being used to abort the constitution, or to force us to take certain steps in fields that are entirely within our jurisdiction."

In an unusual development, Ontario Education Minister William Davis later indicated that Ontario expected to receive federal assistance in meeting the costs of French-language educational institutions in the province—a shared-cost program Ottawa is considering.

Mr. Robarts said Ontario supports the idea of a strong central government, but it has constitutional responsibilities in areas where costs are rising the fastest while the federal government has taken control of the fastest-growing revenue sources.

If Ontario does not get a larger share of personal and corporate income tax fields it will have to "cut its programs or raise taxes again."

If that happens, he told Mr. Trudeau for the second time in two days, "you will change the face of the nation more than you ever will by changes in the constitution."

Ontario "does not choose to usurp the powers of the federal government . . . but we do say there must be a better delineation of responsibilities and we must have solid backing of our responsibilities by adequate revenue sources."

No direct agreements are being sought or asked in a conference Mr. Robarts has described as "an exchange of opinions," but Ontario did win one concession from Mr. Trudeau: Federal authorities will ask the Bank of Canada to extend to the provinces the same services it provides for the central government.

The premier told a news conference this was "all to the good since the governments will have to co-ordinate their fiscal policies to a higher degree than they have in the past" and the bank could contribute to this.

He admitted his "words might have been ill-chosen" when he described the medical care plan as a fraud.

"But how do you describe something that purports to do one thing and does another?

He declined comment on what action his government will take if the request for a return of the fiscal equivalent under the insurance plan is denied.

Ontario's qualified support for a bill of rights to be entrenched in a revised constitution was offered by Attorney-General Arthur Wishart.

Only those human rights that can be described as "political" —freedom of worship, assembly, press, speech and franchise —should be entrenched, he said.

Other liberties which have become accepted as basic rights —of the consumer, the aged and a decent standard of living—already are protected or are best left in provincial jurisdiction, Mr. Wishart suggested.

Leaders' Stands

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The federal-provincial constitutional conference concentrated Tuesday on tax and spending powers and language rights. Here are the stands taken by the different governments and the actions agreed:

Federal . — Ottawa should retain enough tax and spending power to provide a measure of equality in services. New rules for spending power should be devised. Official bilingualism should be extended to federal services and courts in all districts with substantial French-speaking populations. Language rights should be entrenched in the constitution.

Ontario — Provinces that do not wish to enter the federal medical care insurance program should receive equivalent cash instead. Canada should proceed with the federal official languages bill and constitutional language rights but Canadians must also be persuaded to accept bilingualism.

Quebec — Federal initiated shared-cost programs intrude into provincial jurisdictions and could ruin Confederation. Bilingual federal services should be available everywhere in Canada since limited bilingual districts might tend to become French-speaking ghettos.

Nova Scotia — There should be genuine consultation between Ottawa and the provinces in advance of decisions on tax and spending changes. The province supports the bilingual policy but needs financial help to implement it.

New Brunswick — Ottawa must retain tax and spending powers adequate to provide equal services. Fully supports federal policy on languages.

Manitoba — Short-term provincial money needs should be met while new arrangements for division of fiscal powers are discussed. Parts of the official languages bill are held to be unconstitutional.

British Columbia — Lines of federal and provincial jurisdiction should be drawn before fiscal powers are divided. British Columbia fears that official bilingualism would discriminate against unilingual Canadians in the federal service.

Prince Edward Island — More study is needed on federal-provincial financial relations. The province supports official bilingualism.

Saskatchewan — Immediate provincial financial problems must be resolved quickly. Saskatchewan supports bilingualism in principle, but believes it should be fostered by education.

Alberta — Ottawa and the provinces should work out equitable financial relations, including revision of federal tariff systems that discriminate against the West. Official federal bilingualism could be instituted as administrative policy rather than law and the requirement for bilingual provincial courts should be dropped.

Western Four Suddenly Have Uneasy Truce

OTTAWA (CP) — The discontented western provinces suddenly found themselves in an uneasy truce with Ottawa Tuesday night when Prime Minister Trudeau agreed to consultations on fiscal and linguistic matters.

The western delegations went into the constitutional conference seething with anger over division of tax revenue, promising a "united front" to fight for economic justice.

But Tuesday, Mr. Trudeau acceded to a move by Manitoba and Saskatchewan referring fiscal problems to a committee for study aimed at resolving short-term economic needs as well as long-term financial problems.

Then he agreed with a British Columbia request to have Ottawa's hotly-debated official languages bill studied by the provincial attorneys-general and Justice Minister John Turner.

The Prairie premiers were elated and an overjoyed Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia said there's been nothing like it since "the Retreat from Moscow."

Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta continued their attacks on federal-provincial fiscal arrangements during the morning session, urging Ottawa not to initiate or pull out of cost-sharing problems unilaterally.

Premier Walter Weir of Manitoba described current revenue-sharing arrangements as "a teeter-totter elevating the tax load" with the nation still at least 10 years away from a new constitution.

"If we can come to some resolve on the short-term problems, then we can get into long term," said the cigar-smoking Progressive Conservative.

Joined by Premier Harry Strom of Alberta and Deputy Premier David Steuart of Saskatchewan, Mr. Weir urged Ottawa not to invade already overburdened spheres of provincial taxation without prior consultation.

The three leaders said arbitrary withdrawal or entry into cost-sharing problems can seriously dislocate provincial government operations and finances.

Mr. Steuart framed Mr. Weir's thoughts on fiscal problems into an informal resolution asking urgent studies on economic matters by both levels of government.

Agreement in principle was reached, but the exact form of the study and composition of a committee to deal with it were left until today's closing session.

The conference moved on to language rights and the West took the offensive, challenging the constitutionality of Mr. Trudeau's languages bill.

The bill, which received first reading in Parliament last October, would make French an official language. It provides for establishment of bilingual districts in areas with a linguistic minority of not less than 10 per cent.

Federal government services and provincial courts would be provided in both tongues in those districts.

The West said provisions pertaining to provincial courts are violations of the British North America Act, and any attempt to change the status of languages outside the act is in itself a violation of it.

All four provinces recommended referral of the act to the Supreme Court of Canada for a ruling unless some satisfactory compromise can be reached before it comes up for final approval.

The westerners bluntly disagreed with opinions offered by Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Turner, who said the bill "is completely within the competence of Parliament."

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson of B.C. initiated the move to refer the bill to his provincial counterparts and Mr. Turner, and "I hope we can agree to have this meeting determine its constitutionality."

Mr. Peterson said that if some accord can be reached it might mean avoidance of a Supreme Court showdown.

"We're getting our positions across and we're pleased that the prime minister has seen fit to acquaint himself with our ideas," Mr. Steuart said after emerging from the conference.

Quebec Objects

Bilingual Goal 'Not Generous'

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand of Quebec championed coast-to-coast bilingualism at the federal level Tuesday, one day after he downgraded its importance for French-speaking Quebecers.

Mr. Bertrand told the constitutional conference that Quebec supports the principle of Prime Minister Trudeau's official languages bill, but objected that it isn't generous enough.

He asked the federal government to scrap the bill's proposed bilingual districts and declared that the French and English languages have "exactly the same rights" in federal institutions "everywhere in Canada."

Mr. Bertrand said the bilingual districts, where federal services would be available in English and French, could become ghettos or reserves for French-speaking Canadians outside Quebec.

The Quebec premier took a different tack at the opening of the conference Monday when he warned that extension of French language rights across the land "would merely be scratching the surface" of constitutional reform.

He said Monday the important thing is not for French-speaking Canadians from Quebec to be allowed "to speak their mother tongue in regions of the country where it has little chance of being understood."

What was important, he said, is to increase powers of the Quebec government to enable French-speaking Quebecers "to build a society in their image" out of Quebec province.

Mr. Bertrand came to the defence of the French-language minorities Tuesday by approving the principle of the Trudeau bill and asking the holdout western provinces not to oppose the principle of the legislation before Parliament.

The premier also told the conference his government intends to protect rights of the English-language minority in Quebec province on the basis of recommendations from a royal commission on languages appointed last December.

Mr. Bertrand said Quebec's delegation to the conference at Niamey, capital of the west African republic of Niger, will form part of a Canadian delegation headed by Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier. Both Canada and Quebec were invited.

In negotiations with Quebec the federal government insisted that a Canadian minister head the delegation because the purpose of the Feb. 17-20 conference is to establish an international agency for foreign aid.

The agreement on Niamey follows an agreement for Canadian representation at an international conference last month at Kinshasa, The Congo, thus smoothing over an internal dispute on the international role of provinces.

Canada suspended relations with the former French colony of Gabon last year when Gabon sent a direct invitation to Quebec's education minister for an international education conference.

Regional Disparity

Atlantic Premiers Get Their Chance to Talk Today

OTTAWA (CP) — Atlantic premiers will finally get a chance to talk about regional economic disparities at the federal-provincial constitutional conference today. At least, Prime Minister Trudeau has promised them that.

Nova Scotia's Conservative premier, G. I. Smith, and Liberal Louis J. Robichaud of New Brunswick were prepared to deal with the subject Tuesday. But they were crowded out by a lengthy debate about the division of taxing and spending powers between Ottawa and the provinces.

Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland did manage to get in an eloquent plea against weakening the federal government's financial strength. To do so would reduce its ability to help what he has called the "have-less" provinces.

He referred specifically to the four Atlantic provinces and Quebec. They would "go down the drain," he said, if Ottawa was stripped of its taxing powers as some of the more prosperous provinces suggested.

On the contentious language-rights question three Atlantic Liberal premiers—Messrs. Robichaud and Smallwood and Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island—lined up solidly behind Mr. Trudeau and his official languages bill now before the Commons.

The fourth, Premier Smith of Nova Scotia, approved the bill in principle but said it should have a great deal of consideration before it becomes law.

The three Prairie premiers have said the bill is unconstitutional and should be tested in the courts. It would make French and English official languages in dealing with federal offices, the courts, crown corporations and other federal agencies in "bilingual districts" where a minority of more than 10 per cent speak either tongue.

Mr. Robichaud told the conference that in his opinion the federal bill is "99.99 per cent or perhaps even 100 per cent" sure of being upheld by the Supreme Court. He said it might be a good thing to have it tested but he is sure of its legality.

The western premiers have suggested that it would be better to trust in human nature and avoid compulsion in extending French-language rights across the country. The New Brunswick premier did not think human nature is enough.

"All provinces have faith in human nature," he said, "but all provinces also have laws on the use of liquor."

He did not see anything wrong in having the right to speak English and French made part of the constitution as Mr. Trudeau proposed.

"It won't hurt anybody. Nobody will have to speak a second language unless he so wishes but why not make it available? . . . I don't think a federal or provincial civil servant necessarily has to be bilingual. Of course, if he is so much the better."

Prairie leaders have voiced the fear that the language bill will discriminate against government employees who speak only one language, in most cases English.

Both Mr. Robichaud and Mr. Smith wanted to know what help they could expect from Ottawa in financing bilingualism. About 40 per cent of New Brunswickers are French-speaking but less than seven per cent of Nova Scotians.

Nova Scotia was prepared to give its French-speaking residents rights equal with those given English-speaking residents in Quebec, but Mr. Smith said it would be expensive.

He estimated it would cost $1,500,000 just to set up four bilingual schools. Language rights were a federal problem and should be a national expense.

Mr. Smallwood said he "thoroughly favors" the languages bill but it could prove difficult if Newfoundland had to provide bilingual judges, lawyers and juries in its courts. Justice Minister Turner said he thought this unlikely in a province where less than one per cent of the population speaks French.

Plenty of Experience in Hacks for Canadian Playdown

By STERLING TAYLOR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

This year's Canadian curling championship may boast the greatest wealth of experience since 1962—the year that Ernie Richardson of Regina defeated Hec Gervais of Edmonton to win the title after the third three-way tie in history.

Five of the 11 representatives for the five-day, round-robin national playoff have already been decided and three of them have been there previously.

At least four other provinces could be represented by former provincial champions. Prince Edward Island and Northern Ontario will be decided this weekend.

Newfoundland will be represented by skip Bill Piercy of St. John's, who also reached the national championship last season although he is directing a new rink this year.

Peter Hope of Dartmouth will skip Nova Scotia's entry. Earl Carson of Bagotville will make his fourth trip to the national final for Quebec, although it will be his first as skip.

The Ontario Curling Association champion will be skipped by Ken Buchan of London, who is making his first appearance as a skip after playing third for the provincial champions in 1963 and 1964.

A takeout artist, the London rink could well be the first to return to defensive curling since the trend returned to the draw-type game several years ago.

The Prairie curlers, who have still to declare provincial champions, have a wealth of experienced skips still in contention.

Manitoba's favorite in the 32-rink modified double-knockout championship which winds up Saturday is Don Duguid of Winnipeg, a former third for the 1965 Canadian champion Terry Braunstein, who now is in third position.

The Saskatchewan picture is crowded with well known skips Harold Worth of Delisle and Merv Mann of Saskatoon still in contention in the north of the province and Bob Pickering of Milestone and Doug Wankel of Elbow in the running for the southern title.

Ron Northcott of Calgary, the 1966 and 1968 world champion and 1967 Alberta titlist, is favored to win the provincial championship for the fourth straight time at the finals in his home town during the weekend.

Each province will be represented in the Canadian championship with southern and Northern Ontario declaring separate champions.

The Canadian champion will play for the world title in Perth, Scotland, March 18-22.

Reaches 92 Mark As Bruins Trounce Chi-hawks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Centre Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins took a giant step Tuesday night towards breaking two National Hockey League scoring records.

Esposito collected two goals and three assists as the Bruins trounced the fading Chicago Black Hawks 7-3. The 26-year-old forward now has 92 points on 36 goals and 56 assists and is threatening to set records for the most points and most assists in one season.

In the only other NHL game Tuesday night, Jean Beliveau scored four times to lead Montreal Canadiens to a 7-3 victory over Los Angeles Kings.

JEAN BELIVEAU
Four-goal Performer

Bobby Hull and Stan Mikita, both of Chicago, hold the record for most points in one season, each with 97. Mikita has the assists record—62.

Barring serious injury, Esposito should finish with well over 100 points and should have no trouble surpassing 62 assists. His performance Tuesday night widened his lead in NHL scoring to 19 points over runner-up Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings.

Another record Esposito could topple is the most goals in one season by a centre—47 by Beliveau. With 22 games remaining on Boston's schedule, Esposito could better that mark.

Meanwhile, Ken Hodge continued his outstanding play by scoring three goals to bring his total for the season to 34.

Other Boston goals went to Johnny Bucyk and Fred Stanfield. Scoring for Chicago were Hull, Eric Nesterenko and Pat Stapleton.

The loss, watched by 14,659 at Boston, was the sixth in a row for the Black Hawks and left them in last place in the Eastern Division, two points behind idle Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Bruins, with just one loss in their last 22 games, lead Montreal by six points and have a game in hand.

Boston jumped into a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Esposito and Hodge and led 4-2 after the second period.

A turnout of 16,136 at Montreal saw Beliveau get the third four-goal game of his NHL career.

The 37-year-old centre scored once in the first period and three times in the second to bring his season total to 30 goals. It marked the eighth season he has reached the 30-goal plateau in his 16 seasons with Montreal and it brought his career goal total to 460.

Other Montreal scorers were Yvan Cournoyer, who also added four assists, Jacques Lemaire and Ted Harris. Sharing the Los Angeles goals were Bill Flett, Eddie Joyal and Howie Menard.

Los Angeles, with one tie and four losses in five meetings against Montreal this season, led 2-1 at the end of the first period. But Beliveau scored the only three goals of the second to give Montreal the triumph.

The Canadiens blasted 42 shots at Kings' goaltender Gerry Desjardins while Montreal goaltender Gump Worsley faced 25 shots.

Elsewhere, Minnesota North Stars returned forward Parker MacDonald to Memphis of the Central Hockey League where he will serve as player-coach.

The NHL team also announced that centre Milan Marcetta and winger Brian Smith are being loaned to Phoenix of the Western Hockey League in exchange for the NHL rights to defenceman Tom Polonic, who will remain with Phoenix for the time being.

New York Rangers assigned goaltender Don Simmons to Buffalo of the American Hockey League and recalled netminder Gilles Villemure from the same team.

Seniors Scramble For Berth

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Belleville Mo-Hawks, Collingwood Kings and Kingston Aces all have two games remaining in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior series schedule and only two of them will qualify for playoff action when the regular schedule ends Sunday night.

The Aces assured themselves of at least a tie for sixth place Tuesday with a 6-1 home-ice win over Belleville. In one other game, which had no bearing on the standings, the third-place Orillia Terriers crushed Woodstock 19-3, handing the last-place Athletics their 27th defeat in 35 starts.

Before 2,122 fans, largest senior hockey crowd of the season at the Kingston Memorial Centre, Rod Graham led the Aces with two goals and one assist. Bob Rawson, Rick Smith, Bob Clayton and Charlie Convery all scored once for the winners.

Playing-coach Davey Jones scored the only Mo-Hawks goal.

At Woodstock, veteran Moe Galand of the Terriers, the league-leading goal scorer, raised his season total to 37 by scoring five goals. John Hall scored four goals and Carl Hymers three. Gary Milroy, Alan Micks and George Vail added two goals each and Grant Moore scored once.

Dave Del Papa, Al Blair and Gary Kyte replied for the Athletics.

Pre-season Differences

Football Bosses Bicker Into Night

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Football League general managers Tuesday hammered out a pre-season exhibition schedule in a desk-pounding session that challenged the authority of commissioner Jake Gaudaur.

The general managers met from 9 p.m. to midnight Monday, then reconvened at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday with an ultimatum from commissioner Gaudaur to produce an exhibition schedule by noon or accept one he would draw up.

More than 30 proposed schedules for pre-season games have been considered by the general managers since the CFL semi-annual meeting last year.

Team officials are here for the CFL annual meeting which ends Friday.

When no agreement had been reached on an exhibition schedule by noon Tuesday, Gaudaur presented the general managers with his own version.

Shortly afterward, desk-pounding and angry voices could be heard in the corridor outside the door of the meeting, closed to the press.

After the meeting, Gaudaur told reporters:

"We came to a position to recommend to the executive committee on Thursday. Nobody got exactly the pre-season schedule he wanted."

Gaudaur said his compromise proposal was amended on one date and that the matter was being referred to the executive committee "because of an area of uncertainty which exists" concerning the commissioner's role.

The schedule to go before the executive committee for ratification calls for two home and two away games for each team as provided for under the CFL constitution.

However, Montreal likely will play three home and two away games—a traditional concession to the Alouettes—with Hamilton playing one game at home and two away to even the schedule.

Hefty Stadium Rentals Plague Grid Fraternity

OTTAWA (CP) — At least three clubs in the Canadian Football League—Toronto, Hamilton and British Columbia—are caught in a squeeze with increasing costs eating up profits that should be earmarked for improvements that would put them in a better earning position.

Denny Veitch, general manager of British Columbia Lions here for the CFL annual meeting, said Tuesday the logical way out is a new deal between the clubs and the municipally-owned stadiums. He said:

"In our case our landlord, the Pacific National Exhibition, wants more money in rent. I understand their problems. Their costs are increasing dramatically and the rent we're paying now is going into the PNE general revenue."

"But where's the money going to come from if we're stuck with increased costs? And who would want to pay for expensive improvements to somebody else's building?"

In Vancouver, Toronto and Hamilton, the city owns the stadium and the club pays a rental.

"Our rent is between $150,000 and $200,000 a year," Veitch said.

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Jockey Bill Shoemaker staged a spectacular return to racing Tuesday when he rode all three of his mounts into the winners' circle at Santa Anita.

The riding triple brought Shoemaker's lifetime total to 5,761 victories.

Shoemaker was sidelined by a broken right leg in a spill Jan. 23, 1968.

Mo-Hawks Playing 'Numbers Game After Losing Playoff Ground to Aces

KINGSTON (Staff) — With only two tomorrows left to bid for a senior hockey playoff berth, Belleville's Mo-Hawks are caught in the middle of the old numbers game.

A 6-1 setback here last night at the hands of the Kingston Aces put the Mo-Hawks on the short end of what amounts to a sudden-death situation.

A win for either the Aces or the slumping Collingwood Kings — now tied with 31 points in the OHA Senior A's sixth and final playoff spot — will hang up the Mo-Hawk uniforms for the season. Each of the three clubs has two remaining regular-schedule games.

But there is still room for optimism for playing-coach Davey Jones and his late surging crew, whose record in the second half of the schedule (seven wins and a tie in 11 games before Friday night's 6-4 loss to Orillia) is second only to that of the league-leading Galt Hornets.

A win against the fast stepping youthful Aces last night would have given the Mo-Hawks a definite advantage as they tangled with Kingston at home Friday night.

But if the "homer" sequence continues as it has in the nine Belleville-Kingston clashes to date this season, the Mo-Hawks could find their chances of a tie for the playoff berth hinging on their final-game road performance against cellar dwelling Woodstock A's Sunday afternoon.

A loss in Belleville Friday night would force the Aces to beat the first place-seeking Barrie Flyers Saturday night to avoid the possibility of a sudden-death game with the Mo Hawks for the playoff berth.

Last night it was again a case of the Mo-Hawks not being able to cope with the Aces' skill at making the most out of their large home ice surface.

Bob Rawson put the hometowners in front at 2.11 of the opening period, with the Mo-Hawks' Ralph Plane serving a holding penalty.

With Belleville's Eddie Marineau and the Aces' Charlie Convery serving double minors for a roughing bout near the Mo-Hawks goal, Rod Graham and Rick Smith made it 3-0 in 58 seconds around the nine-minute mark of the middle frame.

Davey Jones narrowed the margin to 3-1 at the 16 - minute mark, beating Mike Lovett with a low 20-footer on a two-on-one break.

The last four minutes of the second period saw the Mo-Hawks put on their most concerted effort to get on an even keel with the Aces, but Al Ferguson slid the puck wide of the Kingston net after deking his way in alone, and then Jones fired one into Lovett's pads on a breakaway.

The final 20 minutes of play saw the Aces skate away to three unanswered, corner-picking goals by Graham, Bob Clayton, and Convery, who was involved in another fracas, this time a swinging duel with Mo-Hawk goalie Larry Holmes.

Earlier in the period, Graham and Jones had been assessed fighting majors for fisticuffs at the Belleville blueline.

The Aces moved a step closer to cinching a playoff spot before the largest Kingston senior hockey crowd of the season — some 2,100 paid admissions — more than a hundred of whom journeyed from Belleville.

Jr. Trojans Win Again

Senior Tigers Use Press to Upset Moira

The Trenton Tigers senior basketball squad played the tiger role to the hilt last night, using a full court press to agitate and upset the Moira Senior Trojans en route to a surprising 56-48 at Moira.

The full court press was especially effective in the final quarter, when Moira tried to cut Trenton's nine point margin, but were unable to avoid frequent travelling violations and other turnovers.

Trenton's win was only their second in seven games this year but the defeat was a costly one for the Trojans, as it prevented them from moving into a fourth place tie with the Quinte Saints in the seven team Class "AA" senior league.

Forward Les Nicholson and centre Andy Fesar penetrated Moira's 1-3-1 zone defence frequently, and counted heavily with short jump shots to spark the Tiger offence.

Nicholson hit for 24 points for the Tigers, while Fesar hooped 19 points and guard Doug Coward contributed six points.

Centre Rob Rolston continued his high scoring ways for the Trojans, throwing in an even 30 points, ten from the foul line, as he counted heavily on a potent medium range jumper.

Rolston received scoring support from Doug Mason with four points, and Harry Smith and Dave Grant with three points each.

The night's other games saw the first place junior Trojans run their unbeaten string to nine games with a 60-27 win over the Tigers, while the Trojan midgets moved into a first place tie with BCI and Picton by virtue of a 61-35 win over the slumping Trenton midgets, who have now lost three games in a row after opening the season with four consecutive victories.

Moira juniors were never seriously threatened, and led all the way as they shot 35.7 per cent from the floor, while playing reserve players much of the game.

Paul Hayes topped the Moira scorers with 14 points, while Paul Nobile and Jim Wiggins hooped ten points apiece, and Don Hazelton added six points. Danny Dow and Jim Ransom hit for six points each to top the Trenton scorers.

Sub Saves Tie

A late goal by forward Donna Godfrey on Mel Barriage Landscapers emergency netminder Judy Rapelle gave the Napanee Royals a 1-1 tie with the Landscapers in a Picton and District Ladies' Hockey League game played last night at the Belleville Arena.

Judy Rapelle, who played goal for the first time, was called in to replace the Landscapers' regular netminder, Doreen Cook, who was cut for six stitches when the puck deflected off a stick and hit her on the top of the head.

Susan Morton connected for Mel Barriage's first period goal when she combined with Valerie Brown to beat the Napanee netminder.

Chalmers Steers Aces Into Lead

A 16-point first half performance by 6 ft. 5 in. centre John Chalmers sparked the Belleville Aces to a 45-30 halftime lead, and an 85-71 win over the Belleville Teachers in a battle for first place in the five team Bay of Quinte Men's Basketball League.

Chalmers hooped 31 points for the Aces, Tom Lornie netted 19 and Mark Sheridan added 14 for the winners. Brian MacKenzie had a hot hand for the Teachers, throwing in 31 points, while high-scoring Bruce Faulds contributed 23 points in a losing cause.

Minor Soccer Group Plans Referees' Clinic

STAFF — With a successful maiden season under its belt, the Belleville Minor Soccer Association has already made extensive plans for the coming season.

A referee training clinic has been organized by the Belleville Minor and Bay of Quinte Soccer Associations in conjunction with the Ontario Soccer Association, and will be held at Moira Secondary School, March 1 and 2.

It is hoped the clinic will qualify enough officials to overcome the shortage which hampered the Minor Soccer Association in its initial season.

Registration is at 9 a.m. Saturday, March 1, with lectures starting at 10 o'clock and concluding at 4 p.m. Sunday. The lectures will include the laws of the game, films on various laws, the psychology of refereeing, and a study and examination period.

Training for minor soccer players will commence Wednesday, Feb. 19 at 8 p.m. at the Quinte Secondary School gym.

Persons interested in the referees' clinic or the training sessions should contact Mr. K. Frost at 962-8598, in the evenings or on weekends.

Local Smokies Tangle With Blues In Junior Benefit

By GEORGE H. CARVER

MUSHMOUTH REPORTS:

Dear Ex-Boss — The unks are in town again, this time to sit in judgment on the annual Battle of the Blues slated for Sunday afternoon next between Reid's Rangers of the city gendarmerie and Culhane's Commandos of the fire-eating constabulary.

The combat to the hockey death will be a bloodletting bashing prelude to an OHA junior "B" scheduled fooferaw between Morrison's Marauders of the Moira and a troop of young guerillas from Max Jackson's hideout, fifty miles east o' here.

Thus far the Morrison-Mathews-Mavety galaxy of beardless galoots have yet to call upon the St. John Ambulance to take care of the wounded at box-office crashes. In fact the crowds have been such that the paid-up fans have had to call on a player to round out a fourth at bridge between periods.

Unk McFuzz, chief of police of Flatfoot, Arizona, who is here scouting the truncheon-toters opines the cause is a worthy one since all proceeeds with the exception of the income taxes paid to the judge and jury, will go to the poor-box of the M.M.M. ensemble.

"I'm used to poverty," said McFuzz, straining a carafe of clam juice and vodka through his Vandyke. "Down my way some of the folks are so poor they are taking handouts from the local church mice. They think a meal is the name of a Frenchman called Zola."

Unk McSquirt, fire chief of Hosemdown, Arkansas, who is here looking over the Smoke Chewers, likes what he has seen thus far.

Coach Fred "Toe" Dainard and Manager Grant "Punch" Parks have had the feu de joi gang working on guerilla tactics on the bay. "They may not be NHL calibre but the way the Toronto Maple Leafs are going don't be surprised to see some of Imlach's scouts here looking them over," they say.

"Yeah?" sneered McFuzz, "that could be, but don't sell Harold 'Rock-it-to-Em" Reid's rambunctious Rangers short. Coach Bob "Maul-Em" McAlpine who will be the field general, yodels his charges have always come through in a pinch and they'll send the Smokies back to where they belong, the girls' minor shinny league."

And so the war of words goes on.

Should be a tidy skirmish since both squads of the blue and gold are mighty proud of their shinny prowess and there'll be no quarter given or taken except at the box office. And you can make that a half-buck for both pastimes.

Manager Parks of the Fire-eaters has lined up Rocque Davis, the three Bobs, Andrus, Davenport and Lloyd; Reg. Christopher, Stan Papke, Gene McGrath, Pat Barrett, Jack Matthews, Don Putman, Wally Istead and Ben Hackett.

Manager Reid has rostered Garney Goodwin and Bill Stephenson for net duties; Bob Beglie, Bob McAlpine, Ralph Blatchford and Barry Titterson on defence; left wingers Lorne McClinton, Don Cathers, Les Hall; centres Jack Boulter, Charlie Peters and Bill Spencer, and right wingers Glen Jaques, John Hill and Ivan Nelson.

No truncheons, billies, handcuffs or short pieces of hose will be allowed on the ice. All insurance has been paid up and first aid will be on the house.

In more serious vein, boss, the Matthews, Mavety, Morrison, Crawford crew have deserved a better fate fanwise in their untiring efforts to keep junior "B" hockey alive in the Old Lady of the Moira.

The Police-Firemen game gets under way at 2 p.m.; the junior "B" tilt starting at 3:15.

State 'Concerned'

Canada Tells U.S. China Plan Goes on

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has listened to U.S. objections about its plan to recognize Communist China and has informed Washington it intends to proceed with it, reliable sources said Tuesday.

The U.S. state department said Tuesday it is "very much-concerned" about implications of the Canadian recognition move for Nationalist China.

Robert McCloskey, U.S. state department press spokesman, told a news briefing in Washington that the U.S. is "equally aware of the concern of other members of the Pacific community."

These views had been expressed to Canada and Italy, which also has said it intends to recognize Peking.

Sources here said Ottawa is aware of the American administration's view, which had been conveyed through diplomatic contacts in Washington. However, Canada had advised the state department that it intends to proceed toward recognition.

Canadian Ambassador Charles Ritchie discussed the matter with State Secretary William Rogers last Thursday. It was Mr. Ritchie's first call on the new U.S. secretary.

Mr. Rogers reiterated American objections to the Canadian initiative. Mr. Ritchie in turn made it clear that Canada is determined to go ahead.

That was four days before External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp announced in the Commons that the Canadian embassy in Stockholm had been instructed to make contact with Communist Chinese representatives with a view to setting a time and place for formal talks aimed at establishing diplomatic relations.

The preliminary contacts in Stockholm now are under way.

Mr. Sharp said Canada's relations with the Nationalist Chinese on Formosa, also known as Taiwan, are bound to be affected by the overture to Peking. He was answering a reporter who wondered whether Canada was allowing its relations with the Nationalists to go down the drain.

The government has carefully refrained from stating what its policy would be if Peking demanded a severing of Canada's relations with Nationalist China and the Nationalists decline to solve Ottawa's dilemma by breaking relations with Canada.

However, the prevailing impression here is that Canada is prepared to accept whatever consequences flow from its decision in principle to recognize what it considers the effective government of 700,000,000 Chinese.

Role of the Priest

Celibacy Issue Said Crisis in Church

OTTAWA (CP) — A panel of priests was the target for questions on celibacy fired by a number of their more than 300 colleagues from Central Canada Tuesday at a conference on the role of the priest in Canada.

Participants in the 90-minute discussion also looked at the question of authority in the church, communication between priest and bishop, leadership, and the purpose of it all.

A panel member, Rev. Marcel Gervais of London, Ont., said the celibacy issue cannot be disconnected from the root problem—the very purpose and meaning of Christ and Christianity. If a man was struck with the urgency of Christ, nothing could stand in his way.

But if he is a celibate just because he had a chance of being married, he is like "a half-lit neon sign."

The point was not to try and "sell" the priesthood to others.

"We have one job and that's to make Christ vital. He has been presented in such a tame, domestic way, no red-blooded Canadian or American can be interested in the Fifi with bears."

Another panel member, Rev. Dan Donavan of Toronto, said the possibility of celibacy as an option for priests is urgent.

He had talked with many priests, men who impressed him with their zeal for the priesthood and who now were going through an enormous crisis. They wanted to be priests but they felt that they also had a vocation to the married state.

Priests who had left the priesthood to marry wanted to take part in some form of ministry. "I feel this will have to come eventually."

Rev. A. L. Nolan of Windsor, Ont., also a panelist, said he would accept such an idea, but only if the authorities encouraged it.

An Eastern-rite married priest in the audience said a priest could be a good one either married or celibate.

Priests in the audience also expressed concern about the proper exercise of authority in the church.

Father Gervais said the problem is not so much one of authority as lack of leadership. "Real, old-fashioned gospel leadership" would solve many problems.

One unidentified priest complained he felt "miles away from his bishop." Another suggested that bishops might be wary of just "dropping in" to visit a priest for fear it might be interpreted as checking up on someone. But if priests proffered invitations, the bishops might well accept.

World Fighting Authority

OTTAWA (CP) — Priests today are living in a world reacting against authority, Bishop Remi de Roo of Victoria told a group of Roman Catholic priests Tuesday at a conference on the role of the priest in contemporary Canadian society.

"We recognize authority in the church but today we are living in a world of complete reaction against authority." Bishop de Roo told about 40 priests at one of several conference workshops.

About 300 priests from Central Canada are attending a five-day conference which opened Monday. The first day's sessions were closed to the press, but certain sections of the program—excluding general discussions among the priests themselves—were opened for the remainder of the week.

At another workshop, Archbishop George Flahiff of Winnipeg outlined arguments for and against celibacy as a way of life for the clergy.

The arguments for celibacy, he said, included tradition, freedom to devote one's life to church service, and the difficulty of reconciling the demands of marriage with that of the priesthood.

Those who argued against celibacy might reason that priests would have a better understanding of problems faced by married people; many argued that if sexual experience was unfulfilled, the individual's personality would be unfulfilled.

In some cases, those who themselves wanted to remain celibate did not wish that others be obliged to do so.

Ontario Boards Are Attacked by PC and Liberal Legislators

TORONTO (CP) — The system of boards and commissions carrying on the Ontario government's everyday business was attacked from both sides of the legislature Tuesday.

Speaking during debate on the speech from the throne, Eric Winkler (PC—Grey South) and George Ben (L—Toronto Humber) said the boards and commissions are too numerous and too powerful.

Mr. Ben, who named 25 such bodies and said he could name "a further 100 or so," complained:

"We have given them such broad powers that even the courts appear to have no right to overrule them and other avenues of appeal seem also to be lacking.

"In fact, in many instances review by the courts has been expressly forbidden."

He cited the workmen's compensation board, Hydro Electric Power Commission and Ontario Water Resources Commission as giving "the impression of being beyond the control of the legislature.

"They are, in fact, their own lawmakers, detectives, prosecutors, judges and juries."

The idea of democracy and representative government is destroyed when an individual citizen must confront "a giant bureaucratic octopus with its tentacles probing into all areas of human endeavor."

Mr. Winkler also criticized the authority exercised by boards and commissions, complaining that their decisions "on many occasions do not recognize the human or local factors."

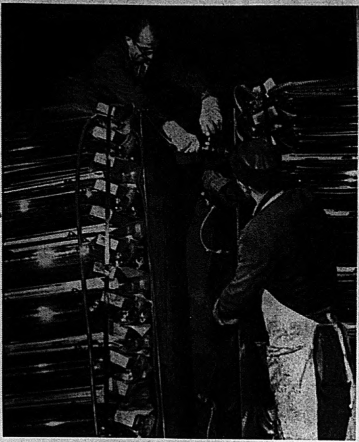
He singled out the Ontario Municipal Board as being "too dictatorial" in rural areas, seeming to aim at frustrating rather than aiding progress.

Mr. Winkler was critical also of the regulation allowing adoption of Ontario children by residents of the United States.

"A logical extension of this practice would be to launch an advertising campaign telling all states that Canada wants a home for its children."

He said a Canadian child "has a right to the heritage it was born into," and Ontario residents have enough compassion "to assume responsibility for all children born in the province."

In other business, Fred A. Burr (NDP—Sandwich Riverside) introduced a private bill to amend the Human Tissues Act of 1962, designed to make more use of the bodies of accident victims.



Packing Bumpers

A worker at Houdaille Industries' Oshawa plant inflates a rubber dunnage bag that will hold a boxcar-load of auto bumpers secure while in transit to the United States. The company says this packaging method reduces damage. Produced by Goodyear-Canada, the bags are slipped uninflated between the loads of bumpers. When inflated, they squeeze the loads against the end walls of the car, preventing shifting during the trip.

Mail Box Lobby Open 24 Hours a Day

TWEED — This village's post office has been selected as one of the sites of an experiment which will involve the mail box lobby open 24 hours a day. Several weeks ago, in fact, Feb. 1, it came into effect, but, the word was received previous to that by the postmaster, that the cost of rental mail boxes was increased double, or two-fold, regular lock-box lessees had the fee increased from $2. to $4.

Postmaster Robt J. Lewis said the new hours go into effect immediately and subscribers may pick up their mail at any time, day or night. The hours actually extend over Saturday and Sunday as well.

The new hours, according to the postmaster, in effect are purely on a trial basis and their continuance will depend a great deal upon their reception in the towns in which they are being experimented on.

They appeal to the public, to "treat the facilities properly, "and see that" they are used for the intended purpose only".

There is not any change in the sorting procedures, these continue as they have been. Tweed is fortunate to have been included in the list of open lobby experiment.

Advertisers Should Pay To Develop Canadian Talent

TORONTO (CP) — J. R. Peters of Vancouver, president of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, said Tuesday advertisers should pay for development of Canadian programs even though it may cost more than importing material.

In an address to the Canadian Broadcasting Executives Society, he said advertisers "must be prepared to pay not only for the use of the time, but in the development of program material that is essentially Canadian and is in a reflection of Canada."

"It seems to me that . . . if we put our minds together in an effort to stimulate the further development of Canadian material for broadcast use there might be less need for regulation."

He was referring to a federal government regulation which states 65 per cent of all broadcasts must be Canadian.

Mr. Peters is president of CHAN-TV Vancouver.

Tweed

TWEED — Miss Elaine Thompson of Osgoode, Miss Eastern Ontario of 1968, will attend the opening night festivities of the Tweed Winter Carnival, Feb. 7 and will take part in the torchlight parade to the Community Centre. She will be accompanied by Miss Diane Foley, to Tweed, who is Miss Perth, Ontario, of 1968, and a party of officials representing the Miss Eastern Ontario Beauty Pageant, including the pageant chairman, John Clement.

Jellied Cable

This underground telephone cable is made impervous to water by encasing the conducting wires in a mixture of petroleum jelly and plastic. Developed at Bell Telephone laboratories, the waterproof cable is being field-tested in Iowa, North Carolina, Mississippi and Alabama. The plastic and jelly mixture fills about 47 per cent of the cable — a space that is normally filled with air. When existing cable is broken, water runs into the air space and shorts the telephone wires at accidental defects in the individual wire insulation. The new cable keeps out water. (CP Photo)

Six Hundred Niagara Area Workers Of Hydro Will Be on Strike Today

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro workers, engaged in a series of rotating strikes to back demands for wage increases, were to focus their attention today on the Niagara area region where 600 workers had been told not to report for duty.

It was in the Niagara area, with its huge generating plants, that the strikes began Feb. 3 in an effort to harass management.

Supervisory personnel were put on alert to prepare to operate the Niagara generating plants as they did during last week's walkout.

At that time, two small plants were closed so that supervisors could be assigned to large operations. The same procedure is expected to be followed this time.

The strikes by Hydro's 9,740 workers, members of Local 1000 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, are designed to force management to come to terms on a new contract without disrupting service to the public. So far, there have been no serious power disruptions.

Kealy Cummings, president of Local 1000, said Tuesday night the men had been ordered not to report for the midnight shift, leaving only regional operators, their assistants, and regional office employees to run the Niagara operation. The region includes Brantford and Kitchener.

Mr. Cummings said the 160 men who did not report Tuesday to Hydro's Lakeview generating station in Mississauga, near Toronto, would be back on the job today. The Lakeview station, which controls nearly 25 per cent of the province's power, was manned entirely by supervisory personnel and maintained a reduced flow of power to customers through purchases of power from hydro stations in the United States.

Also returning to work today are the nearly 500 workers in the London, Windsor, Sarnia and Woodstock areas, following their walkout Tuesday.

The union is seeking a two-year contract with a 16-per-cent wage increase and commission guarantee of equal wages in Hydro's seven regional areas.

Wages under the last contract, which expired last April, ranged from $73 to $209 a week.

Toronto Teacher Fined

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto school teacher was fined $50 or 15 days Tuesday for slapping a 15-year-old boy from another school.

William T. Phillips, 45, a teacher at Blythwood public school, pleaded not guilty to common assault, claiming the boy used abusive language and ran away with a spare ball during a school soccer game.

Mr. Phillips, coaching one of the teams, admitted the blow caused the boy's mouth to bleed.

Terrance O'Brien testified that he was slapped after he started playing with a spare soccer ball that was on the sidelines.

He said he swore only after the teacher struck him.

Judge Donald Graham said that while he sympathized with Mr. Phillips, he had "no right" to slap the boy.

Stirling Personals

STIRLING — The Stirling Lazy Daisies 4-H Club have held two meetings at the home of leader, Miss Debbie Gliddon. Her assistant is Mrs. E. Wannamaker. The club work is based on needlecraft. The officers are: president — Ruth Wannamaker; secretary — Judy Merrill; treasurer — Doreen Hubble.

Arthur Loucks and Keith Johnson attended a building seminar in Ottawa last week.

The nineteenth annual Stirling Festival of Sacred Praise is scheduled for May 5 to 7 in St. Paul's United Church, Stirling. This is a non-profit organization, and was first planned in 1950 by the late Rev. A. E. Baker, pastor of the church, and Mrs. Baker. There are 16 special trophies and awards. President is Mrs. A. Reilly, of Foxboro, and treasurer is Mrs. Max Maguire of Stirling. There are classes for senior and junior church choirs and vocal groups.

River Valley W. I. sponsored their weekly card party at the school house, with 12 tables in play. Mrs. Sheldon McIntosh and the members of the education group furnished the refreshments. The prize winners were Mrs. Sheldon McIntosh; Mrs. Kenneth Tompkins, Mildord Wrightman and Harry Heasman.

DENNIS S. GAUDREAU

Dennis S. Gaudreau of 245 North Front Street has graduated from the Ryerson Polytechnical Institute in Toronto. He was the only Belleville graduate of 200 receiving diplomas from president F. C Jorgenson. He graduated in Chemical Technology.

Tweed District News

TWEED — At the recent meeting of the Township Council of Barrie held in the Town Hall, Cloyne Ralph Thompson was appointed representative of Township of Barrie on Napanee Conservation Authority.

The executive of the United Church Women of Crookston, held a meeting at the home of Mrs. Jean Aylesworth recently.

Mr. William Warlick of Denbigh is a patient in the Kingston hospital.

Miss Linda Tibble, of Fernleigh, slipped and fell on the icy road in that district, and fractured her collar bone.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Olmstead of Maple Leaf were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry DeClaire of Queensboro, and visited Mrs. DeClaire who is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital.

Kenneth Salmond and Gene Brown of Fernleigh, left recently to spend two weeks in Jamaica.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Drysdale of Northbrook have moved to Fernleigh, where they will be living temporarily at the home of Mrs. Drysdale's mother, Mrs. Lemke.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryden Lowry of Madoc spent a day recently with Mr. Lowry's mother, Mrs. G. M. Lowry of Flinton, and also visited his aunt and uncles, Tressa, Ray and Harvey Bryden, Flinton.

Tweed merchants were requested by the Retail Merchants' Committee of the Tweed Chamber of Commerce to keep their stores open until 9 p.m. Thursday evening, Feb. 6 but to close businesses at 6 p.m. Friday evening so that they and the members of their staffs would be free to take part in the opening night of the Tweed Winter Carnival. This practice was followed during last year's Carnival and was found quite satisfactory.

The I.O.O.F. Lodge in Tweed, held a special meeting recently when the initiatory degree was conferred on 10 new members of the Lodge, by members of the Belleville I.O.O.F. degree team. This was the largest number of candidates to be presented for installation at any one time for some years.

Activities at Sharbot Lake detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police, required police attention consisting of two cottage break-ins, one theft, one disturbance, one family complaint, one report of malicious damage and five minor complaints. Four juveniles missing from their homes in the Trenton area were located near Sharbot Lake and returned home.

At the Madoc Ontario Provincial Police detachment, seven motor vehicle accidents were investigated, all of the property damage nature.

There were 39 occurrences reported during a week's work, one break and enter, two thefts, one assault, four disturbances and 31 miscellaneous occurrences.

SURPRISE! THE BIRDIE IS WATCHING YOU

What was the world really like in the early centuries? We have to depend upon the artists of long ago for pictures of what life in general and people were like. The first cameras became popular in the 19th century, and people have been saying "Cheese" by the millions ever since.

If someone just gifted you with a new camera, don't throw your old one in the closet. — Someone is reading The Intelligencer Want Ads today with a good used camera in mind. Help him and you.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Virile Man May Still Be Reason No Child Conceived

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I want a baby. We want a baby. My husband and I have been married for five years. So far nothing but disappointment. I have been to a good gynecologist. He says I have normal tubes, ovaries and uterus. Therefore, he has suggested that my husband go to a doctor for examination because he may be the infertile one. But he refuses, saying that he is as virile and healthy as anyone of his male friends who already have large families. Perhaps you can convince him to go. — Mrs. D.

Comment: I'll try to offer some pertinent facts, but I can't promise that I'll convince him.

The fact is that a virile man may have a low sperm count. It does not detract from his masculinity. If he gets to believe this, then perhaps he will agree to have a physical examination by your family doctor; and later put himself in the hands of a genito-urinary specialist to check on him.

If he finds that his sperm count and activity is normal, then all you and he can hope to do is keep trying. Many have had large families after childless first years of marriage.

Suppose he does find that your husband has a low sperm count? What then? His doctor will go on the diagnostic trail.

Has he been taking tranquilizers, hormones or antibiotics? Sometimes these suppress normal sperm production.

Sometimes varicose veins in the spermatic cord can be corrected by surgery.

Has he suffered sever emotional shock and been ill these years since your marriage? Does he have diabetes, which sometimes causes low sperm count? Chronic alcoholism can too.

I have found that some men with low sperm counts improve on thyroid extract treatment if they have low basal metabolisms. In some cases treatment with vitamin B12 or with cortisone have helped.

The main points I have been trying to make for your husband are two:

1. It is not always the wife who is the one who is infertile. And there should be no blow to a man's pride to offer himself up for examination, too.

2. If he has a low sperm count, this should be no signal for surrender. Often it can be improved.

In an early childless marriage there is greater opportunity for success if both marriage partners assume equal responsibility in determining the reason for failure. Once the cause has been found, there is greater chance for success.

For Mr. N.: Be thankful for your own decision to get rid of the long gun in your home. It's a miracle that it went off in your 11 - year - old son's hands without decapitating him.

I think you (and others) will be interested in these statistics by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. Firearms are a greater danger in the home than to the hunter in the field.

"Nearly three-fifths or 1,500 of the 2,600 estimated firearm accident deaths in the United States in 1966 resulted from mishaps in and about the home. . .The weapon most often involved was a long gun i.e., a shotgun or rifle. Eleven per cent of those fatally injured were under age 10. Most frequently the weapon was accidentally discharged while in the hands of the victom or another youngster, often a borther."

Let us protect our kids from themselves, and ourselves too.

NOTICE

NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE that the council of The Corporation of the City of Belleville proposes at its regular meeting on February the 17th, 1969, to pass a by-law to stop up and close that part of the highway known as St. Paul Street, in the City of Belleville, and being more particularly described as follows:

ALL AND SINGULAR that certain parcel or tract of land and premises situate lying and being in the City of Belleville, and Province of Ontario, being composed of part of St. Paul Street, west of South Front Street, lying south of Lot 1, J. J. Haslett's plan, for said City of Belleville, containing by admeasurement 0.02 acres, be the same more or less, and which said parcel is more particularly described as follows:

PREMISING that the bearings herein are astronomic and are derived from the northerly limit of St. Paul Street, as shown on a plan of survey by J. T. Ransom, O.L.S., dated November 24, 1947, and relating all bearings herein thereto;

COMMENCING at an iron bar planted marking the most easterly angle of Lot 1, west of South Front Street, J. J. Haslett's plan;

THENCE South 27 degrees, 09 minutes East, eleven and eighty-six hundredths feet (11.86') to an iron bar planted;

THENCE South 65 degrees, 34 minutes, 30 second West, thirty-two and ninety-eight hundredths feet (32.98') to an iron bar planted in the high water mark of the Bay of Quinte;

THENCE north-westerly along said high water mark to its intersection thereof with the northerly limit of St. Paul Street, distant thirty-six feet (36') more or less, measured on a course of South 72 degrees, 09 minutes West, along the northerly limit of said St. Paul Street, from the point of commencement;

THENCE North, 72 degrees, 09 minutes, East, thirty-six feet (36') more or less, to the point of commencement.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that the said council proposes at the same time by the aforesaid By-law to authorize the sale and conveyance of the said part of the highway known as St. Paul Street, in the City of Belleville, to the abutting owners at a price to be fixed by it, or if the abutting owners do not exercise their right to purchase within 30 days of the passing of the said By-law, to any other person or persons at the same or a greater price.

The council will hear in person, or by his or her counsel, solicitor or agent, any person who claims his or her lands will be prejudicially affected by the By-law and who applies to be heard.

The proposed By-law and the plan showing the lands to be affected may be examined at the office of the clerk of the City of Belleville at the City Hall.

DATED at Belleville, Ontario, this 20th day of January, 1969.

E. GUSS PORTER, ESQ., Q.C.
Barrister, etc. ,
210 Pinnacle Street,
Belleville, Ontario.

BELLEVILLE LIVESTOCK

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were lower in moderately active mid-morning trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today.

The industrial index lost .24 to 192.66. Western oils also were fractionally off.

Brokers said the market is still fluctuating indecisively, although the major indexes are close to record levels.

Among the heaviest traders, New Providence Development gained 15 cents to $2.75 and To[illegible]mont Industrial 10 cents to [illegible].00. Bahamas-Caribbean lost 20 cents to 90 cents.

Union Gas slipped ⅛ to 15¾, while Consumers' Gas was steady at 19⅛. The companies have broken off merger talks.

B.C. Forest fell 1⅛ to 34 and Noranda ⅛ to 34½. Noranda recently made a stock and cash offer worth about $40 a share for 400,000 shares in B.C. Forest.

T. N. Beaupre, chairman of B.C. Forest, said today Noranda and an associated U.S. company have acquired enough shares to achieve their objective. He said the majority of B.C. Forest's directors are still opposed to Noranda's offer.

Among mines and oils, Bankeno fell ½ to 12 and Ulster Petroleums 25 cents to $4.75. Asamera rose ¾ to 29¼.

On index, western oils lost .31 to 245.82 and golds .04 to 243.07. [illegible]ase metals were unchanged at [illegible]20.44. Volume by 11 a.m. was 1,267,000 shares compared with 1,371,000 at the same time Tuesday.

The stock market posted a small decline in active trading Tuesday.

The industrial index fell .10 to 192.90. Western oils and base metals also were fractionally off.

Volume expanded to 6,556,000 shares from 5,909,000 Monday.

The market as a whole continued to trade indecisively around record levels. The major indexes edged up in early trading, only to lose ground later.

Ford of Canada fell 7 to 308, Investors Overseas Services Management 3⅛ to 114⅛ and Koffler 2½ to 45.

Among heaviest traders, Revenue Properties rose 1 to [illegible]¾ and Van Ness $1.00 to $4.75.

Hand Chemical A was up 3½ to 34½, Eddy Match, 2½ to 32½, and Ingersoll A 2 to 22.

Trading resumed in Canadian Pacific Investments Warrants, which jumped $1.60 to $9.45. The dollar volume of the transactions was about $4,000,000, the greatest for any issue on the exchange.

Trading had been held up since the weekend because of an influx of orders. Brokers said demand for the warrants came from Europe where a market advisory service, based in Frankfurt, West Germany, has recommended them in a weekly investment letter.

Canadian Pacific Investments preferred stock closed unchanged at 34¼ after touching a record at 35½.

Crush International was up 1 to 29½ after reporting higher annual earnings.

Atco Industries lost 1 to 18¼, Great-West Life 3 to 131 and Great West Saddlery ⅝ to 18⅝.

Among mines, Falconbridge was up 5 to 125, while McIntyre Porcupine lost 1 to 120. McIntyre holds a controlling interest in Falconbridge, and the stocks have been boosted by a variety of rumors that the companies may be further integrated.

Militant Students and Teachers Active in Many Countries

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Militant students and teachers picketed, battled with police and occupied campus buildings Tuesday at colleges in the United States, Canada and Europe.

Helmeted police cleared 200 militant teachers from the Sorbonne in Paris who occupied the famed French university for about 3½ hours.

The police, carrying rifles, moved in after the failure of a final appeal to the 200 teachers, who were protesting against the suspension of 34 students and the drafting of 11 of them.

The conscripted students—normally freed from military service obligations—were drafted after occupation of the Paris university recorate last month.

In Itta Bena, Miss., the president of Mississippi Valley State College agreed to work with dissident students on problems which, touched off demonstrations and a 24-hour boycott of classes.

Students at the all-Negro college had asked for more courses in Negro history, more remedial work, more campus speakers and a relaxation of curfew hours for women.

About 300 students at the Mississippi school were suspended after police broke up a demonstration there Saturday night, and 15 were charged with vandalism.

In Madison, Wis., police forced students from an administrative building at the University of Wisconsin. There were no arrests.

Student activists had occupied the building and called for a classroom strike to support 13 demands by black students, including the creation of an autonomous black students department.

At the University of Chicago, students who have occupied the administration building for 13 days threw up a picket line outside the social sciences building in an attempt to stop others from attending classes there.

The students asked for a renewal of the contract of a sympathetic professor and equal power for students and faculty in firing and hiring of professors.

And in East Lansing, Mich., some 300 students protested outside a meeting where John A. Hannah, Michigan State University president, called for police action when dissenters go too far.

Hannah, who will leave MSU to head the federal government's agency for international development, was escorted to the campus theatre by police.

The Canadian demonstrations were at Montreal and Windsor, Ont.

More than $1,000,000 damage was caused to a computer centre at Sir George Williams University during a day-long battle between students and police.

Students had occupied the centre since Jan. 29 in a protest over the makeup of a faculty committee named to hear charges of racism against a biology professor.

More than 90 persons were arrested and three policemen injured in the 10-hour melee, during which a fire broke out in the computer centre. Surrounding streets were littered with university records, registration cards, transcripts and computer tapes.

At the University of Windsor 55 students barricaded themselves in the administrative building early Tuesday and were joined by 30 others Tuesday night in a protest over the dismissal of a professor. They took over the theology, classics and psychology departments and have broadened their demands for a greater share in departmental decisions.

Corporations Act Changes Drafted

OTTAWA (CP) — Amendments to the Canada Corporations Act now are in the final drafting stage and a wholesale revision of the basic law governing federally-incorporated companies will be undertaken next year, a government source said Tuesday.

The amendments to be introduced by Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford this spring cover five general areas. The details will be made public only when the bill is submitted to Parliament.

The amendments set new rules for corporate business disclosure, trading in corporate securities by insiders, proxy solicitation, take-over bids, and federal powers of investigation and research.

Some of the amendments flow from recommendations of the Watkins inquiry into foreign ownership and control of Canadian industry. But a cabinet source said the government is not going as far as proposed by the group of professors headed by Melville Watkins of the University of Toronto.

The Watkins report, issued Feb. 15, 1968, after a year's study, emphasized the growing importance in Canadian industry of the multi-national corporation, usually with its headquarters in the United States, and world-wide economic influence.

Rush Gets 10 Years

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto stock promoter Myer Rush today was sentenced to 10 years in prison for possessing five cheques obtained under false pretences.

Rush, 45, was convicted Feb. 5 of obtaining the cheques, totalling $5,640, from four United States citizens.

The Crown charged that Rush acquired lists of shareholders in four dormant Ontario mining companies, then notified them the shares had become valuable and could be exchanged for shares of Darien Exploration Co. by paying a transfer fee through British Overseas Mutual Fund, the transfer agent.

Rush was sentenced by Chief Justice Dalton Walls of the Ontario Supreme Court after a 12-day trial and testimony from 22 witnesses.

World Premiere

NBC Film Holds Viewer's Attention

NEW YORK (AP)— Any Second Now, one of those feature-length films NBC has made for its World Premiere series Tuesday nights, was one-quarter suspense, one-quarter soap opera and about fifty per cent padding.

But somehow it was suspenseful and sudsy enough to hold the viewer's attention for the full two hours—minus all those commercials, of course.

The film—which would have made a pretty good one-hour show—had a complicated plot that relied almost entirely upon coincidence and it had one of the glossiest, most maladroit villains since George Sanders retired from B movie features.

There was our heroine, Lois Nettleton, cast as an enormously rich heiress madly in love with her husband, played by Stewart Granger, a suave and handsome rotter if ever there was one.

The couple set off on a Mexican vacation and encounter a touring group of students led by an attractive schoolmarm.

It took about a half hour to set up the circumstance, but the wife stumbled across her husband in the arms of the tour leader. She announced, when he returned home, she was leaving to get a divorce.

Then the plot thickened. Paul, the husband, was threatened with the loss of that lovely money and in the dead of night sneaked out and did something to the brakes on her car. Just as the wife was leaving, a woman she had hired as a secretary arrived. They left together in the car, which went over a cliff and the secretary was killed.

We daytime soap opera viewers knew what would come next. The dead woman was mistakenly identified as the wife. Our heroine suffered amnesia and didn't know who she was or recognize her husband.

For the rest of the show, Paul was sulking around making unsuccessful attempts to kill his wife before she recovered her memory. After each failure, he would grab a bottle and get drunk.

Earlier, on CBS's Lancer, Frank McHugh—who used to play the best drunks in the movies—made one of his rare guest appearances. He played a Western drunk.

The series, built along the Bonanza lines, is standard cowboy stuff, with a touch of heart added in the Tuesday night episode. The Lancer family—father and two sons—wanted to bring law and order to Spanish Wells but some bad guys wanted it to remain an open town. There were some beatings and a little shooting but it was the town drunk who was brave enough to volunteer to build a jail, the first step toward getting a marshal.

The whole business was so uplifting that old Charlie went on the wagon.

Babies Hit Bottom

Although more couples are getting married, Canada's birth rate continues to decline with 1968 marking the eleventh consecutive drop in live births per 1,000 population. The estimated figure last year is 17.7 per 1,000 against 28.2 in 1957. Total births declined to about 367,000 from 370,900 the year before. The annual total has been dropping steadily from the record of 479,300 in 1959. Marriages on the other hand numbered a record 176,000, up from the previous high of 165,900 the year before. Sociologists claim the birth drop is not necessarily related to the increase in birth control pills, a statement underlined by the fact that births were declining three years before marketing of such pills in Canada. Legislative Probe Planned

Dairies' Jersey Milk Sales Said Higher Than Purchases

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario legislature's agriculture committee Tuesday heard charges of milk marketing irregularities and voted to subpoena the records of all dairies and shippers in the province handling Guernsey and Jersey milk.

George McLaughlin, chairman of the Ontario milk marketing board, making the charges, said a greater volume of milk is being sold under Jersey and Guernsey gold labels then is sold to dairies by the producers specializing in those Channel Island breeds.

He said most shippers and dairies have no facilities for keeping Channel Island milk separate from standard-breed milks such as Holstein.

He offered to produce marketing-board records to back up his statements that dairies are marketing more milk described as the Channel Island variety, which contains higher proportions of fat and protein, than is delivered to them. Some dairies seek Channel Island milk more for butter and cream production than for fluid sales, he said.

The motion authorizing the investigation also calls for the records of the marketing board and the Ontario milk commission to be subpoenaed.

Tuesday's special meeting of the agriculture committee had been called to hear objections from Channel Island producers and dairies to a proposed amendment to the Milk Act giving the marketing board the power to make regulations binding on producers, processors and shippers.

The committee finally voted in favor of the amendment, sending it to the legislature for approval, but not before Agriculture Minister William Stewart changed its wording in an attempt to placate the Channel Island interests.

The change, he said, "allows anyone to challenge in the courts any regulation at any time, whether passed now or in the past."

Mr. Stewart said the original wording "could have been misconstrued that we were trying to deny someone justice, and I assure you this was not our intention."

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For February 13

Your birthday today: Both ends are concentrated against the middle during the coming year. It will be difficult to translate increasingly high personal energies into actions for your own benefit; scattered efforts will only help everybody else first. Expect great expansion and exposure. Today's natives are fond of historical fact, research, and literal reconstructions of the past.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): If you can be just your normal self without strutting, boasting, this can be one of the luckiest days in several weeks. Your efforts really sparkle with the self-respect you project. Celebrate!

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Group activities are under some pressure, but keep a cheerful surface going. Side-step hasty actions. Focus on the diplomatic approach, the soft sell.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Your patience is just as important today as yesterday, and there is even more need to avoid getting needlessly entangled in differences of opinion. Wait for better information.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Where resources of any sort are shared, discussion may arise. There is a great deal to be gained from full conference with those you love and trust.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Now comes a time when your emotional needs shield you from seeing life and some situations as others see them. A positive approach eventually pays off, even where deception is attempted.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): The conservative approach is the only feasible path today. Guide your actions and statements accordingly. Notice how everybody has his own version about what is best.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): You spread out a bit today and share many emotional and aesthetic satisfactions with people you care about. Romantic interests thrive. Financial moves are better deferred.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Personal feelings build up and bring powerful reactions, according to your attitudes and the situation. The optimistic slant is best — even where it may seem unrealistic. Promote and protect human dignity, particularly your own.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Go along with your friends and seek to improve and expand what you hold in common. Consistent application of thought and skill to your work pays off well.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): A sense of well-being, of improving potentials spring up within. Express your skills for organizational talent while this mood runs. Financial moves and friendship are now extremely incompatible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Glib talk is all about you; once you get the basic drift, go on with a more thoughtful survey of what the story is. Purchasing is better postponed or minimized since conditions are about to change for you.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Vigorous expression may overset all inhibitions. Hasty letters torn up before mailing offer a safe outlet until your meditations show you the truer and wiser course.

Dennis Says He Cannot Get Talks with Davis

TORONTO (CP) — Lloyd Dennis, co-chairman of the Hall-Dennis report on the aims and objectives of education in Ontario, says he has tried unsuccessfully several times to arrange meetings with Education Minister William Davis.

Mr. Dennis, now director of education for the Leeds-Grenville board of education, spent 1½ hours Tuesday talking with the Ontario legislature's standing committee on education and university affairs about ways to make schools places in which children will want to learn. He said:

"We don't want any more students leaving school and saying "I'll never learn again. It was a horrible experience."

Mr. Dennis said the report should now be studied by another committee which would determine the feasibility of implementing its recommendations for better and less punitive teaching methods.

He told reporters later he had made several attempts to get in touch with Mr. Davis to discuss the report and the possibility of setting up a continuing committee on education in Ontario.

But the education minister had perhaps been too busy to see him.

Lumbermen Are Called Inefficient

MONTREAL (CP) — Donald D. Lockhart of Ottawa, general manager of the Canadian Lumbermen's Association, Tuesday criticized Eastern Canada members for what he called their lack of imagination and antiquated methods of operation.

He told the delegates to the association's convention here:

"The associations in Eastern Canada ... are getting very poor value for your money. You are keeping alive an archaic set-up and you are underwriting inefficiency, overlap, confusion and in certain cases, rank stupidity.

"Your associations ... pay the bills ... but have not moved with the times; they have not changed, and you—the representatives of the forest products industries—have seemingly been quite content to let this situation continue and worsen."

Mr. Lockhart outlined areas where improvements and innovations could be introduced:

1. A computer could make complete statistical reports available to all members instantaneously;
2. A more efficient softwood grading could be set up, eliminating four different grading agencies and stamps;
3. Studies relating to costs of doing business should be made;
4. Promotion should be started since there is no one organization in Eastern Canada spending one cent of any kind on promotion.

Cigarette Ad Mailed in Error

MONTREAL (CP) — A spokesman for Imperial Tobacco Co. of Canada Ltd., said Tuesday as many as 200 children under 18 years of age may have received cigarette advertising as a result of an error made by a mailing house.

The mother of a 10-year-old boy who got the promotional mail complained to her MP when her son received a letter along with a "gift guide" addressed to Master G. Peterson, of Smithville, Ont.

The cigarette company spokesman said the mailing house had apparently erred "for the first time in 50 years of service" and that the company was considerably embarrassed by the mistake.

Decision Now Back in Hands of Municipal Board

• It's Fear of Competition: Porter • Delay Means Wastebasket: Robinson

• Could Destroy Fabric of Commercial Section: Macaulay

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The decision on Belleville's disputed northend shopping centre project is now back with the Ontario Municipal Board.

A two-man OMB team has returned to Toronto to sift justifications supporting and denying the $3,000,000 project gleaned during a seven - day inquiry on the spot in Belleville.

The hearing ended last night after lawyers for both sides summed up arguments for the adversaries in the controversy — the city and plaza developer Cambridge Leaseholds on one side, Oshawa Wholesale and the eastend plaza merchants on the other.

Among opinions and warnings of counsel as they handed the issue back to the OMB were:

City solicitor E. Guss Porter — "The underlying foundation of the objection is one plain and simple thing: Fear of competition."

Cambridge Leaseholds lawyer R. B. Robinson: "It is based on a situation of new buoyancy which has come to the community . . . an optimism which is apparent in Belleville."

Oshawa Wholesale counsel Robert Macaulay: "I think this can have the most serious financial implications . . . They could destroy the fabric of the commercial section in this city."

Mr. Macaulay denounced the planning surrounding the project and said city council and the city's planning authorities were "flying by the seat of their pants without a map" and predicted a "bumpy landing."

He also warned if the news media had not recounted details of the issue "any better in the last year, Bellevillians do not know the story.

"Who was pointing out the other side of the story" he demanded. "It has never been told."

OMB panel chairman W. H. J. Thompson also pondered city council's approach to the economic aspects of the issue.

Premiers and PM Agree Parley Striking Success

Bail Denied To 97

MONTREAL (CP) — Ninety-seven persons arraigned Wednesday on conspiracy charges resulting from a student rampage at Sir George Williams University were denied bail and will remain in jail for six days awaiting preliminary hearing.

The 97, including seven juveniles under 18, were arrested after a two-week occupation of the downtown university culminated Tuesday in the destruction of the university's $1,000,000 computer centre.

An estimated additional $1,000,000 damage was caused by water and smoke from fires set to smashed furniture and equipment.

Bail was refused Wednesday to the 90 adults by Municipal Court Judge Maurice Johnson because they were liable, he said, to heavy prison terms if found guilty and "several are from outside Canada and might decide to return home before the trial."

Judge Johnson said the offences could carry prison terms varying from life to five years.

Preliminary hearing was set for Tuesday.

The seven juveniles were arraigned in social welfare court and were also denied bail.

Of those arrested at least 45 were described as non-Canadians. One is Cheddi Jagan Jr., 19, son of Opposition Leader Cheddi Jagan of Guyana.

Forty-two of the 97 are black, including one juvenile, and at least 11 were not enrolled at Sir George Williams.

Two other persons, arrested for disturbing the peace outside the university, were freed on $70 and $300 bail each.

Reaction Same Coast to Coast

OTTAWA (CP) — Without reaching any major agreements, the three-day federal-provincial constitutional conference ended Wednesday amid claims that it was a resounding success.

As committees now set out to complete the massive chores handed to them by the 11 heads of government, Prime Minister Trudeau and the assembled premiers left the conference expressing delight at its success.

"I was most encouraged," said the prime minister, who had sat for three days under the glare of television cameras, often fending off 10-pronged attacks against his government.

"There were no areas of disappointment," he said.

"We have come a long way in three days," said Premier John Robarts of Ontario.

"I am delighted with it," said Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia.

Although the conference, widely-billed in advance as a crucial meeting for the future of Confederation, did not give its final stamp of approval to any of the major issues facing it, there was general agreement that adequate steps were taken in that direction.

For Other Stories on Constitutional Conference

For instance, Mr. Trudeau said he was "extremely encouraged" by the support given—at least in principle—to the question of writing human rights into the constitution. A year ago, he said, only four provinces supported this, and now there were varying degrees of support from seven or eight provinces.

The delicate question of language rights was another of the issues that had been expected to provoke heated debate — based on some of the provincial briefs made public prior to the conference—but it turned out to be a moderate discussion. And then, like most other issues, it was turned over to a committee.

Among other issues turned over to committees:

—A comprehensive review of the Canadian constitution, which is to be conducted "at an accelerated pace."

—All matters relating to fundamental rights, and the question whether they should be entrenched in the constitution.

—Distribution of powers between federal and provincial governments, especially fiscal powers.

—The question of regional economic disparities.

—Reform of the Senate and the judiciary.

—Development of a Canadian capital region, which would include Ottawa, Hull and adjoining municipalities.

In addition, the conference decided to reconvene the federal-provincial tax structure committee to examine the occupancy of available tax fields by the two levels of government and shared-cost programs.

Regarding the referrals to committee, the prime minister said he was "a great believer in delegative powers, so we can reach as broad as consensus as possible."

"And there has been so much progress in the last year."

Premier Bennett also held that view.

Premier G. I. Smith of Nova Scotia said: "No one is ever completely satisfied with the results of any conference but I think this one achieved something, certainly as much as we expected."

Premier Louis Robichaud of New Brunswick termed the meeting one of the most successful constitutional conferences he has ever attended.

Premier Alex Campbell, who at 35 was the youngest premier at the conference, said: "There was a general sense of urgency and this was reflected in the attitude of those who participated."

Premier J. R. Smallwood of Newfoundland termed it "a very useful conference" and said it fulfilled its main purpose of "giving the people of Canada a great deal of information."

Premier Harry Strom of Alberta said his delegation was not so much concerned with the narrow provincial viewpoint as with "the broad western scope of things."

Premier Walter Weir of Manitoba said he was gratified that steps had been taken toward dealing with "quite a large part of the concerns" the province had brought to the conference."

Quebec Takes Stand

Right to Make Treaties Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's reformed constitution should make "clear and beyond a doubt" rights of the provinces to sign treaties in areas within their jurisdiction, Quebec argued Wednesday.

In a working paper presented to the constitutional conference, the province rejected Ottawa's argument that treaty-making is the exclusive responsibility of the federal government.

The Quebec paper was tabled by Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand just minutes before the end of the conference, in a manner curiously similar to the way Ottawa tabled its own views at the first conference a year ago.

It was described not as the firm stand of Quebec on the subject but as a series of proposals that could be modified in negotiations.

And while the basic thesis appeared directly contrary to Ottawa's position, it contained a number of points not unlike those that Ottawa has put forward.

It also said the aim of the proposals is to resolve "internal tensions and misunderstandings" arising from Quebec's international activities.

There was no immediate federal reaction to the proposals, although Prime Minister Trudeau commented at a news conference that there were indications of progress on the question of Quebec-Canadian representation at international French-speaking conferences.

He referred to last month's education conference in The Congo-Kinshasha and the Niger cultural conference next week, both instances in which Ottawa and Quebec City have worked out practical solutions to the representation problem while leaving theoretical questions in abeyance.

The Quebec paper, while claiming treaty-making rights, said that in a federal state, "the constituent parts must arrange their exchanges abroad so that they will remain within the limits set by the federation's foreign policy."

It therefore proposed that the provinces consult Ottawa before signing an agreement.

Ottawa could refuse assent, the paper said, but it did not make clear whether the province then would be bound to drop the matter.

Ottawa, on the other hand, would consult the provinces when planning an agreement affecting areas under provincial jurisdiction.

Israel Says Egypt Supplies Bases for Guerrillas

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Egypt has joined the group of Arab nations providing bases and support for guerrilla fighters attacking Israel, the Israelis have charged at the United Nations.

Israeli delegate Josef Tekoah told the Security Council Wednesday that nine Bedouin war refugees the Israelis captured in the Sinai Desert Jan. 15-16 admitted they were sent across the Suez Canal by the Egyptian military intelligence service.

Previous Israeli charges of guerrilla support were directed at Jordan, Syria and Lebanon.

Tekoah said the nine admitted they had been recruited by sheiks in a refugee camp near Alexandria. They added the sheiks were paid for supplying quotas of recruits.

Meanwhile in Cairo the Egyptian government agreed to a proposal by owners of ships trapped in the Suez Canal to survey the bed of the southern part of the waterway to determine if the vessels could be moved out that way.

Dr. Mohammed Hassan el-Zayyat said in answer to questions about latest moves regarding the 14 trapped ships that shipowners offered to do the survey at their own expense.

The ships were trapped in the canal during the six-day war of June, 1967.

City Wants Plaza: Porter

Not Function of OMB to Hold Up Plans Says Solicitor

The Ontario Municipal Board decision on the north-end plaza project is of "vital importance" to Bellevillians as a whole, city solicitor E. Guss Porter claimed yesterday.

Mr. Porter led off the legal summations as the board hearing on the city's rezoning application, which would make the project possible, entered its final day.

The application was not dealt with in any "offhand way" either by the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board or city council. It was before both groups on six different occasions, he said.

Services, drainage and traffic problems had been considered then and at subsequent meetings with various officials.

With the exception of traffic and drainage no problem exists and, with installations to be made in the North Front Street area in the near future, facilities will be adequate to serve the shopping centre's needs.

Board hearing chairman W. H. J. Thompson was concerned with the speed with which the application was processed from city council to the planning board early last year.

It indicated, he said, a "very fast study was done — or no study at all."

"It may well be that this is an appropriate plan. It may just be a lucky hit," he commented.

"I'm not suggesting that the final recommendations of the planning board were perfect," conceded Mr. Porter.

But, added the city solicitor, he had never known a rezoning bylaw that was.

The underlying foundation of opposition to the rezoning bid "is one plain and simple thing — fear of competition."

No concern was shown for downtown merchants or traffic control when Oshawa Wholesale's Towers enterprise located outside Belleville's west limits, said Mr. Porter.

Free enterprise is basic to society, and it "would be going against such well-established principles as these to allow a matter of competition to enter into the board's deliberation."

It also has been suggested that the shopping centre would be premature because of the current urban renewal study, but, Mr. Porter submitted, this was not reasonable.

E. GUSS PORTER

Allen Brass, consultant in charge of the study, made no suggestions to council despite the fact he knew of the project "for many months."

The proposed plaza should be taken as a factor in the urban renewal scheme, he submitted.

It requires "only an elementary knowledge of trends to know if this shopping centre is not constructed now, some shopping centre will be located in this general area" to meet demand within "the next 20 years or next few years."

The consultants should accept the fact "there is going to be a shopping centre in this area eventually if not immediately."

"It is not a function of this board to hold up development of one area of a municipality because there is a possibility of there being, sometime in the unknown future, development in another area of the city.

"To do so would be to create a precedent based on wrong principle," claimed Mr. Porter.

OMB panel member E. B Smith queried the affect on an official plan.

Mr. Porter said there had been no evidence to show there would be an official plan in the "foreseeable future."

The city solicitor said there had been no suggestion from downtown merchants that business was bad in the city's commercial core.

Of seven who testified before the hearing only one had said the project was premature.

Interposed hearing chairman W. H. J. Thompson: "Apart from the fact that Mr. Macaulay acts for the downtown businessmen's association.

"He does not," said Mr. Porter.

"I thought he did", said the chairman, then added: "It seems to me the downtown merchants could care less."

Mr. Porter submitted downtown business was excellent.

The city solicitor said council had passed the rezoning bylaw and it "must be assumed they acted in the best interest of the citizens at large . . . and their decision must be accorded the importance which their mandate confers.

"It is my submission," concluded Mr. Porter . . . there is a heavy onus cast on the objectors of this application to show that approval of this application would not be in the public interest and that the plenary power of the elected representatives of the city of Belleville should be overruled."

IN MEMORIAM

BUSH — In loving memory of my dear wife who passed away suddenly, Feb. 13th, 1967.

No one knows our heartaches,
Only those who have lost can tell
Of the grief that I bear in silence
For the one I loved so well.

In fond memory her loving husband Bert Bush.

SERO — In loving memory of a dear son, Freeman Franklin Sero who passed away Feb. 13, 1964.

Today recalls the memory
Of a loved one gone to rest;
And those who think of him today
Are those who loved him best.
The flowers we lay upon his grave
May wither and decay,
But the love for him who lies beneath
Will never fade away.

—Always remembered by mother, Dad, sister Peggy and brother-in-law Tom.

BUSH — Idella passed away Feb. 13th, 1967.

Loving and kind in all her ways,
Upright and just to the end of her days;
Sincere and true, in her heart and mind,
Beautiful memories she left behind.

—Lovingly remembered by nieces and nephews, Marie, Helen, Harry, Ross, Albert and families, also Charles R. Fisher.

KNOX — In sad and loving memory of a dear husband and father, James Wilmot Knox, who passed away, Feb. 13th, 1968.

He would not wish for sorrow,
He would not wish for tears,
But just to be remembered,
Throughout the years.

—Always remembered by wife and family.

Buoyancy of City Warrants Plaza: Cambridge

The North Front Street plaza scheme is part of a constantly shifting economic pattern of society, R. B. Robinson, counsel for the project's developer said yesterday.

The lawyer for Cambridge Leaseholds told the conclusion of the Ontario Municipal Board hearing in Belleville that the proposed centre presents new opportunity in the city.

"It is not every day of the week that developers and tenants recognize a demand in a municipalitty, come forward and are willing to proceed with a development," he said.

The current rezoning application was the result of building momentum and interest in the scheme, he said.

"If this application should be refused is it going to happen again?" he asked.

The inquiry had heard criticism of municipal officials, he said.

"When decisions are made they must be made fast. Timing and momentum are extremely important.

"When there is a feeling in the community that this should go ahead, it is necessary to seize opportunities.

Council and local planning authorities had made a "judgment decision" in the matter and this had validity.

There should be no criticism of a judgment decision taken in an "atmosphere of substantially no criticism."

The only opposition registered before city council came from a representative of Oshawa Wholesale.

There was none from downtown merchants and Allen Brass, consultant heading the urban renewal scheme, came forward only because he was subpoenaed.

R. B. ROBINSON

"Urban renewal is "vastly expensive" and will be of "some concern" to council, he submitted.

The project is "based on a situation of new buoyancy which has come to the community" and will be reflected in population growth.

The local market analysis by consulant V. P. Boname supporting Cambridge's case had been shown to contain errors, but the study itself had been deliberatly based on conservative estimates, he said.

The population projections in the Boname study, based on a 1961 census and subsequently republished twice in provincial government surveys had to be regularly updated.

If the government felt such statistics were no longer valid they would not have been published.

"Not that there is anything wrong with these (Boname) population projections, with the bouyancy as now being felt (in Belleville)."

Mr. Robinson said he based his feelings for bouyancy not on past growth, but on what had happened in Belleville in the past 18 months.

"These developments are meaningful," he said.

Downtown Belleville had many built-in advantages — it was an institutional and entertainment centre, and offered a fine selection of consumer goods.

There had been a million-dollar assessment drop in the downtown area in 1967 but many of the district's buildings were 76 years old and this leads to depreciation and obsolescence.

"This is going to continue unless a great deal of renewal takes place," he warned.

Opponents of the plaza did not see it as a growth factor but as a project "scraping away" at existing consumer potential.

Board panel chairman W. H J. Thompson said the sales figure claimed for the plaza by the opposition — about 34 per cent of all local retail trade — would have "tremendous impact" on existing commercial outlets.

"I don't think city council has any idea of the impact on their merchants," he commented.

Mr. Robinson admitted "there is going to be some effect."

However, he didn't think "there is simply a captive number of dollars in the Belleville area which is not subject to any increase."

Mr. Robinson looked to a "good, healthy" population increase in the area and a natural rise in consumer spending.

"I really think Belleville is going to be better than it was before. It is going to be a better magnet than it was before," he said.

Serious Financial Implications If Plaza Approved Says Towers

Belleville has launched itself into a new shopping centre development without proper planning with the "most serious financial implications" for the community, warned Robert Macaulay yesterday.

Ramifications of a northend plaza could be immense, the counsel for opponents to the new project warned the Ontario Municipal Board hearing yesterday.

And, claimed Mr. Macaulay, representing Oshawa Wholesale and the eastend plaza merchants, the full story of the project has never been told.

The rezoning by-law which was the core of the inquiry, does not provide any protection of municipal interests, said Mr. Macaulay.

In a lengthy summation before the hearing concluded, the opposition counsel criticized the project for lack of specific details on services, building height and traffic control.

Neither, he pointed out, is there any financial protection for the municipality.

No bond has been posted by the developer because "nobody thought about it."

The original rezoning application in early 1968 had passed through city council and the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board in 11 days.

A traffic count in the area to be rezoned had not been made until last November — three weeks after the first board hearing had been originally scheduled.

"I submit these people have made an arbitrary decision on no information at all", charged Mr. Macaulay.

Council and the planning board have nothing to go on, he said.

Nobody pointed out that $1,000,000 had been struck off the assessment roles in downtown Belleville.

"We're playing with dynamite here, regardless of what one would feel about the merchants."

Mr. Macaulay also noted a petition had been refused Tuesday by the OMB panel, while he was in Toronto.

He said he would have objected. The petitioners are "very upset — and they represent 60 per cent of the merchants that you've cut out," he told the board.

Hearing chairman W. H. J. Thompson took exception to the statement. Terms of the bylaw were published last July and the downtown merchants had "plenty opportunity" to register objections.

Mr. Macaulay demanded to know why the city's assessment commissioner was not called before the hearing, together with the present city planner and former planner P. J. Beavis.

Neither did the inquiry hear from a police official quoted in a planning board meeting as being concerned with traffic problems in the proposed plaza area.

Assistant city planner Frank Stokmans also had admitted the municipality was not properly protected in the bylaw, he said.

ROBERT MACAULAY

"I don't think you can negate an admission of that sort" he said.

Elsewhere, Mr. Macaulay charged the city had "proceeded with inordinate haste" without "proper information" or an official plan.

A serious drainage problem could involve the city in injunctions and law suits, while a "real fat bill" could be the result of a new road giving access to the centre.

Neither is their any evidence of the plaza's effect on the city's debt limit, said Mr. Macaulay.

He said it was "amply demonstrated" that there had been serious errors in the market study by Toronto consultant V. P. Boname supporting the project.

Population projections were not consistent with the historic growth pattern of the city and surrounding area. Local retail sales, exclusive of automobiles, now totalled some $41,000,000.

Based on statistics presented the hearing, the new plaza would eventually account for $14,000,000 sales.

The proposed centre thus would draw on 34 per cent of the total local trade, he claimed.

'If the details of this case have not been any better told over the last year by the news media of Belleville then people don't know about it," said Mr. Macaulay.

The source of plaza trade would be from "the people that now have it."

"They could destroy the fabric of the commercial section in this city," he warned.

Any official decision was at least premature until the conclusion of the current urban renewal scheme.

"We're in real trouble if Boname isn't correct," forecast Mr. Macaulay.

It was "hard to condone what this city has done" in the light of provincial planning regulations, he claimed.

In the absence of information and official planning "they were flying by the seat of their pants . . . they were flying around in the Boname machine," said Mr. Macaulay.

"Who was pointing out the other side of the story?" he demanded later. "It has never been told. It has never been told."

If there is a "new buoyancy" in Belleville, the city's history doesn't show it, he said.

Hog Producers Asked to Register

An appeal for county hog producers to apply for registration and thus speed up financial returns was made yesterday at the annual meeting of the Hastings County Hog Producers Association held at Ivanhoe.

Making the plea was district director Fred Crowe of Peterborough who said that the registration numbers would be used in a data processing system to be set up as a means of speeding up payments to farmers.

John Long, Canada department of agriculture, livestock division, reported on the new hog grading system which went into effect on Jan. 1.

Under the new grading system farmers are paid for saleable meat and this can mean more dollars for the production of better type hogs. The new system also allows for a wider weight range for market hogs.

Association president Douglas Farrell of Roslin reviewed last year's activities noting that hog production was more and more becoming a concentrated industry with fewer producers marketing the required number of hogs.

Committee men, all acclaimed are Donald Sills of Holloway, Morton Reid of Springbrook, Laurison Gunning and Milton Elliott of Tweed, Douglas Farrell of Roslin and Bill Rollins of Plainfield.

City Changes Aid Formula

Townships Consider Own Fire Departments To Cut Costs

By BARRY GRILLS

(Staff Reporter)

A proposed 1,400 per cent increase in fire protection costs to be paid to the city of Belleville has set movements afoot to institute one or more suburban fire department in the city's four neighboring townships.

Thurlow township is the latest of the four to express concern over the steep jump in fire protection costs from $10,000 to $142,000 for all four townships.

The other townships affected by the proposed change would be Sidney, Tyendinaga and Ameliasburg who are serviced, for the most part, by the Belleville Fire Department.

Ending officially in 1968 was a system whereby the townships paid a standby rate of $1,300 apiece and $32 per hour within seven miles of the Belleville fire stations and $65 per hour after the seven mile distance for fire protection.

Instead of that system, Belleville is proposing charging on a percentage basis as per equalization of assessment for fire protection under the mutual aid system.

And the tremendous jump in costs is being met with disfavor by the townships.

Ameliasburg Township was the first to express unhappiness with the idea when its costs threatened to jump from $2,495 in 1968 to $32,000 per year for the proposed protection change.

Ameliasburg, although its western sections are protected by the Trenton fire department, has gone on record as stating it would possibly start its own fire department, probably on a volunteer basis.

At its regular monthly meeting yesterday, Thurlow council suggested it might jump on the Ameliasburg bandwagon. If the system did change Thurlow's costs would jump from an average of $5,000 to $57,000 per year.

Sidney Township would pay $42,000 for fire protection and Tyendinaga would pay $11,000, a jump of approximately $9,000. Sidney has one pumping truck of its own and this could possibly service part of that township.

Thurlow reeve, Horace Casey, said, "I would hate to see us pay even half of $51,000.

Deputy-reeve, Borden Forsythe said, "We have no assurance that it won't go up."

At present there is a pumping fire truck and station within the Thurlow Township boundaries. The truck is owned by the Point Anne Volunteer Fire Department

The Point Anne truck would take care of its home base and possibly southern and eastern sections of Thurlow, but new equipment would have to be purchased for the rest of the township.

Should Thurlow buy this equipment, agreements might be entered into with Sidney and Tyendinaga so that this equipment would service all or parts of those townships.

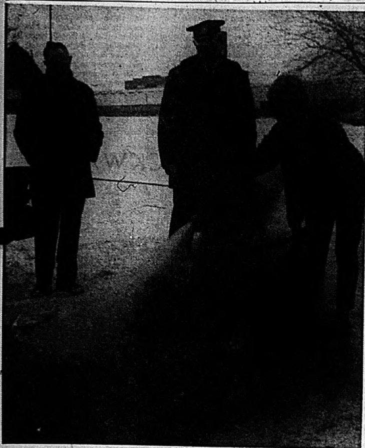
"There should be an agreement between Thurlow and Tyendinaga," said Thurlow clerk-treasurer, E. M. Defoe.

Vincent Mahar, chief of the Point Anne Fire Department, present at Thurlow's council meeting ,added, "I think Sidney should be contacted too, to see what they're going to do."

The four townships could possibly know where each stands following a meeting concerning the proposed change in Ameliasburg tomorrow night.

The discussion broke out when Thurlow council received correspondence from J. R. Reynolds, Belleville city manager, asking their plan in order that the city would know by the end of March when Belleville council will air its estimated budget for 1969.

Councillors decided to defer their decision to their next regular meeting, scheduled for March 12, to see what will be said at Ameliasburg tomorrow night.



Firefighting for Practice

Picton fire chief, Duane Foshay, conducted a display on the proper use of fire extinguishers yesterday. He explained to the staff of the Thompson Nursing Home the different types of extinguishers and what types of fires each should be used for.

Township Fire Aid Costs Less Than Any City Resident: Scott

Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott today justified the new rates proposed by the city to continue fire protection in the neighboring townships.

Under the proposed new rates, fire fighting costs for the townships would be increased by from 500 to 1400 per cent.

"We just can't go on giving fire protection to the townships for nothing," Mayor Scott said today.

Last year the four townships of Sidney, Thurlow, Tyendinaga and Ameliasburg paid the city just over $10,000 for fire protection. Under the proposed new agreements based on equalized assessment the cost to the townships would be approximately $140,000.

But in the meantime the city's cost for its fire department is expected to jump from $425,000 last year to about $527,000 in 1969.

The main reasons for the increase, according to Mayor Scott, is that this year city firemen will go on a 40 hour week necessitating the addition of 10 more firemen and the fact that the city is buying a new fire ladder.

Moyar Scott said the city's proposal had been submitted to all four townships and council was now awaiting a reply.

"The townships are holding a joint meeting Friday night to discuss what they want to do," said the mayor.

According to Mayor Scott township officials agree that the proposed additional charges are justified. Mayor Scott said city residents pay 5 mills for fire protection. The new rates for the townships are based on the same mill apportionment.

By way of illustrating the disparity of fire protection costs, Mayor Scot compared amounts paid by city property owners with amounts paid by rural residents.

Actually, he said, the lowest assessed house in the Hillcrest area, paid more for fire protection than did Tobes County Gardens in Ameliasburg.

And the highest assessed residence in Hillcrest paid more for fire protection than did Black Diamond Cheese in Thurlow township.

Mrs. MacDonald is resting at the John R. Bush Funeral Home. Service will be held in the chapel on Saturday, Feb. 15 at one o'clock.

Interment will be in Belleville cemetery with Rev. Roy E. Vessey officiating.

JANE ELIZABETH THOMPSON

BONARLAW — The funeral for Jane Elizabeth Thompson was held at the Howden Fuoeral Home on Tuesday afternoon. She died at Kingston General Hospital on Sunday, following a lengthy illness at the age of three. She had undergone treatment at Toronto and Belleville hospitals.

She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Thompson and is survived by her parents, sisters Mary Ellen and Margaret Ann, one brother, George; also her grandparents, Mrs. George Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Harrison.

Service was conducted by Rev. W. C. Cox.

Interment was in Mt. Nebo cemetery.

Plaza Now in OMB Hands

"I don't think city council has any idea of the impact on their merchants," he said.

At the same time the chairman also had comments on Belleville's downtown merchants.

"It seems to me the downtown merchants could careless," he said at one point during summations.

As Mr. Robinson was summing up his views of the dispute, Mr. Thompson also noted the issue might be a case of not disproving or approving a bylaw but of approving an amending bylaw.

The final public episode of the controversy lasted 5½ hours as counsel summed up the evidence since the hearing opened Feb. 4.

Mr. Porter held that the final decision could not be governed by issues of business competition.

Neither was it reasonable to suggest the North Front Street project was premature because a current urban renewal scheme had not been completed, he submitted.

It was not the function of the board to delay development in one area of the city on the possibility of development elsewhere "sometime in the unknown future."

The rezoning bylaw was passed by council and it must be assumed the city fathers "acted in the best interests of the citizens at large" . . . And their decision must be accorded the importance which their mandate confers."

Mr. Robinson warned against shelving the project.

If it were delayed "it is the waste basket, not the shelf," he said.

"If this application should be refused is it going to happen again?" queried Mr. Robinson.

Municipal officials had been criticized throughout the hearing, he said.

"When decisions are made they must be made fast, as timing and momentum are important," to such projects.

He emphasized that the study by market analyst V. P. Boname, supporting the project — and a key document in the controversy — had been deliberatly conservative.

Mr. Macaulay was roundly critical of both planning involved in the shopping centre project and the Boname study.

It posed serious questions—among them traffic and drainage control and fire hazards.

The city, he said, had proceeded with inordinate haste, without proper information or an official plan.

It was difficult to condone what had happened in view of provincial planning legislation, said Mr. Macaulay.

Both the population growth and commercial-space statistics in the Boname report had been shown to seriously err during the inquiry, he claimed.

Mr. Macaulay warned that the new shopping centre could siphon off 34 per cent of Belleville's total retail trade.

"They could destroy the fabric of the commercial section of this city," he warned.

Any decision should await the results of the urban renewal study to see if the city's decision was correct.

"Surely it's premature until the survey comes," said Mr. Macaulay.

Mr. Thompson gave no indication when an OMB decision would finally dispose of the current controversy.

"Because of the complexity of the evidence and the amount of exhibits the board is going to have to reserve its decision," he said.

"It will render its decision as soon as possible."

Ottawa Conference

The federal-provincial conference is a real "talkathon." By the time the prime minister and the provincial premiers have talked themselves out, the official record will contain several million more words on the issues of the constitution and fiscal policy, with special emphasis on tax-sharing and equalization payments.

To Canadians at large the thought occurs, why has it taken so long to achieve a satisfactory working arrangement between Ottawa and the provinces that will result in benefits for all provinces and Canadians throughout the land?

There are some 20,000,000 people in this country. Their standard of living varies from province to province, or more precisely from region to region. Ontario by and large is the most populous and affluent province in Canada — but it is not without its poor. In the Maritimes the wealth is still more unevenly distributed, and poverty a matter of some gravity. Of Canada's total population, no fewer than 4,000,000 are said to be living at the poverty level.

• • •

News reports have been full of the problems and complaints of the provinces as outlined by their premiers. We have heard from Ontario Premier Robarts how federal withdrawal from some shared-cost programs, (he cited medicare in particular) had cost the province $225 million, and how the province would either have to be compensated by Ottawa, raise taxes of its own or cut back on educational and other major problems.

Mr. Robarts, who incidentally received strong support from Premier Bertrand of Quebec, put it succinctly when he said that not only had Ottawa withdrawn from arrangements such as help to build technical and vocational schools, but had pressed the provinces to launch such new universal programs as medical care insurance. Medicare, he reminded the premiers, was a provincial field and, to finance its "intrusion" into this sphere, Ottawa without consultation had imposed a two per cent social development tax that he claimed further restricted the province's access to tax revenues.

The Maritime leaders on the other hand, dependent as they are on federal fiscal autonomy, want no weakening of federal power in this sphere — hardly surprising considering that Ottawa provides about 62 per cent of provincial revenues in Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island in equalization payments and other financial aid.

As we have noted, Canada has only 20,000,000 people — in a land of vast overall wealth. Yet there are regional inequities which as Premier Robichaud of New Brunswick pointed out are mainly a matter of nature and accident. Mr. Robichaud took a realistic view when he said these inequities probably could not be wiped out entirely, but the constitution should take note of them and envisage policies to deal with them.

• • •

As for that other aspect of the constitutional puzzle — the status of Quebec — Premier Bertrand laid it on the line perhaps more clearly than even Daniel Johnson before him. And unlike Mr. Johnson (whose English was as impeccable as Mr. Trudeau's) he said it in French. It was not just a matter of personal or linguistic rights, said Mr. Bertrand . . . "What French Canadians from Quebec want is the opportunity to live together in French, to work in French, to build a society in their image and to be able to organize their community life so that it will reflect their culture."

This, he said, would mean "a completely new constitution" and the granting to Quebec of "powers proportionate to the responsibilities" it has as mainstay of French Canada."

The statement was as near to an outright declaration of independence, without actually saying so, as Mr. Bertrand (or the late Mr. Johnson for that matter) has come. But independence? Well where would the money come from then? Mr. Bertrand stops short, because money — just as it is in varying degrees to the other provinces — to him is important. Who controls the purse strings, and in relation to what issues, is what this conference in Ottawa must try to resolve.

Ottawa Offbeat

Is Dief Still the Chief of PC's Mutinous Crew?

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — This has got to be the most peculiar of Parliaments.

The kookiest of Commons.

There is Prime Minister Trudeau so much the authoritarian that he finds it necessary to let his cabinet say just about anything that pops into their heads — just to prove he is something of a democrat.

And there is Conservative Leader Stanfield so much the democrat that he finds it necessary to try gagging some of his "shadow cabinet" — just to prove he is enough of an authoritarian.

The only thing Trudeau and Stanfield have in common is the problem of image.

The prime minister rules. Like a monarch or even a dictator. Unchallenged.

The opposition leader presides. As a chairman or perhaps a magistrate. Questioned.

One is sure. The other uncertain.

Stanfield's hang-up, like Trudeau's, is his people. The men around him.

Trudeau, a political Captain Bligh, runs an extremely tight ship.

Caucus is a must for all hands. Discipline is rigid. If the prime minister and cabinet do not feel like consulting the government's backbenchers on big policy decisions, they do not get to hear them until they are announced in the Commons.

It was that way with the raise in the postal rates.

Stanfield, more like the skipper of a holiday cruise, runs a slack ship.

Caucus can be cut and often is by a number of prairie MPs who still mutter about the way Dief the Chief was made to walk the plank.

Policy is not often spelled out at caucus, because to hear some of the dissidents tell it, who knows what policy is?

At the Liberal caucus, backbenchers go along quietly with orders from Trudeau and his officers on the party bridge.

At the Conservative caucus, mutiny forever threatens.

But the sharpest contrast becomes in the handling of lieutenants.

There is nothing official about it — little more than an "understanding" — but the party pressure has been on to phase John Diefenbaker out of the glare of the TV cameras.

The Old Chief has been getting far too much exposure — at least in the eyes of the Tory high command—compared with the new leader.

The difficulty is that the Man from Prince Albert just happens to be the answer to a TV reporter's prayer. Ready, willing and more than able to sound off — with appropriate muggings and gesturings — on any given issue.

Stanfield over-aware of what he views as "responsibility," is far more careful, chooses his words, shows little animation, reflects no excitement, and is not always ready to say something about everything.

So there has been some "leaning" on the TV and radio news crews . . . little nods and hints, smiles and suggestions that "after all, Stanfield is the leader." It has got to the point that these "leaners" have pressured the electronic reporters and commentators with such thinly-veiled threats as "Oh, by the way, I am having lunch—or dining—or seeing — your boss (CBC Chairman George Davidson.)"

How different with Trudeau.

Just to show that he is not really El Supremo, he has cut loose the cabinet to compete for the headlines and the camera's eye with just about anything they might like to snap off the top of their heads.

Like Secretary of State Pelletier suggesting the government "could look at" such ideas as conscripting students for a year of national service. (Maybe not a completely wacky idea, either.)

Like Postmaster General Kierans, that self-proclaimed military "expert" who suffers eternally from foot-in-mouth disease. He can't even run the Post Office — just got through openly confessing that the public is paying more for less mail service — and he wants to get into all fields of communication from phones to satellites.

King Trudeau considers his throne so supremely secure he can let the Clown Princes play all the word games they want.

"With a Cabinet like that who needs an Opposition!"

Canada Needs Dollar- a-year Men

Cobourg Sentinel - Star

Whatever happened to the dollar-a-year man?

Almost a generation ago Canada had many dollar-a - year men. It was war time. It was the day of the black market when rationing was in effect. All anyone needed to to do to get more than his quota of edibles was to leave Ontario for Montreal and Quebec province. The Quebecois paid as much attention to the morals of wartime effort as the draft dodgers do in the States to the confrontation with Vietnam.

But, from the rest of Canada came the dollar-a-year men to help a nation at war. Into the Wartime Price and Trade Board they went, from industry, even from the weekly newspaper to serve their country in time of need.

Today, we have a society of classes which are segregated, not by choice but by income; those on welfare, those hard put to make ends meet, those who live on credit, those who save ten cents, and the many who don't need the income they get.

From the latter could come again an army of dollar-a-year men. Last month Mr. Robarts went to Germany to borrow money. Last month Mr. Robarts said Ontario people would likely be taxed more because of provincial monetary difficulties. Mr. Robarts and his company of ministers have let cost conditions far exceed commonsense. Ontario is in need of financial help, especially because of wasteful expenditures in education.

The labor union tycoon, rich strikes, walkouts, and union dues could well afford to give one year without pay to the cause of government; the manufacturer who reaped an unprecedented profit last year also can afford to send three or four of his men to serve, perhaps as Directors of Education, or as Comptrollers, or as Business Administrators; multiply dollar-a-year efforts and the cost of education is reduced right across the province.

Unless we have dollar-a-year men in the field of education and other key endeavors in Canada we are going to suffer the most serious avalanche of taxation in the history of Canada. Everything is going up in price; everyone wants more money.

Common-Law Marriage

Brockville Recorder and Times

Common-law marriages don't carry the stigma that was once attached to them but they still fall far short of a good, legal marriage. There is too much of a degree of insecurity in such an arrangement, which is not the best from either a moral or a practical view.

Saturday Scene in City— Teens With Nothing to Do

Editor,

The Intelligencer.

As one walks down Front St. on a Saturday afternoon, one is aware of the vast number of teenagers.

Some are just strolling, in groups or in couples, some are in large groups on corners and in doorways.

A person can't help but wonder, what else is there for these kids to do?! Older people become quite annoyed with them, as they get in their way and block entrances. But, I repeat, what else is there for them? Why haven't we a Teen Centre, or a coffee house where these young people can go? Why can't the city, or the churches of the city, sponsor a place where they can go, have a coke, chat with their friends, even dance a little? A place they can call their own, big enough to accommodate goodly numbers, and provide them with varied interests.

We as adults, should care what our teenagers are doing, and let them know we care! This should concern us. Is it impossible to do something for these kids? If not, who would get the ball rolling? Could we take a poll of the teenagers and find out exactly how they feel about this and if a coffee house or Teen centre would appeal to them? Who would take the responsibility of getting something done? Or is there no one!

A CONCERNED MOTHER

Post Office Boxholders

Editor,

The Intelligencer.

The Trudeau government is unfair in doubling the rates for post office boxholders because that is a money saving service. I speak for urban residents living in towns who have to walk or drive to the post office daily to pick up their mail.

Hanover, with a population of 5,000, has 1,350 boxholders paying $2, $3, or $5 a year for lock boxes, while another 400 get their mail at the wicket which requires the service of a clerk.

I also question whether city boxes should be raised when they, too, eliminate free home and office delivery. But there is that alternative free delivery service which the townspeople do not have. The box number is also a big time saver in sorting the mail.

Mr. Kierans! Don't kill your profitable goose.

Costly Program

Missile Defence Issue Runs Into Senate Opposition

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP)—Senate critics of the United States missile defence system have been promised a much broader platform from which to launch their opposition and this is evidence of the winds of change reported swirling between Congress and the Pentagon.

Scientists hostile to the vastly-expensive program were assured Tuesday of the hearing they were denied last year. And on Wednesday, President Nixon asked the Senate to ratify promptly the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, to further his goal "of negotiation rather than confrontation with the U.S.S.R."

A bipartisan group of 12 senators argued on the Senate floor that the Sentinel anti-ballistic missiles system may not work, will cost billions more than the defence department predicts and may set off a new surge in the arms race.

Nixon's follow-up action seemed to imply a degree of sympathy with this view, particularly the fear of another round of arms escalation.

It all seems part of a subtle affront to the Capitol Hill influence that accrues to the defence department through its control over multi-million-dollar defence contracts and plants and real estate throughout the U.S.

In a related measure that implies the Pentagon may be in for a tough congressional session, the Senate foreign relations committee recently announced a subcommittee to investigate the influence of the military establishment on foreign policy.

The goal of the 12 senators is to block further funds for the so-called "thin" ABM system endorsed by the Johnson administration and, last week, by Defence Secretary Melvin Laird.

It is a two-missile system, to be installed around major U.S. cities and designed to cut down incoming enemy nuclear missiles.

Former defence chief Robert McNamara had said it is justified only as a defence against far less sophisticated Communist Chinese weapons. And it may become obsolete before such Chinese missiles become a real threat in the next decade or so.

But the Pentagon recently has been promoting it as a bargaining point in arms-reduction negotiations with the Soviet Union, an argument that many senators see as an irrational excuse for spending more money for gadgetry.

Opposition also is mounting in areas where the missile silos would be located—Seattle, Chicago, the Boston area and elsewhere. Senator Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts said that an accidental silo explosion "would cause total devastation in an area five miles in diameter."

The original price tag was put at $5,000,000,000 but, Senator Stuart Symington (Dem. Mo.) says he understands the cost will be at least $9,400,000,000. Other estimates range between these two figures.

Robarts, Old Pro at Federal-Provincial Game, Star of Parley

OTTAWA (CP) — The co-stars of the 1968 constitutional conference were then justice minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and the late premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec.

If there was any star of the 1969 constitutional conference it was probably Premier John Robarts of Ontario.

Mr. Robarts is an old pro in the federal-provincial game.

At one moment he was lashing Ottawa on fiscal matters—just in case he has to raise his own taxes soon. The next moment, he was the soul of conciliation.

Mr. Robarts, befitting the spokesman of Canada's wealthiest province, oozed confidence. He was in command on any subject he chose to discuss—and he chose most of them.

Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand saved his Sunday punch until late Wednesday.

He then drove home his main point that Ottawa should get out and stay out of provincial jurisdictional fields.

Mr. Bertrand was a lot less wordy than Mr. Johnson—and a lot more clear. He was direct and never tried to obscure his stand. In the long run, he may well prove tougher than Mr. Johnson.

Premier G. I. Smith of Nova Scotia was as impressive as usual in his quiet way. His main demand has been and still is that regional economic disparities must be corrected and his firm arguments seem to be bearing fruit.

Premier Louis Robichaud of New Brunswick was eloquent—in both languages—in his defence of French-language rights, not a popular stand in all areas of his province.

Premier Walter Weir of Manitoba was the conference's stubborn man. He came to Ottawa with one idea—fiscal rights for the provinces—and would not be put down by Mr. Trudeau in three exchanges.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia delivered another optimistic survey on what he calls unhyphenated Canadianism.

Deputy Premier D. G. Steuart of Saskatchewan helped out with some prairie wit.

Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland was the featured entertainer. At 68, he can still out-talk a circus barker. He managed to upset both Mr. Robarts and Mr. Bertrand, which takes some doing.

Premier Harry Strom of Alberta, like Mr. Bertrand, was a newcomer. He steered a cool passage through the thorny issue of language rights.

Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island was probably the most popular man at the conference, as well as being the youngest at 35.

Robarts Is Pleased

Additional Confederation-of-Tomorrow Conferences Are Unlikely to Be Needed

OTTAWA (CP) — Success of the federal-provincial constitutional conference, and a promise to hold others at more frequent intervals, means further provincial Confederation-of-Tomorrow conferences may not be necessary, Ontario Premier John Robarts said Wednesday.

"It may never be necessary to call another," he told reporters at the conclusion of the three-day federal-provincial conference.

The provincial conference, held in Toronto a year ago with the federal government attending as an observer, appointed a continuing committee to plan future meetings.

Mr. Robarts said he thought another federal-provincial conference should be held before the end of the year, perhaps in about three months, to further the "progress" made here.

In three days of "exchanging views and outlining positions" government leaders had gone some distance towards a complete review of the constitution and a study of possible amendments.

But a constitutional review is "a complex task. . . . You can't look for instant constitutional change. It will be a long process and we have set up the machinery for getting into that process."

Donald MacDonald, leader of the provincial New Democratic Party, said in an interview he was disappointed with Ontario's part in a conference that has been "little more than a holding operation."

"They may well have halted the deterioration in federal-provincial relations . . . but there was not enough consensus at the top government level to ensure we are really getting at the basic problems of the constitution."

Robert Nixon, leader of the Ontario Liberal party, was not available for comment as the conference ended, but the consensus paper produced by the government leaders was about what he had predicted a day earlier.

Mr. Nixon had said in an interview that the conference would end with a "statement of views" and few, if any, greater achievements.

Mr. Robarts defended the consensus paper as the record of a successful conference.

It "outlined positions on a great many important matters . . . and laid down a very large program of work," he said.

"We found some areas of agreement and what differences we had were made open for all to see."

The differences he referred to cropped up before the conference officially opened Monday, when Mr. Robarts joined western provincial opposition to the agenda proposed by the federal government.

They succeeded in having it changed so that the premiers were able to discuss taxing and spending powers of both levels of government.

Mr. Robarts took the lead in forcing the federal government to agree to an examination of shared-cost programs, one of the major criticisms made by all provinces.

The attack on federal fiscal policies led by Mr. Robarts and Manitoba Premier Walter Weir resulted in approval of a study, "as a matter of priority," of distribution of powers including taxing and spending powers.

Mr. Trudeau found a friend in the Ontario premier when his proposals for the written protection of human and minority-language rights came under fire from other premiers.

Mr. Robarts approved of a federal official languages bill and said Ontario does not object to minority-language rights being included in a charter forming part of an amended constitution.

The Ontario premier also supported the federal position—and helped head off what seemed to be developing into a last-minute crisis—when Quebec Premier Bertrand tried to get approval of a motion that would have restricted federal spending powers.

Mr. Bertrand wanted the conference to agree that the federal government should not spend money on new programs in provincial fields of jurisdiction and should not withdraw from any joint programs it now supports without prior consultation and agreement of the participating provinces.

The resulting argument between Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Bertrand petered out after the Ontario premier said he could not support a motion that demanded federal abdication of its spending powers.

Mr. Robarts told reporters he was not disappointed that his pre-conference demand for a larger share of tax revenues had not been satisfied.

"We came to discuss broad constitutional issues. No one came here expecting to go home cheque in hand. We attend other conferences that deal strictly with fiscal matters. This conference was called to discuss the whole range of constitutional relations."

Joke Over Disputed Border

Quebec Impatient

Bertrand Wants Confrontation On Future Division of Powers

OTTAWA (CP) — Only one light Quebec-Ottawa skirmish developed at the three-day constitutional conference, but Quebec served notice Wednesday that it wants the next meeting to be a "head-on" confrontation.

Quebec's impatience at discussing what it considers secondary issues during the last two conferences was expressed by Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand, who said in his closing statement:

"I hope that we will be able to deal head-on with the distribution of powers at the next conference because the very essence of federalism is in the division of powers."

Quebec's priority in constitutional talks is its appeal for greater legislative powers as "homeland of the French-Canadian nation," but this remains one of the untouched items on the conference agenda.

The new Quebec premier made his presence felt in the dying minutes of the conference when he tangled with Mr. Trudeau in what amounted to the only spirited exchange between the two men at the conference.

The skirmish developed when Quebec presented a surprise resolution asking the federal government to stop making new expenditures within provincial fields of jurisdiction during negotiations on taxing and spending powers.

Prime Minister Trudeau rejected the proposal, arguing that acceptance would mean the federal government could not exercise its national role of equalizing opportunity across Canada.

When Quebec persisted, Mr. Trudeau asked Premier Bertrand if Quebec is prepared to accept a reversed proposal to the effect that Quebec abstain from spending in federal fields of jurisdiction such as international relations.

The fiscal proposal died without support, but Mr. Bertrand said later he is confident Quebec succeeded in making the point that the federal government should be stopped from invading provincial fields of jurisdiction, such as health.

The women's section of the Quinte Curling Club have completed another successful competition for The Intelligencer trophy, minatures and accompanying prizes and it is the first time in the history of the eleven bonspiels that two local rinks have competed in the final game.

Ann Acton and her rink of Audrey Gowsell, Bev Neill and Marian Graham squared off against a rink skipped by Kac Pinder with Ev Spinelli, Agnes Walker and Anne Alexander assisting and Mrs. Acton was the winner by a 11-6 count. The game was not decided until around the eighth end. Mrs. Pinder plucked two in the sixth to forge ahead by one shot after having a four counted against her in the first frame. The winning rink started to click at this point and from then till the finish they were always in command.

In the Pepsi-Cola competition Fran Simpson and her rink of Vi Maguire, Jean Mann, Vicky Power from CFB, Trenton, was always in front until the last end when the Kingston rink of Carol Pearson, Noreen Sugarman, Thelma Graves with Kay O'Neill skipping were lying six and down only four shots. Mrs. Simpson played a difficult outturn and took a counter off to lie second shot and the game was over. Mrs. O'Neill tried to remove that rock but was a trifle wide. The score was 8-5 for Mrs. Simpson.

In the third event another Quinte rink of Adele Stewart, Bernice Owen, Mildred Curtis with Lorna Bennett skipping had to bow to another CFB rink of Bernice Castellarin, Goodie Wyme, Norma Palmer with A. Grenke skipping by a score of 8-6.

In the consolation event another Quinte rink of Nina Gault, Vera Fairman, Mary Livingston with Kate Cook skipping was defeated by a rink of Marie Knutson, Bev Shurtleff, Ann McDonald with Sally Lamber of Napanee as skip 11-7. The Quinte rink was entered by Doris Bannon but was forced to leave the competition due to another important commitment. The rink was skipped by Kate Cook with Mary Livingston filling in.

The presentation of the Intelligencer trophy was made by Claude D. Tice while Bill Spinelli presented the Pepsi-Cola trophy.

There were 24 rinks entered from clubs from Napanee, CFB Trenton, Picton, Trenton, Humber Highland Mississauga, Cataraqui and Garrison. Haezl McNevin was general chairman of the event and had as a committee, Betty Walmsley, Ena Corke, Nina Gault, Lu Halpin and Madge Cowley. Jess Barber was in charge of the tea hour held on Tuesday before the final games. Ev Gowsell handled the draws and kept everybody happy.

Edna Grundy of Mississauga and Bob Alexander won the door prizes. The decorations were extensive and showed to advantage the GFJ. The management of The Intelligencer was sincerely thanked for their interest in this annual bonspiel which is the highlight of the activities of the women's section of the club during the season.

A rink of Wilf Weymark, Al McCalluhm, "Corky" McQuoradale with Bill Riley as skip have won the intermediate title for district 3A and will compete in the finals at the Garrison Club in Kingston on Saturday. They won the title at Cobourg, defeating J. C. 'Curly" Lord of CFB and Jim Fewell of Picton in their climb to the top.

Brown Camps Fined

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Court of Appeal ruled Wednesday that Brown Camps Ltd. violated a zoning bylaw by operating four homes for emotionally-disturbed children in a Scarborough borough area restricted to single-family residences.

The court imposed fines totalling $200 for four violations which occurred in the fall of 1967.

The court was unanimous in allowing the appeal of an earlier acquittal by the York County court last May.

John Brown, the camp's founder, said he would attempt to appeal to the Supreme Court.

In the fall of 1967 the camp was under the control of Mr. Brown, later elected to the provincial legislature as a New Democratic Party member for Toronto Beaches Woodbine.

The camp has since been placed in the hands of a 22-member board of directors and made a non-profit organization.

Holstein Coloring Widened

TORONTO (CP) — The Holstein-Friesen Association of Canada Wednesday approved setting up an alternate herd book to include registration of cattle previously ineligible because of coloring.

The move will allow registration of red-and-white Holsteins and black-and-white Holsteins with black on their legs or tails. Requirements for the regular herd book will remain the same.

Dr. J. C. Renne of the University of Guelph told the association's one-day annual meeting that the Holstein breed could not afford to lose superior blood lines because of color restrictions.

Dr. Renne spoke as chairman of the joint Canada-United States committee that recommended the alternate book. The association, with about 75 per cent of its 14,000 members in Ontario, is the largest livestock association in Canada.

Three new directors to represent Ontario were elected: Earl Osborne, Guelph; David Houck, Union, and Gordon Parks, Bloomfield. All other Ontario directors were re-elected except retiring members Aylmer Petherick of Campbellford and Albert Hunter of Burlington.

A.G. Oliver Heads OPP Detachment

PICTON (Staff) — Corporal A. G. Oliver has been promoted to the rank of sergeant and will become head of the Gananoque detachment.

Corporal Oliver has been in the OPP for almost 15 years. The last two he has served in Picton.

The promotion will become effective March 1. He will take over his new position in Gananoque on April 1 replacing Sergeant A. R. Edwards.

Corporal Oliver was traffic safety co-ordinator at the Belleville detachment for 13 years before coming here.

Corporal Oliver is married with three children. Joel is a graduate of Waterloo University; Judy, a nursing sister in the services at Calgary, and Joseph, 12, a student at Queen Elizabeth Public School.

Guarantee Of Jobs Demanded

TORONTO (CP) — About 300 University of Toronto students asked the Ontario government Wednesday to pay students for not working this summer.

In a meeting with Tom Wells, minister without portfolio, the students demanded a guarantee that any student who couldn't get a job within 10 days of applying to Canada Manpower would be put on the government payroll.

Chapter Reports Successful Fantasy Ball

Twenty members were present for the regular monthly meeting of the Argyll Chapter of the I.O.D.E. held in the Officers' Mess in the Armories.

The Regent, Mrs. F. R. Allan called the meeting to order and minutes of the previous meeting were read by Mrs. Milroy, and Mrs. Hammill gave the treasurer's report.

Correspondence was read including a note of thanks from Lt. Col. F. R. Allan in receipt of a token of remembrance to the Heart Fund from the Chapter on the recent death of his mother. Reports were given by the various conveners. Mrs. P. Till reported 46 hours have been given to the blood donor clinic.

Mrs. A. S. McConnell has sent in a write-up to "Echoes" covering the joint meeting with the St. Julien Chapter when the Chapter entertained a number of refugees from Czechoslovakia. Mrs. A. Duffy, convener of world affairs, read some correspondence in regards to the publication of "The Canadian Family Tree".

Headquarters have issued posters with instructions for the 1969 short story competition. These will be displayed in both libraries. For further information one may contact Mrs. H. G. Birkenshaw, educational secretary. Closing date is April 30.

Mrs. L. Smith expressed thanks to all for their help in decorating and providing food for the 'Winter Fantasy' ball. Wray's Furniture donated two prizes. The Regent also added her thanks especially to Mrs. Smith for a most successful affair.

The following are the winners of the spot dances: Marion Magée and Col. Angus Duffy; Mrs. F. M. Sprague and Mr. T. Colden; Mr. and Mrs. C. Bristol and Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Hume; door prizes: Mr. and Mrs. H. Kokesb, Mr. and Mrs. R. Field and Mr. and Mrs. R. Blatchford.

With the conclusion of the reports the meeting was adjourned for a few minutes. The annual meeting was called to order. The minutes of the 1968 annual meeting were read and approved followed by the treasurer's report. Mrs. Milroy, secretary, gave a detailed report covering the activities of the Chapter during the year. The conveners of all committees read their reports which are to be forwarded to headquarters.

Mrs. Mac Smith as chairman of the nominations committee gave her report. There being no further nominations the following were installed by Mrs. A. Duffy: honorary Regent, Mrs. J. M. Cousins: honorary vice Regent, Mrs. E. S. Fairman; Regent, Mrs. F. R. Allan, 1st vice Regent, Mrs. B. Milroy: 2nd vice-Regent, Mrs. A. B. Duffy; secretary, Mrs. B Milroy; treasurer, Mrs. J. K. Bradford; educational secretary, Mrs. H. G. Birkenshaw; echoes sec., Mrs. G. Miller; program and civil defence, Mrs. C. Bristol; standard bearer, Mrs. R. Liddle.

Various committee chairmen are: membership, Mrs. H. Kokesh; publicity, Mrs. A. S. McConne; world affairs, Mrs. F. M. Sprague; hospitality, Mrs. L. S. H. Smith; assistents, Mrs. D. Riordan, Mrs. R. Hammill; cancer clinic, Mrs. H. Manship; Red Cross, Mrs. A. B. Duffy, Mrs. E. F. Smith; services at home and abroad, sewing, Mrs. P. M. Till, Mrs M. Smith; knitting, Mrs. J M. McLeod, Mrs. V. Balmer; citizenship and immigration, Mrs. J. Sherry; flower convener, Mrs. J. B. McSherry.

Deseronto Couple Wed for 50 years

DESERONTO — On Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fraser of Thomas St. Deseronto, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with all the members of their family present, assisting at the 'At Home' held at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Donald B. Pringle, and enjoying the buffet family dinner in the evening, prepared by their granddaughters, with their son Albert (Al) and his wife as host and hostess. They have one son, three daughters, 15 grandchildren, and 10 great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Fraser was formerly Edith Purser, an English girl, who met her husband when he was with the Canadian army in World War 1. "Our three-tiered wedding cake was 50 years late," Mrs. Fraser said. "You did not even think about one when you were married, because sugar rationing would not permit one." But there was such a cake Saturday. They were married in St. Mary's Anglican Church in Slough, Buckinghamshire, England.

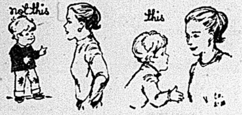
There were many telegrams and letters from dignitaries, including Prime Minister Trudeau, and Robert Stanfield, leader of the opposition. On behalf of Premier John Robarts, George Lyons presented them with a plaque from the Ontario Government. The gifts included many flowers, and a purse of money from the family.

Mr. Fraser brought his bride to Deseronto when he was discharged from the army in August following their marriage. It has been their home ever since. Mr. Fraser retired four years ago from his position in the Post Office.

In addition to their son "Al" and daughter Lillian (Mrs. Pringle), Deseronto, Mr. and Mrs. Fraser have a daughter, Mrs. Milton Francis (Margaret) in Toronto, and a widowed daughter, Mrs. Jean Fraser, in Odessa.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Betty: "This is my friend, Dee Clump."

Mother: "Oh, Betty, you know there isn't anyone there. Why do you make up those silly stories. Nobody will believe you if you don't stop telling lies."

Betty: "Don't bump into little Dee Clump."

Mother: "It's fun to pretend you have a good friend. I wanted a little sister so I used to pretend I had one tiny enough to ride around in my pocket."

Many small children, especially "only" children, go through stages of having imaginary friends. Don't scold the child for lying, but let her know this is pretending and for fun. It she has the opportunities for companionship with other children, eventually she will trade in her imaginary friends for real live ones.

The accordion results were: first class honors, Scott Wilkins, Bonnie Gordon, Peter Milne, Gabor Krekk; honors, Vernon Hartwig, William Zochkan, Kathryn Short, Darlene Willman, Ernie Clarke, Gina Christopher, Brenda Connors, and Kathryn Post; pass, Ted Arbuckle, Larry Bowers, Wanda Morgan, Beth Wood, Manley Wannamaker, Dale Lynn, Darlene Green and Gena Brauer.

CHURCH GROUPS

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL

The Frankford Full Gospel Tabernacle Women's Missionary Council held their Feb. meeting, which began with a fellowship potluck supper. President of the WMC, Mrs. Wilbert Reid welcomed the members and guests. Mrs. E. Strome led in prayer.

During the business section of the meeting, the monthly bulletin was read. The penny objective for 1969 is set for $6,500 for Eastern Ontario and Quebec. The WMC theme for the new year is "what's my line in '69?" Various needs were mentioned.

National WMC day across Canada will be Sunday, Feb. 16. Business reports showed a successful year.

Mrs. James Dunlop presented past president, Mrs. E. Strome with a gift from the WMC group. The meeting was then closed in the usual manner, by Mrs. G. Grant.

Engagement Notice

Miss Betty Ann Portt E. Roderick Colquhoun

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Portt, R. R. 6 Belleville, announce the engagement of their daughter, Betty Ann, to E. Roderick Colquhoun, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Colquhoun of Hamilton, Ontario. Miss Portt is a graduate of Queen's University, Kingston, while Mr. Colquhoun is a graduate of Western University, London, Ontario. The marriage will take place on Saturday, March 15 at 4 p.m., in Christ Church, Belleville.

Christ Church A. C. W. Install New Officers

A large number of members and friends turned out to the meeting of Christ Church Parish Guild A.C.W. on Tuesday afternoon. Canon R. B. De.B Wright officiated at the installation of the new officers for 1969 and wished them well in their various endeavors. The following slate of officers were elected: — honorary president Mrs. R. B. Wright; president, Mrs. Fred Lazier;. past-president, Mrs. D. G. Livingston; vice - president, Mrs. W. J. Reed; secretary, Mrs. J. M. Cousins; treasurer, Mrs. Ridley Wallbridge.

The new president, Mrs. Lazier gave all a warm welcome especially those from the afternoon branch of the A.C.W. and to two new members. She introduced the various convenors as follows: — vestry council representative, Mrs. Ridley Wallbridge; kitchen, Mrs. I R. Vesterfelt; hostess convenor, Mrs. T. G. Day; cent-a-meal, Mrs. M. Boyd; remembrance, Mrs. A. Noakes; pianists, Mrs. L. Adams and Mrs. A. Jordan; bulletin and press, Mrs. F. A. Beeby.

The devotional was presented by Mrs. George Winter — an appropriate talk on Lent and the proper use of prayer. Members were reminded of the service of Corporate Communion for the Guild and urged all to attend.

The Guild will assume responsibility for the rectory taxes and will also send a donation to the Anglican Women's Training College.

A resume of plans for the forthcoming parish visitation was outlined by Mrs. Beeby and members were urged to each do their part to make this a success.

Two wedding receptions, a banquet, a dinner for a group of senior citizens from Toronto and the Guild's annual Spring tea and sale are among the many activities planned by the group for the near future.

Mrs. Ridley Wallbridge will be hostess at her home to members of the Guild and afternoon A.C.W. for the meeting in March.

Following the business portion of the meeting a spirited auction took place with everything from china to home-baked goodies being offered for sale. Mrs. A. Jordan was the lively auctioneer and the items disappeared in quick fashion.

Tea hostesses for the afternoon were Miss M. Diamond and Mrs. I. R. Vesterfelt.

Kitchen Tested Recipies

Baked Bananas, Economical, Easy and Popular Dish

By MARY MOORE

Chosen for beauty, flavor and change were Baked Bananas (economical, easy and popular): French Endive with Drawn Butter and Chive Sauce (exotic); Canned Baby Carrots (easy, pretty, economical). These were the vegetables on my gourmet dinner menu given on Monday.

BAKED BANANAS (serves 6)

6 underripe bananas
2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup fresh lemon juice
3 tablespoons granulated sugar

Melt butter in small baking dish. Add peeled bananas cut in halves crosswise. Drizzle each piece with lemon juice then sprinkle evenly with sugar. Cover with lid or foil and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. turning over once during 25 to 30 minutes baking period. These are often served with a curry but were lovely with yesterday's Veal Cordon Bleu.

FRENCH ENDIVE WITH DRAWN BUTTER CHIVE SAUCE

one pound (six heads or stalks) French endive
1½ tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon flour
1 chicken oxo cube
shake of chives
two-thirds cup water in which endive is steamed

Wash tender little heads or stalks of endive and carefully cut in halves lengthwise. To steam them place on a trivet in shallow pan, add boiling water to barely touch endive and cook covered until barely tender about 12 to 15 minutes for this delicate vegetable. Drain off liquid and measure two-thirds cup. Melt butter, stir in flour, add chicken oxo cube, shake of freeze-dried chives and endive liquid and stir until thickened and blended. Carefully turn endive into one end of preheated entree dish and pour sauce over. At other end put:

BABY CANNED CARROTS

These cost me about 29 cents per tin and because Air Canada served them to me on my recent flight to Victoria I made a note to be sure to include them in my menus because of their bright appearance and convenience and low cost. Simply heat them in the liquid in which they are canned, drain and serve. These baby canned carrots may be glazed by draining and putting in saucepan with mixture of ½ cup light brown sugar, 2 tablespoons water, 2 tablespoons butter and ¼ teaspoon salt and cooking gently over low heat, turning occasionally until glazed.

The dessert was Chocolate Souffle. This was a Cunard liner specialty years ago but really so simple and good I will use it for a cooking lesson next Monday.

Dinner Menus

Successful Living

People Inclined to Look Down On Ex-mental Patient

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I wrote you before about riding a bicycle, and my family using me. I now have an apartment and live by myself. I am on a disability pension because of bad nerves now.

On December second I started back to high school. I am 27 years old. I am taking typing, shorthand and office practice. I realized I was far too young to be sitting around. Maybe if I get good marks I may be able to work in a small office. Since going back to school I have not had a tranquilizer for three weeks. I would have gone back to school 12 years ago after my nervous breakdown, but too many talked about me.

I only wish people could realize how cruel it is to look down on people with an emotional disease. It hurts when you know they take this attitude. I don't see how an emotional sickness is so much worse than a physical illness.

When will people start realizing this? I do hope you will publish this so maybe people will read it and see how wrong they are.

Thank you for helping me before. — Grateful.

Dear Grateful: You are welcome. Good for you for tackling school again!

Emotional illness can happen to anybody, given sufficient strain. And improvement and recovery are just as possible in any physical illness; but we are slow, very slow, to learn these things.

What we need to realize, more surely, is that during those convalescing months, encouragement and friendliness are to the mental patient what vitamins and medications are to the physically ill.

Dear Doris: I know just how your friend in hospital felt. As a matter of fact if friends do not keep coming, or at least communicating, when you are in hospital, you feel neglected. Then if they do come in bunches you feel like saying, "Don't you know I'm sick? Get the heck out of here — all but one of you!"

Thank you for keeping in touch so constantly. — Norma.

Dear Norma: When it comes to keeping in touch, I just can't resist you!

(Norma is an old friend — an asthmatic, who has had plenty of experience with sickness and hospitals. She lives alone and is almost entirely housebound. Has been for many years. The telephone is her lifeline and an interesting life it it.

Besides keeping in touch with her family she is a wise counsellor to her friends, a happy raconteur, an ardent supporter of her favorite political party. When there's an election she campaigns like mad for candidates and they usually get elected.

Often she is short of breath and has to hang up before she's finished, but her happy spirits are a delight.)

Dear Doris: I wrote when my daughter was to be married and you gave me some wedding information about wedding procedures. You also helped about my dress, as mother of the bride.

You'll be glad to know that instead of getting black lace, I was able to find a rich brown lace for a coat to go over my gold dress. This was your idea, since black is apparently not worn to weddings. — Grateful.

Dear Grateful: Sounds like a perfect combination. Glad to hear about it.

Ann Landers

Ann Explains Point To Irate Reader

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Are you a sadist or just plain stupid? Don't you realize how much trouble you cause when you print letters that raise questions about paternity?

ANN LANDERS

I refer to your answer to the blue-eyed daughter of brown-eyed parents. I don't care what your so-called experts say, there are exceptions to every rule. My mother's eyes were sort of hazel. You wouldn't call them blue, but they weren't brown either. My father had very dark brown eyes. My eyes are blue, like my maternal grandmother's. I never thought a thing about it until your letter appeared.

My mother was a very strait-laced person and I'm sure she was no swinger, but all mothers aren't like mine. I worry about all those blue-eyed children with brown-eyed parents. What is father going to say when his child asks, "Ann Landers says you can't be my father. So who is?"

Why don't you retire, you troublemaker? — DAVENPORT, IOWA.

DEAR DAVENPORT: Too bad you never learned to read. Awhile back I devoted an entire column to eye color in relation to heredity. My authority was a geneticist from the National Institutes of Health. He made it clear that no matter what the color of the parents' eyes, a child can have another color — legitimately.

Now, aren't you ashamed you shot off your mouth?"

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A 31-year-old woman who works in this office is very pregnant and not married. It is obvious that she has added at least 20 pounds. She is not wearing maternity clothes, just larger dresses. Yet she hasn't said one word about her condition.

I think it is disgraceful that this woman is allowed to remain in an office where six unmarried girls are employed.

Although she has worked here 18 months, she has never had any of us to her apartment. She is very secretive about her life. What do you make of this? What should our attitude be? — VEXED IN TEXAS.

DEAR VEX: Your attitude should be improved. It's terrible. The woman just might be married. In the meantime, why don't you girls take a brisk walk during lunch, or wax the floors or polish the office furniture? You need to do something constructive with all that extra energy.

* * *

DEAR ANN: I was asked to be an usher at a friend's wedding. I have to rent a tux and buy new shoes which will set me back a bundle. Now I am told the ushers must kick in $41.50 each to pay for the orchestra. Isn't this going too far? Please advise. — INSUFFICIENT FUNDS

DEAR IN: Yeah, about $41.50's worth. The orchestra should be paid by the father of the bride

HARRY BLACK

Red Cross Director to Speak at Meet

Harry S. Black, campaign director, Ontario Division, Canadian Red Cross Society, will be the guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Belleville Branch of the Red Cross Society to be held in St. Thomas' Parish Hall on Feb. 18 at 8 p.m.

Mr. Black first became associated with the Red Cross in November 1957 as supervisor of the Blood Transfusion Service, Ontario Division and was appointed Area "A" director in 1958. He is also a former business administrator of the Toronto Blood Depot, assistant executive secretary of the Toronto Branch and assistant campaign director of Ontario Division.

In June, 1967, Mr. Black was sent to Lebanon, where he spent six weeks working on international relief work among refugees of the Middle East conflict.

With his wealth of Red Cross background it is felt he will be a most interesting and enlightening speaker at this particular meeting.

Human Rights Discussed at Study Guild

The general assembly of the United Nations proclaimed 1968 International Human Rights Year and suggested that a review be made of the achievements in the field of human rights. Mrs. E. A. Fleming and Mrs. R. C. Ellis held a study of this topic at the recent monthly meeting of the Women's Study Guild.

The meeting was held at Mrs. Fleming's home with the president, Mrs. Jerry Cochrane presiding.

Mrs. O. B. Ragsdale led in the devotional period with a meditation on the new year.

Mrs. Fleming introduced the study of human rights by defining what was meant by human rights and civil liberties.

"There is no such thing as complete and unrestricted freedom of individual action," she pointed out. "Our rights stop where the rights of others start. Civil liberty means freedom within the law."

"In Canada today, we are not concerned with the traditional [illegible] liberties as we are with economic, social and cultural rights. These newer rights concern the quality of life, and these are the new goals for which we are aiming."

Mrs. Ellis reviewed briefly the immediate events which led to the formation of the Commission of Human Rights in 1946, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, and the passing of the Universal Declaration two years later.

She informed her audience that Ontario leads the world in legislation regarding human rights, and traced the forming of the Ontario Human Rights Commission and the Human Rights Code.

Projecting into the future, discussion followed concerning the ways in which the United Nations activities in the field of human rights might develop.

Mrs. H. G. Wylie and Mrs. G. E. Adams were hostesses for the social hour.

Clergymen in Limelight

Sullivan Gets 'Citizen of Year' Award

Two clergymen were in the limelight at the Jaycees "Citizen of the Year" award dinner held last night at the Club Canara.

Monsignor J. P. Sullivan who was recognized as "Citizen of the Year" and Archdeacon A. S. McConnell who was the guest speaker.

In his address to the group the Archdeacon had only three points to expand on: personality, courtesy and youth.

"Everybody has a divine right to personality," he stressed, mentioning that in this complex age we live in identity and individualism are often buried under the complexities of society.

"Personality is something we all need and if we continue the way we are we will have none of it left."

As for courtesy, the Anglican clergyman likened it "to the Grace of God."

"There is a lack of courtesy in all of us — we're too selfish to consider the other fellow."

Archdeacon McConnell, who is retiring this year, said that discourtesy was everywhere — in the world, the church and the home — and again pointed out the necessity for taking the "dis" off the word so that always there would be just courtesy.

Finally he mentioned "the imperative needs of youth."

"We don't teach our youth how to live — we teach them plenty but not how to live and that's what's important."

Most of our youth are responsible, according to the Archdeacon but "our papers, radio and TV talk about the two per cent that aren't," he concluded.

Alderman Kenneth Soden brought greetings to the group for the city.

Maple Syrup Operations

Pancakes Added to Demonstration

A feed of pancakes and syrup will be an added drawing card this spring for district adults taking in the annual maple syrup demonstration at the Collins farm in the Moira area.

The maple syrup demonstration is a public education feature for area school children offered by the Moira River Conservation Authority.

Authority advisory board members met last night to work out the details of this year's program which, weather permitting, will be held during the last two weekends in March.

During the week school children will be taken to the bush where they will see the mechanics of collecting maple sap and "boiling down" operations.

Then on the weekends — Saturday and Sunday—the maple syrup demonstration will be open to the general public.

The pancake concession will be handled by members of the Thomasburg Rebekah Lodge at $1 per plate with children under 12 getting their feed for half price.

Arrangements are also being worked out by the authority education advisory board for continuation at the conservation school held each year at the Vanderwater Park.

This one day conservation school sees grade six children go on one day trips to the park for down to earth nature studies.

Arrangements are also being made by the committee to reactivate the "Our Valley" radio program which a few years ago was carried weekly over CJBQ.

CITIZEN OF THE

A Night for Clergymen

Contribution of Winner Is Exceptional: Ellis

"Big Jim Sullivan!" That's the way Jack Ellis introduced the man named "Citizen of the Year" by the Belleville Jaycees at last night's testimonial dinner.

Monsignor James P. Sullivan is a big man but the bigness Mr. Ellis was talking about wasn't on the outside — it was the man, Monsignor Sullivan, himself.

Mr. Ellis, who was Citizen of the Year in 1968, presented "Big Jim" with a plaque and Citizen's trophy after the introduction.

And there wasn't any doubt as to why the Monsignor was chosen.

As Mr. Ellis pointed out Msgr. J. P. Sullivan has contributed above and beyond the call of duty to almost every phase of Belleville society.

Those contributions included work and innovations on the board of directors of Belleville General Hospital, 15 years of work on the Canadian Register, the new Separate School Board and formerly the Belleville Separate School board and of course United Community Services.

Those attending the dinner were told how Monsignor Sullivan "was the guiding light in the formation of United Community Services" as well as numerous of his other accomplishments.

"He always comes out and does his bit," said Mr. Ellis. "Big Jim" is a big man."

In accepting the award Monsignor Sullivan told the group that Belleville was "on the edge of a new era."

The hospital addition, school system and other community advances were mentioned and so was time.

"Time played a great part in the development of the city," asserted the Monsignor, "and it also played a great part in my election."

"I just happened to be in the right places at the right time," he concluded.

College Cream Skimmed Off Today

OTTAWA (CP) — A halfback from Waterloo Lutheran and a linebacker from Simon Fraser University are expected to be the first choices today when the Canadian Football League college draft gets under way.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers were expected to take both Doug Strong of Waterloo, Ont., and Bob McLaren from SFU in Burnaby, B.C.

As plans for the draft went ahead, the matter of television rights—which could be worth more than $1,000,000—still was undecided, with the spectre of cable television the obstacle.

The Eastern and Western conferences held separate and closed meetings Wednesday to negotiate contracts to replace those which expired on Grey Cup day last year. Nothing was settled.

Neither conference would discuss the amount of money under negotiation but both said they were going after an increase.

Under the old pact, the East got $500,000 on the last year of their three-year contract with CTV. The West got $300,000 on a contract signed three years previously but which carried two one-year extension options which were exercised.

But today, all nine teams meet together to pick over the best of the 1968 crop of college players.

The Bombers, as the last-place club in the conference whose champion lost the Grey Cup game, get first choice.

The draft isn't the only hot item on today's agenda.

Rule changes are expected to be announced and, if ratified in time, so is the pre-season schedule, under study by the CFL executive committee.

The problem of cable television was the key block at the CFL annual meeting—the first under commissioner Jake Gaudaur who took office last year.

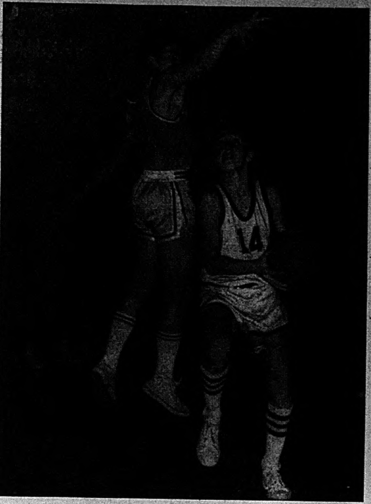
Each conference expressed concern over the televising of football games on cable back into areas supposedly blacked out to protect the interests of the home clubs concerned.

Sam Berger of Ottawa, outgoing president of the EFC, said his conference is "going for an increase" in television revenue this year.

However, he said "the EFC likely will sign a one-year contract."

"The reason for this is we hope there will be legislation concerning cable TV within the year."

The Canadian Radio-Television Commission, ruling body over broadcasting, is studying the problem.



Going Up!

BCI bantam hoopster Peter Scott (14) is airborne, and he and his mates vaulted high enough, often enough last night to win their Quinte District "AA" game 61-56 over Bob Richardson and his fellow Quinte bantams. The Collegians' win was their sixth in eight games this season, keeping them in a tie for the seven-team bantam group lead. (Story on Page 14.)

WINNIPEG (CP) — Coach Jackie McLeod has won and lost one in his efforts to bolster Canada's national team for the world hockey championship in Stockholm next month. Defenceman Carl Brewer, a former Toronto Maple Leaf player, will not rejoin the Nationals but Roger Bourbonnais of Edmonton will. Still pending is a decision by goalie Seth Martin of Trail Smoke Eaters. Brewer, a reinstated amateur who played with the Nationals two years ago, is a playing-coach in Finland. McLeod said he received a letter in which Brewer said he would not be available this year.

Chicago Winless in Seven Despite Hefty Goal Output

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chicago Black Hawks have scored more goals than any other team in the National Hockey League except Boston Bruins, but they are still doormats in their division.

The Black Hawks played to a 3-3 tie Wednesday night with Philadelphia Flyers in NHL action—their seventh straight game without a win. They have not won a game since Jan. 30 when they overpowered the Flyers 12-0 at Philadelphia. Since then they have lost five and tied two.

The tie Wednesday night dropped the Hawks farther behind fifth-place Toronto Maple Leafs, who lead them by three points in the Eastern Division.

Chicago, led by Bobby Hull and Stan Mikita, has scored 205 goals in 56 games this season. Only Boston, leaders in the Eastern Division, has scored more goals, 217.

But the Hawks have had 185 goals scored against them—the third highest goals-against mark in the 12-team league. This inability to stop the opposition has them battling for a playoff spot.

Meanwhile St. Louis Blues, who have not been charitable to goal scorers this season, blanked Pittsburgh Penguins 2-0 in a game between the two Western Division teams. The shutout was the seventh of the season for Glenn Hall, tops in the league.

Toronto Maple Leafs ended a winless streak of five games against Western Division teams when they downed Minnesota North Stars 7-1. Oakland Seals edged New York Rangers 3-2.

The Flyers scored two third-period goals to earn their tie against Chicago. Pit Martin of Chicago scored his 16th goal early in the third period but the Flyers tied it at 13:18 on a power-play goal by Jean-Guy Gendron.

BOBBY HULL
Collects 36th Goal

Goals by Pat Stapleton and Bobby Hull, his 36th, made it 3-1 in the second period but Forbes Kennedy and Dick Cherry came back with a goal each in the third to tie the score.

Camille Henry and Frank St. Marseille handled the St. Louis scoring against Pittsburgh.

At Toronto, the line of Dave Keon, Murray Oliver and Floyd Smith picked up nine points in the Leafs' rout of Minnesota. Keon and Bob Pulford each scored two goals for the Leafs. Smith, Oliver and Norm Ullman got the other Toronto goals.

Defenceman Leo Boivin got Minnesota's only goal late in the first period.

The Leafs had 11 shots on goaltender Cesare Maniago in the first nine minutes and 37 seconds and three of them went in. He was replaced by Gary Bauman but Bauman fared no better behind an ineffective Minnesota defence.

Goal judge Eddie Mepham was back at his post at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Alfie's Dad No Slouch in Hack

TORONTO (CP) — Alf Phillips Sr. of Toronto used sharp shot-making Wednesday night to win the Ontario seniors curling championship, defeating Allen Shirk of Kitchener 9-5 in a sudden-death playoff.

Phillips, down 3-1 after three ends, tied the game in the fourth and went ahead to stay in the fifth. He will represent the province at the Canadian championships in Hamilton Feb. 24.

Shirk and Phillips finished the eight-rink, round-robin competition with 5-2 records.

A miscalculation by the vice-skip of Arnie Butterworth's Ottawa rink helped Phillips on his way to the title in an afternoon match.

Phillips was behind 4-2 and lying two in the seventh end while Butterworth had a stone on the four-foot ring.

Butterworth seemed to be slow on his last rock and yelled for his sweepers. But his vice, Elwyn Macdonald, called them off and the rock barely got over the hogline.

Phillips picked up two to tie the game 4-4 and went to win the match 8-4.

Shirk scored three-enders en route to an easy 10-6 win over Reg Merrit of Grimsby. Andy Grant of Unionville trounced Dick Edney of Kingston 10-5 and Horace Greenfield of Simcoe edged Bruce McClure of Brampton 6-5.

Grant and Greenfield finished the three-day competition with four wins and three losses. Edney had a record of three-and-four, McClure two-and-five and Merritt one-and-five.

Who Needs Games?

LONDON (AP) — Officials of soccer betting pools were dreaming up games Wednesday to keep bettors happy should Britain's wintry weather continue.

If most of Saturday's scheduled matches are called off because of the weather, a panel of experts will decide what the results would have been.

The pools will then pay out the prize money, just as if the games actually had taken place.

The pools operated the same way during the big freeze of 1963.

Gordie Howe's HOCKEY

Ron Harris, who is playing some pretty rugged defence for the Detroit Red Wings this season, literally left our trainer, Lefty Wilson, flat on his face recently.

Lefty has been around for a long time and he's colorful and he also owns a salty vocabulary. He uses it, too.

It happened about a month ago when after a practice Lefty started to pick up Harris's shinguards and set them on the bench. He almost fell flat on his face.

"Those shinguards must weigh five pounds apiece," Lefty screamed.

They did.

Ron has a habit of putting five-pound lead weights in his shinguards for our practice sessions. He figures the added weight strengthens his legs.

This is not a new idea, of course. However, I do think it's rather unique in hockey. Baseball players have done it for years at spring training and track men have also done it. In fact, a number of trackmen run in sand, which has the same effect.

Harris doesn't use the weights all season. Maybe early in the year and perhaps up until January.

"If I find my legs feeling loggy during a game, then I put the weights on in practice for a while," he explained.

He used that old joke about the Irishman hitting himself on the head with the hammer to illustrate his point. You know the answer: It feels so good when you stop.

When you look at Ron, though, you wonder why he needs to wear the weights. He has muscles on top of muscles and likes the rough stuff.

Last season, before the Wings obtained him along with Bob Baun from the Oakland Seals, Harris played right wing. But he insists he prefers playing defence. He's one of the few who have played both forward and defence and prefers the latter.

Take Red Kelly and Doug Mohns. Both started as defencemen and then moved to forward. Both have often said that playing defence is much tougher.

Harris claims he feels more comfortable back there. More power to him.

Sport Briefs

MONTREAL (CP) — Major league baseball makes its debut here in two months, and while Montreal Expos have acquired a full roster of players and a smooth-working front office organization, there remains the problem of an as-yet uncompleted home park. "We'll be ready," insisted Lou Martin, the Expos' director of operations Wednesday as he looked over a snow-covered expanse that must become a playing field for the club's home opener against St. Louis Cardinals April 14.

* * *

VANCOUVER (CP) — Harry Ornest, a former British Columbia Lions director, Wednesday sweetened his offer to buy the Western Conference football club by promising to give its 3,600 members a piece of the action. He said in an interview from Beverly Hills, Calif., that he would present his offer at the club's annual meeting Feb. 20 and that the members' share would be "in excess of $500,000." Ornest said he will attend the meeting because club president Allan McEachern has refused to permit him to submit an offer to the membership by mail.

Senior Saints Snap BCI's Unbeaten String

STAFF — The oldest high school rivalry in Belleville, BCI versus Quinte, produced another in a long line of upsets last night at the Quinte Secondary School gym - - - a 65-53 overthrow of the mighty Collegians.

The senior Saints of Quinte were languishing in fourth place in the seven team Class "AA" senior league with a record four wins and three losses prior to last night's encounter, while the Collegians of BCI were leading the league with a perfect record of seven wins and no losses.

Things were looking rosy for BCI, after a 73-43 trouncing of Quinte in an earlier meeting, without the services of star guard Brian Harder, who played most of the way last night.

A hungry Quinte squad was intent on victory last night, and used a zone defence all the way to prevent BCI from driving inside, and at the same time allowing Quinte to control the defensive backboards.

Quinte was "up" for the game and BCI just couldn't seem to get untracked and make the big points when they were needed. BCI became desperate and used a zone press in the fourth quarter to try and narrow Quinte's nine point lead, but the Saints met the challenge with several accurate baseball passes which led to long range jump shots or driving layups, and clinched a 61-53 win for the Saints.

A 16 point performance by forward John Mywaart topped the scoring list for the hustling Quinte squad. Leo Baker followed closely with 13 points, while Eric Emerson popped in 11 points for the winners, and Wayne Casselman added nine.

Forward Ken Richardson was the big gun for BCI with 18 points, while guard Brian Harder hooped 14 points and Ted Shaw contributed seven.

BCI hoopsters spoiled the rest of the night for Quinte supporters, coming from behind in the fourth quarter, after trailing all the way, to score a 61-57 win over Quinte in the junior game, and making the winner's score in each game 61 points, with a 61-56 come-from-behind midget win, which allowed the Collegians to remain in a first place tie with Picton.

Brent Gallupe tallied 26 points to lead the Collegians to victory, while Dave Wright netted nine points, and Mike Scarlett contributed seven.

Stan Brookes fired in 19 points to pace the junior Saints, and he received support from Barry Culkin with eight points, John Churchill with six points and Steve Nash with five.

Knicks' Win Streak Too Much for Suns

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Los Angeles Lakers held their four-point lead atop the National Basketball Association's Western Division Wednesday night with a 109-92 win over Seattle SuperSonics while second-place Atlanta Hawks downed Milwaukee Bucks 113-106.

In other NBA games, Earl Munroe's 29 points paced Baltimore Bullets, eastern Division leaders to a 120-110 victory against San Francisco Warriors, Boston Celtics were 113-106 victors over Detroit Pistons, San Diego Rockets on the strength of Stu Lantz' 12 points in the final quarter, ousted Cincinnati Royals 118-114 and New York Knicks won their 10th straight game, 112-105 against Phoenix Suns.

Picton Percentage High

STAFF — "Slow" and "hot" are the two words which best describe the play of Picton's senior basketball squad in a road game at Napanee last night.

"Slow" refers to the slow, deliberate patterns and the waiting game played by the Picton crew, while "hot" is almost an understatement when used to describe the Picton shooting from the floor.

This combination carried Picton to a 58-47 win over Napanee and a share of second place with the Golden Hawks in the seven-team Quinte "AA" high school standings.

Picton marksmen hit on ten of 14 shots from the floor in the second half, and shot a respectable 59 per cent from the floor during the game, while playing a ball control type offence. Napanee failed to dent Picton's tight 1-2-2 defence with much success until the fourth quarter, by which time Picton had the game safely tucked away.

Rick Walmsley's 18 points paced Picton's sixth win while guard Steve Ward popped in 14 points, centre Wayne Coward hooped 13, and Peter Rigby added 11.

Dave Cunningham's 13 points were high for the Golden Hawks with Bob Cook adding 11 points, and Dave Cechetto and Henry Dornekemp eight apiece.

The Napanee teams were very hospitable hosts, as they dropped the junior game to Picton by a score of 25-21, and the midget game 35-22.

The score of the junior game could be mistaken for a football result, as both teams played ball control and had trouble breaking the other team's zone defence.

A ten-point effort by Steve Carroll paced the Picton squad to victory. Bill Barrett netted seven points for Picton, while Joe Burleigh and Dennis Bond contributed four points each.

Centre Rob Madden hit for 10 points to top the Napanee scorers, while Dave Roblin and Brian Babcock, contributed four points each.

THEY RE-GREW HAIR!

IN 12 MONTHS IN 3 MONTHS

Hair Specialist Here Friday

Will Show Men and Women How to Save Hair and Prevent Baldness

OTTAWA, Ont. New home treatment methods for saving hair and improving its growth will be demonstrated in Belleville at the Quinte Hotel, Friday, February 14, 1969.

Specialist J. Alberti will be in charge representing the dynamic Roberts Hair & Scalp Specialists organization. He will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1.00 to 8.00 p.m.

This new treatment is neither "mail order" nor "cure-all" It is adapted to the individual after a personal examination and progress is checked at regular intervals by a Roberts Specialist.

Who Can Be Helped?

Will the new Roberts' treatment cure baldness? "No!" For we cannot help men and women who are slick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. But if you still have fuzz and your scalp is still creating hair, you can at least save and thicken what you have. Some conditions, such as "spot baldness" usually have complete coverage if caught in time!

Other conditions that usually bring on excessive hair-loss — dandruff, itching, over-oiliness or dryness, follicle clogged with sebum or seborrhea — can be corrected by the Roberts home treatment if caught in time.

"DON'T WAIT UNTIL IT'S TOO LATE."

Baldness won't wait for doubters to be convinced, you're going to keep right on losing hair 'til you're bald — unless you get your scalp in healthy, hair-growing condition again.

Examine You Free

We want to make it clear that you incur absolutely no charge or obligation by coming in for an examination

Your only obligation is to yourself. We do not accept cases that will not respond.

Guarantee Satisfaction

The Roberts' Specialists will give you a written guarantee that you must be satisfied within 30 days or it will cost you nothing.

For a free examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the desk clerk for Mr Alberti's room number. He does not make appointments, so come in at your convenience.

Examinations are given in private.

Crutches Don't Cramp Peter's Style

Wellstein at Work

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Sportswriter

BATAWA — Peter Wellstein has temporarily traded ski poles for crutches, but the youngsters he coaches at the Batawa Ski Club find his advice far from lame.

A broken leg suffered in a fall at Lake Louise, Alberta, while in downhill training with "Les Esperes," the understudy group to Canada's National Ski Team, is responsible for Peter's crutches, but he keeps his hand in the game by coaching the 13-member Nancy Greene Little League team here.

Despite the hindrance of a cast above the knee, Peter finds time every afternoon to sit in the Club House overlooking the ski slope and instruct the little leaguers with a microphone as they come down the slope on a course he designed for their weekly practice sessions.

The expert coaching has produced tangible results, for the Batawa Little Leaguers are undefeated in weekend dual meets this winter.

The Batawa youngsters are all under fourteen, but coach Peter isn't deterred by tender years in his pupils. Born in Germany, he started skiing at two, and was hooked on the sport by the time he came to Canada 12 years ago at the age

"I enjoy skiing competitively," says Peter, "and it gives ely," says Peter, "and it gives me great satisfaction; but one must start early, work hard and keep at it. Progress is often slow."

A first year Science student at the University of Guelph from May to December, Peter trains two hours every day all fall to strengthen himself and get in shape for the strenuous months of competition which lie ahead.

This is Peter's second year on the "Les Esperes" team, with whom he travels across Canada competing in ski races each weekend from December until April, when the team disbands.

His present cast will be removed in a few weeks, and Peter will get a new cast which will extend to just below the knee, enabling him to ski, but not to compete in races for the remainder of the season.

Meanwhile, Peter must be content to train his proteges during the week, preparing them for their weekend dual meets, and the upcoming zone play-offs, which like the Nancy Greene Ski League, are sponsored by the Canadian Amateur Ski Association.

Research Into Immigration Is Just Starting

OTTAWA (CP) — Comprehensive research is only just starting in Canada into the economic impact of immigration and problems and experience of immigrants, the Senate science policy committee was told Wednesday.

Dr. W. R. Dymond, assistant deputy minister of manpower and immigration, said the first major study of these matters started in January, involving 10,000 immigrants who will be interviewed every six months for the next three years.

His disclosure came after sharp questions were directed at him by Senator Andrew Thompson (L—Ontario) and Senator Allister Grosart (PC—Ontario) on professional and trades-training barriers to immigrants and the basis for recent decisions to give education and skills greater weight in entry requirements.

He told Senator Thompson the new study would broaden the available information to give a comprehensive picture of what happens to immigrants after they get here.

He said work now is under way to determine the "inhibitions" on new arrivals from licensing bodies such as the medical and engineering professions and the skilled trades.

Both Senator Thompson and Senator Grosart pressed for wider dissemination of information about the kinds of barriers erected by professions and trades unions.

Dr. Dymond said the department has made no critical comments about the validity of these barriers since provincial jurisdiction is involved, although some federal ministers had said publicly they would like to see a "more objective and liberal approach."

Your Dollars

Insurance Options

By KEN WEERES

After you have selected your basic life insurance policy, you will want to consider the various options which are available. These options, or riders, provide increased coverage at relatively low cost.

One of the more common forms of options is the double indemnity rider. This rider pays double the face amount of the insurance should the insured person die as a result of an accident. That is, if you had $10,000 of insurance with the double indemnity rider included, your beneficiary will receive $20,000 should you die by accident.

Another option, the family income rider, provides for your beneficiary a regular monthly income for a certain period of time, plus the face amount of the insurance should you die. Monthly incomes are usually $10, $15 or $20 for each $1,000 of insurance. For example, if you have $1,0000 of insurance and this rider, your beneficiary will receive $10,000 plus $200 a month for a specific period of time.

A third option, the premium period option, allows a policy holder to pay his premiums in a manner which is most convenient for him. But the cost is less if paid yearly rather than weekly or monthly. This is because the cost of collecting premiums is expensive. Obviously it is less expensive for the insurance company if you pay yearly rather than weekly.

Most insurance companies have available for an additional premium some form of disability and sickness insurance. The amount of this type of insurance you need will be partly determined by the amount of sick leave available at your place of employment.

Another important option to consider is the settlement option. This option specifies the manner in which you would like your beneficiary to receive the insurance should you die. There are three common ways. First is the lump sum method where your beneficiary receives all the insurance at one time. Second is the payments for a fixed period whereby your beneficiary receives regular payments for a specified period of time such as twenty years. Third is the life income option where the insurance company will provide a regular income for the life of the beneficiary.

This has given a very condensed description of the main options and riders available. Each company may call them by different names and charge slightly different premiums. But they are essentially all all the same. Be certain your insurance agent explains all the options to you.

One other form of insurance is group life insurance. This insurance is sold to large groups, sometimes thousands of people, all under one policy. The type of group covered includes employees of one firm labor unions, professional groups, or other groups of similar interests.

The main advantage of this insurance is the low cost. In some cases, employers pay all or part of the premium. Also, no medical examination is required.

One disadvantage of group insurance is the small amount of insurance available. It is usually restricted to the equivalent of one or two years' salary. Also it terminates when you leave the firm or organization. That is, it does not follow you from job to job.

Whether you purchase all or any of the available options will be determined by your own circumstances. For most families, they do offer the advantage of increased coverage at reduced prices.

Medicare Criticism By Robarts Assailed

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Robarts was "undermining Confederation" by his strong stand against the federal government's medical care program at this week's constitutional conference at Ottawa, Pat Lawlor (NDP-Toronto Lakeshore) said in the legislature Wednesday.

He said Mr. Robarts, in terming medical care a "fraud" and "Machiavellian scheme," used language that was "intemperate, inaccurate, ill-conceived, misguided, petulant and obtuse."

U. S. Takeovers May Create Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — American takeover of Ontario industries may have had a positive—not negative—effect on employment in the province, Stanley Randall, Ontario minister of trade and development, said Wednesday.

Mr. Randall was replying in the legislature to a question from Clifford Pilkey (NDP—Oshawa), who asked how many jobs were lost to Ontario in the last five years because of American takeover of industries.

Mr. Randall said it is impossible to obtain "precise data" on U.S. control of Ontario companies and the net effect of this control on employment in Ontario.

But employment in secondary manufacturing industries had increased from 680,000 in 1963 to 803,000 in 1968. This was an increase of 18 per cent "which compares favorably with the performance of the Canadian economy in this period."

In answer to another question from Eddie Sargent (L—Grey Bruce), Mr. Randall said a total of $11,480 accrued to the province during the last 10 years from the sale of patents on techniques developed at the Ontario Research Foundation.

Mr. Sargent, who has asked a series of questions in recent days about the value of the taxpayer of research done at the foundation and the Sheridan Park research development, exclaimed over this reply:

"You mean we've spent $500,000,000 on the foundation for $11,480 worth of techniques!"

Quebec Aids Hydro

MONTREAL (CP) Hydro-Quebec has agreed in principle to supply Ontario with a considerable amount of electric power between 1917 and 1977. It may also supply surplus power to New Brunswick.

The Quebec-Ontario agreement was announced jointly Wednesday by Jean-Claude Lessard, president of the Quebec Hydro-Electric Commission, and George E. Gathercole, Power Commission of Ontario.

The heads of the two publicly-owned utilities said the letter of intent, or agreement in principle, also includes a mutual assistance pact and will be followed eventually by a formal contract.

It was estimated the deal between the two corporations involves about $100,000,000.

Rylstone

RYLSTONE — Mrs. Murray Meiklejohn returned home recently from the Peterborough Civic Hospital.

Several classmates visited Ross Finch in the Campbellford Memorial Hospital.

William Morton Sr., and Bob, accompanied his daughter, Mrs. Alan Fargey and Mrs. Jack Morton, to Oshawa, where they visited their grandmother, Mrs. Mary-Jane Murray in the Oshawa General Hospital.

Lynne and Sue Spencer accompanied their aunt, Mrs. Bill Bertrand to Peterborough on Saturday where they visited Mr. and Mrs. Gary Lounsbury, Vicki and Marci.

Mrs. Thomas McKeown left recently for Oakville, where she will spend some time with her son Bill, his wife and sons Mark and Dean. She will also visit her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Duncan, who is seriously ill in a Hamilton hospital.

Eight tables of progressive euchre were played at the Women's Institute games night, at the WI hall. Prize winners were: Mrs. Ross Dickie, Mrs. D. Lain, Paul Hay, Lyle Finch. Another games night wil be held in two weeks' time.

Expulsion Threatened

School Students Stage Protest

ST. MARYS, Ont. (CP) — A two-hour walkout by 250 high school students Wednesday ended when principal Joseph Creech threatened the students with expulsion.

The walkout at St. Marys district collegiate and vocational institute occurred when a fire bell rang in the school. Six-hundred students walked out in response to the alarm, believed to have been a prank.

All Grade 13 and some, other students returned to class but about 250 stayed outdoors, parading up and down the street and obstructing traffic.

Principal Creech said he did not know the motive for the walkout, which some students said was to protest the later closing date of the school term this year.

St. Marys is 10 miles southwest of Stratford.

Rules Changed For Ministers

LONDON (AP) — The Church of England decided Wednesday to keep its 39 Articles of Religion dating from the Reformation, while no longer insisting that clergy must swear detailed acceptance of them at ordination.

The future form of assent required from men taking holy orders will be much briefer and make no specific mention of the articles.

The articles were pushed into the background by an overwhelming vote at the Church Assembly, legislative body of the church. Now the clergy convocations of Canterbury and York must draft texts for submission to Parliament to make the change law.

Multiple Sclerosis

Hope for Disease Victims Improves

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — There is room for "cautious optimism" that the future holds out improved hope for sufferers of the crippling disease of multiple sclerosis, a Toronto neurologist said here Wednesday.

"There is hope for some form of treatment, but it would be unwise to be too enthusiastic," said Dr. Oscar Kofman, head of the neurology department at New Mount Sinai Hospital.

Addressing the annual meeting of the Ontario division of the Multiple Sclerosis Society of Canada, Dr. Kofman said a number of different treatment methods are being studied, but as yet there is no conclusive evidence any one is the ultimate answer.

He said the disease which attacks about one in every 25,000 people is a "mysterious" one and the answer to it will probably come from "some basic scientific research."

Saint John Prisoners Set Fire to Jail

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — City firemen battled a blaze in the Saint John county jail for nearly two hours Wednesday night after rioting prisoners set ablaze mattresses on two of the building's three floors.

The fire followed a disturbance by prisoners on all three floors of the jail earlier in the evening when they jeered from barred windows and chanted, "police brutality, police brutality," and, "treat us like animals and we act like animals."

Police said the disturbance involved mainly younger prisoners.

Police said reasons for the disturbance were not known and there was no estimate of damage.

Farmers and Fishermen Will Find It Easier to Obtain Loans

OTTAWA (CP) — Both Houses of Parliament were preoccupied Wednesday with making it easier for some Canadians to get loans.

The Commons gave its final approval to a government bill raising the interest rate on loans under the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said the "more realistic interest rate" will make more money available to fishermen to buy boats, fishing gear and shore installations.

In the Senate a government bill to grant interest-free loans of up to $600 to Prairie farmers to help them dry wet and tough grain also was given third and final reading.

The fisheries bill now must go to the Senate for its approval. The grain bill, already approved by the Commons, now needs only routine royal assent to become law.

Today the Commons will continue debate on the government bill making numerous changes to the Criminal Code.

Conservative MPs from Newfoundland continued their criticism of the fisheries bill in the Commons. They said the bill would do nothing for Atlantic fishermen and pointed to the few loans taken out in the eastern provinces since the bill first was passed in 1955.

The amendments strike out the fixed five-per-cent interest rate and allow the cabinet to decide what the rate will be from time to time.

Mr. Davis has said outside the Commons that the rate will be one per cent more than the government pays for its money. If the change went into effect today, the rate would be 7½ per cent.

Another change allows credit unions, insurance and trust companies to grant the government-backed loans. Until now, only banks were approved lenders.

Mr. Davis has served notice he will introduce other amendments to the legislation, upping the present $10,000 limit to $25,000.

There was no debate as the Senate gave third reading to the bill authorizing the $600 loans to Western Canada farmers.

Many Prairie farmers have vast stocks of wet and tough grain which could not be harvested at the usual time last year because of bad weather.

Royal assent for the bill, the last parliamentary hurdle before it becomes law, could come within days.

Hellyer Vague About Urban Transit

TORONTO (CP) — Transport Minister Hellyer gave no indication Wednesday that the federal government is going to get involved in solving the problems of urban transportation.

Mr. Hellyer told a news conference that Ottawa is willing to help if the problem comes "within our jurisdiction," but then said it is a municipal and provincial matter.

Senate Studies Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate banking and commerce committee will hear suggestions and objections from investment company executives in a marathon public hearing opening Feb. 26, Committee Chairman Salter Hayden (L—Ontario) said Wednesday.

The committee will meet morning, afternoon and night, and the next day if necessary, to get the views of company executives on a government-sponsored bill setting standards for investment company performance.

Student Protest Continues

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A student occupation of a section of the administration block at the University of Windsor went into its third day today after two public meetings on the campus failed to either support or condemn the demonstrators.

Fifty-five students barricaded themselves in the theology, classics and part of the psychology departments on the second floor of Windsor Hall early Tuesday. Since then their number has grown to 80.

The Student Affairs Committee Wednesday passed mainly unanimous motions saying the body recognizes the merit of student demands for a voice in university decision-making bodies and that individual departments should "seriously consider the merits" of the propoals.

At a general meeting, about 1,000 students heard theology professor Vernon E. McEachern say he had visited his office in the "occupied" section several times unhindered by the demonstrators.

He asked why the administration did not see fit to approach the demonstrators and begin negotiating.

In a show of hands a majority of the students favored the demonstrators' demands for student participation in decision-making but about half the students rejected the sit-ins as a form of protest.

Hunt Observers Invited

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — Canada has invited Belgian observers to be present at seal hunts following accusations in the press here that pups were skinned alive and died in agony.

The newspaper La Lanterne has been conducting a campaign to ban such killings before the new seal hunting season begins. The Canadian embassy said seal hunting was controlled as strictly as the slaughtering of other animals.

Oral Approach

Schools to Promote Bilingualism

By LINDA GELDERT
Staff Reporter

Learning French in high schools brings to mind painful scenes of memorizing irregular verb tenses and cramming for vocabulary tests.

Happily, this is one scene that is changing.

Soon, students of French won't associate the language with anything but conversation and picture lessons.

According to a survey of local high school department heads, the "grammatical" method of teaching and learning French is gradually being phased out of the curriculum.

Ronald Robertson, head of BCI's French department, outlined the new conversation-orientated method.

"Essentially, this method is one whereby the language is studied 'scientifically', with the emphasis on the oral approach," Mr. Robertson explained.

"You must condition students to speak French. The whole idea, when learning any new language, is to think in that language."

At the early stages in a child's learning development, the study of grammar is not the most important thing. Therefore, in implementing the new system, the memorization of grammar and pronunciation rules will be de-emphasized.

This approach is now being used in elementary schools in the Belleville area — specifically in grades 7 and 8. Ideally, the program will embrace grades 5 to 12.

The results of programs already started in the lower grades have proven to be most successful. "We are very impressed with the results," commented Mr. Robertson.

This fall, Mr. Robertson will be taking further studies to teach this course. He will be journeying to the University of Lausanne in Switzerland to begin studies on "applied linguistics". These studies will help in teaching the language the new way. He chose to study in Switzerland because it is a country where French is used.

At Moira, Mrs. M. Phelps, French department head, sees several disadvantages of the "grammatical" method, and every advatange in the new.

"The traditional method doesn't make a child bilingual, one of the most important reasons for learning a new language," she said.

"The system was epitomized by an artificiality, but now, with the new method, the child has a motive. As well, it has been proved that the old way of learning French is unsuccessful."

"French," asserted Mrs. Phelps, "has to be taught imaginatively, and one of these ways is to speak it. Naturally, younger children learn easiest — in fact, the younger a child begins, the better," she added.

The students who have started to learn French by this method in elementary school often find the language easier to handle as they progress academically. In addition they enjoy it, too.

The audio-lingual method will be implemented in Moira's grade nine classes this fall, using tapes, charts and various audio-visual equipment.

"We are very much in favor of this new method, because, to put it simply, the old method just didn't work. Grammar is merely incidental, and should be gradually worked into lessons."

Miss J. T. Priest, head of Quinte's French department, said the school hoped to start new French courses this fall. At present, the traditional method is still being used in all classes.

The particular type of course Quinte hopes to have is known as "le francais internationel", which requires no text books, but does use tape recorders, and a type of picture monitor system.

In order to teach with the improved method, teachers must take special courses. Two teachers from Quinte will be involved in these this fall.

The program, Miss Priest pointed out, will be brought in one year at a time. At present, in the junior grades, the work is mainly oral anyway—working out to 60 per cent oral and 40 per cent grammar. In the senior grades, however, the percentage is often reversed.

"In the new system, everyone starts even — and, needless to say, we are looking forward to the changes it will bring," said Miss Priest.

Centennial's French department head, Clark Burtch, maintains that the language spoken always has predominance over the language written.

He explained that even in the senior grades oral work is stressed. With the beginning of new method next fall, the students will be left on their own a great deal.

With this new type of program each student will have more of a choice — not only of what he wants to learn, but how well.

Education Week Planned

By JUDY SCHRIEDER

An assembly was held Tuesday, when three students spoke on a Catholic Youth Congress they had attended in Toronto last fall. Two hundred delegates, representing 79 Catholic high schools in Ontario, assembled at Michael Power High School to lay the foundations for the Ontario Catholic Student Federation.

This organization was formed to establish a unity among the students, so they might work responsibly and maturely to inform both the government and the public of the financial plight of their schools.

Catholic education week begins February 16, and during the week an extensive informative program will be carried out within Nicholson.

Last week Nicholson Catholic College was in the sportlight as the boys' basketball teams added to their string of wins.

The seniors are now in first place and will go on to the play-offs if they win the next scheduled game. The junior and bantam teams also fought long and hard to maintain their lead in the league.

Special mention should be made of the girls' broomball team. Even on the coldest days they persevered with their trusty brooms to bring the title of city champions to Nicholson.

Spanish Fad

Hair Styles Go Elegant

"Ole!" chorus the hair stylists as they introduce a Spanish trend in coiffures. The bravado of flashing combs, torero braids, and flamenco designs are mirrored in the new styles. Many of the coifs follow a wrap-around technique, such as the face-framing silhouette worn by actress Linda Peck. This style features a demi-part with tresses swept to one side and securely held with a mantilla comb which boasts long gripper teeth.

Short hair also echoes the Spanish influence with a closely cropped matador bob. Hair is set in turn-under pincurls, then finger-brushed so that it remains curly and cap-like. Sideburns are given a feminine look by parting them into twin spears and cupping them in opposite directions. Bangs, too, offer a styling innovation — only half the forehead is covered. Linda, seen in the 20th musical Hello Dolly, points out, the bangs repeat the same divide and dip shaping.

For more formal occasions, the traditional upsweep is given an exciting touch. A fan of roll-like curls circle the crown and are the springboard for clusters of pencil-slim braids. These braids are wired so that they can be bent into a variety of shapes — loops, spears, and spirals. They cross the crown, tumble among the curls, dangle down the temples. Miniature flowers are nestled among the braids giving the style the sophisticated elegance of a senorita as she smiles from behind her lace fan.

Spanish Influence

Fantasy in coiffures will feature the spring style scene. Actress Linda Peck models a flirtatious Spanish hair-do created to be seen behind a fan.

Dance Held At Madoc

By BETH PRICE

The first week of February at Centre Hastings High School was filled with hectic preparations for the annual At Home.

The theme of the formal this year was The End of the Rainbow. The decorating committee outdid itself in a superb interpretation of the theme. The mood created by the decorations was one of magic and fantasy.

At midnight six girls competing for the Queen of the Rainbow title were presented to the audience. Carol Kincaid from Madoc was the winner, and received a bouquet of roses.

Pictures of the Queen and and the five princesses were taken for the yearbook

At 12.30 a.m. a buffet lunch was served the cafeteria, decorated with an arrangement of flower gardens and wishing wells.

The Music Makers from Club Cedars near Belleville, played an assortment of tunes, including waltzs, polkas and modern dances.

Keyette Week

By ANN McCORQUODALE

This week at Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School is Keyette week and the girls will be busy with shoe shines, candy and cupcake sales, the annual Keyette Follies and a dance Friday evening.

The dance will feature music by Jay Taylor and the Climax from Toronto. Dancing will be from 8:30 to 11:30 p.m. and admission will be $1.25 a person.

'Pretty Poison' Is Credit to Director Noel Black

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

All-American boy Anthony Perkins, and all-American cheerleader, Tuesday Weld weave an intriguing black comedy, full of ferocity and fun in 20th Century Fox's Pretty Poison, now playing at the Park Theatre.

Perennial juvenile, Anthony Perkins does a fine job as a former mental patient, trying to make it in a real world. But his fantasies close in to become a terrifying reality from which he cannot escape.

Tuesday Weld portrays with a coy innocence his pretty partner in crime and fantasy. Although her acting ability has often been underrated, Miss Weld personifies Pretty Poison, and succeeds in giving the role sensitivity and meaning.

The film, termed by some critics as "the best American movie of the year", is a credit to the first attempt of 31-year-old director Noel Black.

His future efforts, if "Pretty Poison" is any indication, will be worth watching.

When the feature made its first threatre appearances last year, 20th Century Fox's publicity people, hesitating in a slight moment of doubt as to how to promote it, decided on the hard sell approach.

Their doubt, and resulting advertising campaign, glorified Pretty Poison as a kind of "crime and sex cheapie" — which is just is not. Audiences, lured by promises of blood lust went away disappointed.

The one thing that did save it, was the strong and clearly audible "yes" of the critics in Toronto and New York.

Some film critics were so impressed that they led a scathing attack on 20th Century Fox for destroying what was perhaps one of the best American films of the year by their misguided and mispromoted advertising and distribution program.

Meanwhile, back at the studios of 20th Century Fox, the powers that be began to thing about what the critics said, wondering if it wasn't possible the critics were right and they were wrong.

What happened was a new release and a new ad campaign, aiming at the highbrow crowd — the serious film goers for whom the film was originally intended in the first place.

It's no longer a modified version of Bonnie and Clyde, but, "the most original American movie of the year" — Richard Schikel, Life Magazine, and "best screenplay of the year" — New York Film Critics.

With "yes" phases such as these some feel positive that the feature is assured of at least one Academy Award nomination.

Everything, as they say, is always better the second time around.

This taut suspense thriller will be playing at the Park Theatre until Saturday.

City Hall Gets New Doorway

Belleville's 94-year-old city hall has a new front doorway.

Actually it is not a completely new entranceway, but the solid oak doors which have graced the front of the building since its erection back in 1873 are being replaced.

William Belch and Son, local contractor, patterned the oak panelling, while the new door is factory made. The panelling was built to take the original glass bearing the city crest.

Replacement of the city hall front doors costing $1.175 was an item which last year saw considerable debate by city council.

A new aluminum door with side panels would have cost less money, but a majority of council members felt a new oak door would be more in keeping with the 90-year-old municipal edifice.

The new door and woodwork will be stained and varnished to match the original transomed arch above the doorway.

Liquid in the beaker held by Dianha Wales, only girl technical student at Loyalist College, if multiplied by 100, would equal the amount of blood given by technical division students. Wieger Bakker accepted the Loyalist Blood Donor award yesterday on behalf of his fellow students.

Technical Students Win Blood Donor Award

The fund for a swimming pool at the Smiths Falls hospital school for retarded children is richer by $78, thanks to a goodwill project of Loyalist College students.

John Lewis of the student administrative council yesterday presented a cheque, representing the proceeds from a box lunch auction, to Gerald Botting, president of the Belleville and District Association for Retarded Children.

At the same student gathering Wieger Bakker accepted the Loyalist blood donor award on behalf of the technical students. The technical division gave more blood at donors' clinics than the rival business division.

Roy Stevenson was on hand to present the Stevenson Ford Trophy to the top team in the winter nite car rally. The eight cars entered this year in the event, organized by student John Cameron, travelled a 45 mile course.

The team of Gord Chapman and Philip Armstrong won the trophy. Runners-up were Richard Gorelle and Larry Brown and Dave Chapman and Stephen Smith.

O'Hara Mill Opening Planned for Summer

The Moira River Conservation Authority will hold an official opening next summer for the O'Hara house on the old O'Hara Mill property northwest of Madoc.

The opening will be the authority's big public event of the year and already planning for the event is under way.

With its 120 year old water powered sawmill, the O'Hara Mill is one of the better known historical attractions in the Moira watershed.

Added attractions at the old mill site are a century old log schoolhouse moved from Elzevir township, a museum of farm machinery from the pre mechanical age and now the original O'Hara homestead itself, refurnished as it was 100 years ago.

Mrs. Bazil Kuglin of Foxboro has been primarily responsible for refurbishing the old O'Hara homestead. Last week she told authority officials at their inaugural meeting at Cannifton that plans were already being considered for the official opening.

The O'Hara Mill property was purchased by the Moira authority in the late 1940's and has been completely rebuilt. The upright Muley type saw is one of two left in the province, the other being at Upper Canada Village. The mill was built by James O'Hara back in 1846 or 1847 and was operated until about 1908.

The old homestead itself was purchased by the authority about two years ago and is being completely restored.

Several rooms of the O'Hara homestead were open to the public on weekends last summer.

Eastern Region Employees Join Rotating Strike

According to spokesmen of the Ontario Hydro Commission, this is the worst day of the Ontario Hydro Employees Union rotating strike and the Eastern Region with head office in Belleville is feeling the effects.

Except for regional office employees here in Belleville, almost all other employees in the Eastern region are out.

Picketing are all OHEU employees in hydro offices and installations in Picton, Cobourg, Ottawa, Kingston, Arnprior, Bancroft, Brockville, Cobden, Frankford, Perth, Peterborough, Tweed, Vankleek Hill, Winchester, Cornwall, Smiths Falls and Port Hope.

Accident Causes $2,000 Damage

PICTON (Staff) — A three car accident yesterday morning caused over $2,000 damage and slightly injured three people.

The mishap which occurred in front of Sophiasburg school on County Road 15, was reported to the OPP at 8.30 a.m.

The drivers involved were Wayne Lindsay, 29, of Northport, Sheridan Newcombe, 23, of RR2, Picton, and Richard Williams, 27, also of Northport.

None of the injured drivers were taken to hospital.

OPP officials said that charges are pending.

Club Plans Weekend Outing

PICTON (Staff) — Mild weather is hampering activities of the Prince Edward County snowmobile club said its president Terry Whattam.

He said the club hopes to get something going this Sunday. He thought a meet would be held on Picton bay.

He said refreshments will be served and activities should interest the whole family.

The club has a membership of approximately 15 people.

SURPRISE! THE BIRDIE IS WATCHING YOU

What was the world really like in the early centuries? We have to depend upon the artists of long ago for pictures of what life in general and people were like. The first cameras became popular in the 19th century, and people have been saying "Cheese" by the millions ever since.

If someone just gifted you with a new camera, don't throw your old one in the closet. — Someone is reading The Intelligencer Want Ads today with a good used camera in mind. Help him and you.

Students Demonstrate Against Duty on Painting

By DONALD MacKENZIE
Staff Reporter

Do clothes make the Man?

That question, made in reference to Sir Thomas More, was the reason 25 Albert College students, dressed in mock religious habits and armed with picket signs, marched on the customs and excise office in the Federal buildings here. Thomas More was canonized after his 1535 martyrdom for opposing the illegal acts of King Henry VIII in England.

The students were led by English teacher J. Christopher Williams in his latest attempt to receive a duty refund of $6.33 for a painting of Sir Thomas More he imported eight months ago.

At the heart of the dispute is the question whether the picture is a religious portrait, which are exempt from duty.

"He's a saint," asserts Mr. Williams.

"He's a sir," answers customs.

According to the customs people, since the portrait of Thomas More shows him dressed in robes of state rather than in religious robes it is not a religious portrait — saint or no.

So yesterday, in march the picketers with their mock costumes and signs "Long Live SAINT Thomas More" and "Do Habits Make You Holy."

"Does this robe make me holy?" says Mr. Wilson to customs.

"Of course not," comes the answer.

"Then how do Thomas More's robes of state make him unholy?"

Mr. Wilson said he wouldn't have paid the duty in the first place except that the customs people would have kept the portrait and charged him storage fees.

In his brief presented to customs and excise asking for the refund, Mr. Wilson points out that underneath the robes of state in the portrait, Saint Thomas More has on a hair shirt . . . which is clerical garb.

And so it has gone for the past eight months.

Yesterday a second brief was presented to the customs people asking for the refund. The first brief was refused after it received consideration.

But Mr. Williams is not going to give up "for it's a matter of principle now."

"The portrait was purchased for the saintliness of the man . . . his features, expressions and hands . . . not to look at his clothes.

It may take a while but I'm sure eventually the government will recognize Sir Thomas More for the Saint Thomas More he is."

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market edged up in moderately active mid-morning trading today.

The industrial index gained .34 to 192.92 and advances outnumbered losses by a fair margin. The market's strength follows a slight two-day decline.

Hand Chemical rose 1¼ to 24¾, Seaway Hotels 1 to 35, Neon Products ⅛ to 34¼ and Reed Shaw Osler ⅛ to 20½.

Among the heaviest traders, Canadian Pacific Investments warrants were up 15 cents to $9.25 and Revenue Properties ¼ to 20¼.

Trading in Bahamas-Caribbean was halted pending the clarification of the details of a recently-announced right offering. The stock closed Wednesday at 77 cents, down 33 cents.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Doctor Needed to Referee Barbiturates vs. Pep Pills

Picture this man. There are thousands like him. He takes barbiturates to put him to sleep. Groggy and confused in the morning he swallows an amphetamine tablet to wake him up. Day after day he is like a man who has left a ring of his own making: he allows himself to be knocked out by one pill and picked up from the canvas by another. And chances are there's not even a referee (doctor) present to make decisions. Our man has decided to take barbiturates and amphetamines on his own.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: It all began innocently enough. I lost my mother and was so upset that our doctor prescribed barbiturates for me to take.

I got hooked. He refused to prescribe any more, but I bootlegged them. Went from doctor to doctor to get my supplies. Then I began to take amphetamines, too. I had to, if I wanted to stay awake to keep my job.

My only reason for writing is to warn your readers not to begin. Although I have at last licked the habit, it has been a horrible experience getting "unhooked." Almost like being a dope addict and taking the cure. — Mrs. Y.

Comment: First, I want to underline the fact that I consider barbiturates an invaluable addition to the medical armamentarium. They are not "dope" when taken under a doctor's direction. For a short period of time, taken as temporary crutches to get a patient over some rough spot in his life, they are a gift to mankind.

But as Mrs. Y. warns, don't get hooked. You invite continued drowsiness, tremor of hands and lips, confusion and loss of judgment, poor muscular co-ordination, deterioration in appearance, loss of job and friends. The barbiturate habit is easy to begin, easy to maintain, but darned difficult to break. Why invite a knockout?

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Should there be much difference in the blood pressure of a 68-year-old woman and that of a 72-year-old woman? — Mrs. B.

Comment: If you're thinking of normal blood pressures, there shouldn't be much difference. (We don't think, any more, of systolic blood pressure being "100 plus the age.")

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Should a mole on the toe be removed? — Mr. V.

Comment: Not all moles need to be removed. But location doesn't make any difference. If your mole shows any signs of change — such as inflammation, bleeding, change in color, or enlargement, etc., — better see your doctor. He will decide whether to let it alone or remove it.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 38 years old and have been doing 30 pushups daily for the last 15 years (except Saturdays and Sundays). Should I continue or stop? — Mr. C.

Comment: I can't help getting a little facetious by saying "never on Saturday, too." The fact that you declare a holiday from exertion on weekends leads me to think that perhaps you don't enjoy doing the pushups so much. Is that true? If so, why do them at all? There are other forms of more pleasant exercise. Walking, for instance.

• • •

Two points of view: (Take your choice):

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have the cure for bursitis. Cut out all citrus juices and the patient will be over it within two months. — Mrs. T.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Bursitus? The cure is easy. Take the juice of a half grapefruit, half a lemon and half an orange in hot water every morning. — Mr. L.

Comment: My vote? Not knowing the answer, I'll have to abstain.

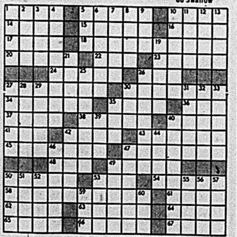
Yesterday's Puzzle Solved:

2/13/69



Ralph Plumpton, a member of the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board for 10 years and a former member of Thurlow Township Council, chats with reeve of Thurlow, Horace Casey, after receiving a plaque from the township for long and distinguished service.

Engineers to Conduct Survey in Thurlow

Two representatives from Crysler, Davis and Jorgensen Ltd. consulting engineers of Willowdale, attended the regular monthly meeting of Thurlow Township Council yesterday to discuss Thurlow's proposed Moira River survey to define the river's flood plain, the area under water during the high water period in the spring.

The representatives were seeking background information on the history of flooding in Thurlow Township.

Thurlow has initiated a survey of the Moira River under the control of the Moira River Conservation Authority to locate the river's flood plain so that builders will not mistakenly be locating on the flood plain at a danger to their property.

Eventually, it is possible that steps would be taken to prevent flooding during the spring break-up. At present some areas of Thurlow are flooded every year when spring rolls around.

The survey will begin this spring and will include the area to the Foxboro bridge.

The representatives informed council that it would be advisable to inform residents along the river that the survey is going to occur.

"We'll be going across property," a spokesman said. "If people know what we're doing it saves a lot of trouble."

In other council action yesterday, a bylaw was passed giving the reeve and council a raise in pay.

The reeve will receive $1,600 a year allowance for his activities as reeve — an increase of $100. On top of that use of his car will be subsidized by $350 in expenses. The latter is not an increase.

The allowance will be paid in monthly installments.

Council members will receive an increase from $15 to $18 per council meeting and an increase from $10 to $12 per committee meeting. Councillors will retain an allowance of 10 cents per mile for travelling.

What deputy-reeve, Borden Forsythe calls a "runaround" by the department of highways has drawn the ire of Thurlow council.

Council voted to send a letter to the Minisetr of highways concerning a delay over a sign just outside Latta

"I want to see why we're getting the runaround," said Mr. Forsythe. "I feel quite strongly about this."

On two occasions the department of highways has turned down a council request for a fingerboard sign for Highway 37 near Latta.

A present road sign at the Latta turn-off blocks vision for motorists trying to make the turn onto highway 37, council believes.

TRENTON — Members [illegible] the Canadian Forces will b[illegible]gin to receive their new uniforms by June of this year with the cost of each new uniform kit estimated at $250.

Production will be at the rate of some 3,000 uniforms per month with the distribution centre for the operation being No. 26 supply depot at Cobourg.

A spokesman at CFB Trenton yesterday afternoon detailed the project which will see some 98,000 Canadian servicemen around the world sporting the dark green attire.

"Contractors are making the uniforms and will send them to Cobourg", he said.

After priority groups have been issued uniforms will be sent to 43 bases across Canada according to what [illegible] termed "geographical lo[illegible]tion."

By this process Petawawa will be the first base to receive the new kits. Although no date has been given as to when the new dress will be completed, personnel at Trenton say it could be completed by 1970.

"A base will put in its order three months ahead of time", said one spokesman, "and the orders will be filled as complete uniforms become available."

Foulkes Suggests Canadians Form Mobile Force in NATO

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada should dismiss the notion that its armed forces must "dabble in all the multifarious forms of military endeavor," Gen. Charles Foulkes said Wednesday.

He made the suggestion in outlining a plan to the Commons defence-external affairs committee under which Canadian ground forces in Europe would abandon their present static role and be reorganized into a mobile formation.

Gen. Foulkes, first chairman of the old Canadian chiefs of staff and, before that, commander of the 1st Canadian Corps in northwest Europe, now is associate professor of strategy at Carleton University.

Gen. Foulkes argued in a written presentation to the committee that in a professional military force such as Canada's it is possible to attain much higher standards of technical, tactical and leadership skill than in non-professional forces.

URGES REVAMPED FORCE

He recommended that the present mechanized brigade group in Europe be restructured and made part of a NATO mobile force. Such a force exists now but has no troops assigned to it.

Under Gen. Foulkes's plan the four tactical bomber squadrons maintained by Canada in Germany would be converted to a ground support and transport role for the mobile force. All the European-based Canadian elements would be concentrated in one area of Germany, cutting down on administrative costs.

How Do We Allot Hearts?

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It is true that toy weapons don't spawn violence, any more than pornographic literature leads to rape; but toy weapons do make the taking of life seem casual and divorced from human values, just as pornographic writing divorces sex from affection and respect.

• • •

The mightier our instruments of communication become, the less we seem to have to communicate; technology increases the speed and vastly augments the audience for communication, but at the same time reduces the sense of human involvement in what is being communicated.

• • •

Speaking of technology, one of the ironies of our age is that, for instance, the transistor was developed by one of the greatest corporations in the richest capitalistic nation in the world — and one of its prime uses has been to revolutionize the fomenting of radical revolts in the underdevelopde countries!

• • •

When transplantation of human organs becomes easier and cheaper, on what basis will we allocate scarce resources like kidneys—to what groups, or sorts of individuals, will we give such priority to live, and on what implicit scale of ethical values will we base such vital judgments?

• • •

Our housing and city planning programs are failures, among other reasons, because they neglected to take into account the ethnic differences of the groups they were dealing with, preferring to pretend they did not exist or would go away; but a social project, to be effective, must start with reality and work toward the ideal from that base.

• • •

The so-called "Cold War" is already obsolete, largely because both the U. S. and Russia are "have" nations with far more to lose than to gain by any global confrontation; the real war of the future, if not averted by more wisdom than we seem to possess, will be between the developed and the affluent and the impoverished, regardless of the prevailing ideology in either camp.

Apropos of my recent piece on the need for adopting the metric system in our schools (and, of course, in the nation) the chairman of a scientific research group has said: "Fully 25 percent of time could be saved in arithmetic courses if metric decimal units were substituted for the English system of measures — such monstrosities as proper and improper fractions, numerators, least common denominators, greatest common divisors and mixed numbers could be laid to rest. . ."

Perhaps one of the most expressive words in the English language is "flabbergasted," which, oddly enough, originally meant "to frighten with a fly-swatter."

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For Feb. 14th,

Your birthday today: Your coming year is full of sudden breaks, scatered coincidence in the way your friends assist (or hinder) your pet projects. Romantic interests are strongly stimulated at intermittent intervals. Today's natives tend to project their emotional qualities very strongly, so that other features of their character are overshadowed or obscured.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Great expectations are the keyword for the day. Where you have been teaming up with respected colleagues and partners along consistent and constructive lines, the results are a fulfilling experience.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Conditions are ripe for some sort of personal windfall, according to what you have been attempting and how deep your involvement runs. Take the time to adjust yourself before you go into the evening.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Escape the pitfall of being bogged down in the immediate petty crisis by taking the longer view. Ask for help, and be very specific about what you want and why. Save your money today there is nothing lavish spending will bring you that you will retain very long.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Your interests today deepen to excitement although people around you may not be enthused. Make allowances for differences, and share what you can.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Today you are likely to be out in front leading. Find ways to improve your opportunity. Pay careful attention to the community news.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): You may find some novel way of increasing your income. Your participation in original research, new types of ventures, could encounter surprisingly good results.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct 22): Personal projects thrive. Tidy up so as to be free to make full use of the expansive mood, the improved spirits of the people around you. Romance is strongly favored this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Your self - improvement program blooms with its "big idea" today. Bring in all the expert advice available and get busy. (Select your collaborators with great care during several weeks of thought.)

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): New group enterprises are not ready for your participation. Stay with the schemes you have already set up for yourself. Take the time to consider the pros and cons.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): There is symbolic indication of some sort of merger just be sure that what you have built will retain its character if you are to throw in your lot with others. Likewise you have to consider the share your mate family, old friends might have in the revised venture. Serious discourse during the evening's hospitality may do the trick.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Transformation of your major venture appears here in symbol. Where you are eligible and have been searching, it could take the form of physical relocation. In any case a new rationale is behind your program.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Long-time associates provide expanding opportunity for increasing your standing and enjoyment of your resources. Think big, move along and persuade them to join you.

Cleveland Plans Airport in Lake

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — A proposal to build a $1,000,000,000 international airport one mile offshore from Cleveland on Lake Erie was announced Wednesday by federal officials.

Dr. Abe Silverstein, head of the National Airnautic and Space Administration Lewis Research Centre at Cleveland, said the plan called for a basic jetport which could be operating on the lake by 1978 with two two-mile runways and a three-storey terminal.

Bomb Injures 27

Montreal Brokers Are Back on Jobs

Concrete Slabs Blown Off Wall

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges, shattered by a powerful time bomb that injured 27 persons Thursday, reopened for trading at 11 a.m. today.

Employees used blackboards and chalk in place of the modern electronic quotation board torn up by the explosion.

Charles Neapole, president of the Montreal Stock Exchange, had announced after the explosion that business would resume here Monday. Meanwhile, brokers would be allowed to switch their orders to the Toronto Stock Exchange.

The bomb exploded over the trading floor in a corner of the visitors' gallery, scattering debris over the floor below. Five of the 27 injured suffered severe cuts and remained in hospital overnight.

The explosion came at a peak period—just before 3 p.m. when about 300 persons were on the trading floor and another 50 were above in the gallery.

It followed by several minutes an annonymous telephone tip in French to police that an explosive device had been planted in the 47-storey structure that houses the exchanges on Victoria Square.

Lucien Saulnier, chairman of the city's executive committee, later announced that reward money would be increased for information leading to those responsible for the wave of area bombings—more than 50 last year and eight since Jan. 1. The city and provincial governments each offered $10,000 rewards in December.

Estimates of damages varied, but Montreal Exchange President Charles Neapole said it was extensive to the total display board.

"God knows what it could cost us," he said. "It could easily be $1,000,000."

The bomb blast—third in Montreal since Monday—hurled people through the air. Most of the injured suffered bruises, shock or cuts.

Thick, acrid smoke filled the trading area and outside two concrete slabs six feet by 30 feet plummetted four stories, smashing huge plate glass windows in a branch of the Bank of Montreal.

"It's a miracle no one was killed," said Peter Turcotte, chairman of the exchange board of governors committee.

A stock exchange employee, Charles Stanbury, was conducting a tour of 50 women through the centre at the time.

"The bomb went off 10 feet from where we were standing but none of us were injured," he said in an interview.

"There was a very loud bang and a mass of smoke rolled over the trading floor.

"Huge chunks were ripped out of the walls and ceilling.

"In offices near the blast scene ceilings collapsed on the people inside. Everyone rushed out of the room and into the elevators down to the ground level."

One eye-witness said he saw a man plunge through a gaping hole in the gallery floor to the trading area.

Only a week before, Mr. Neapole said, he had confirmed the exchanges' facilities were fully insured in case of a bombing.

When police arrived, they quickly began treating the injured.

Police, picking their way through the smoking debris of the visitors' gallery, had to dodge live electric wires poking through shattered walls.

Bonn Expects Russians To Harry Berlin Planes

BONN (Reuters) — West Germany said today it has information indicating Russia will harass Allied air corridors to West Berlin in retaliation against West German presidential elections planned in the divided city.

Government spokesman Guenther Diehl said the West also could expect interference in overland traffic to the city.

These predicted moves, he said, were based on concrete information in the hands of West German government.

Diehl said a Communist propaganda campaign against the March 5 election was being forced ahead with every possible means. "The great machine is at full speed," he said.

He said the campaign must be taken seriously.

The West had to reckon that Russia "will hold manoeuvres around Berlin which will disturb the overland routes and disturb the air corridors," despite the effect on East-West relations.

The spokesman's warning came as British Prime Minister Wilson flew into West Berlin on a one-day visit to demonstrate Allied support for the city.

Less than 24 hours earlier, East Germany disclosed that Warsaw pact deputy defence ministers, headed by Soviet Marshal Ivan Yakubovsky, discussed military co-operation in East Berlin.

News of the meeting roused fears that Communist forces might repeat the manoeuvres held in 1965 in protest against a plenary session of the West German Bundestag (lower house) in West Berlin. Overland road traffic was badly disrupted then.

The Soviet ambassador in Bonn, Semyon Tsarapkin, called on Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger Thursday night to protest against the meeting of the West German federal electoral college in West Berlin.

Russia today backed the East German statement and accused West Germany of trying to test the resolve of the Nixon administration by proceeding with the elections.

A long article in the Communist party newspaper Pravda by Viktor Mayevsky described the election decision as "intolerable" and a provocation seriously aggravating the international situation.

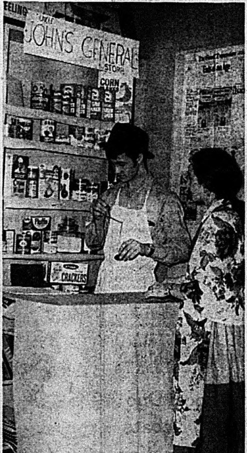
Wilson Visits Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — Prime Minister Wilson flew into West Berlin today and declared his visit was intended as a demonstration of British support for the city's communist - surrounded people.

Wilson arrived at Tempelhof Airfield from Bonn where he had met with West German Chencellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger and other German leaders.

His visit followed by a day a Soviet protest to Kiesinger against holding a March 5 West German presidential election in West Berlin and an East German disclosure that Warsaw pact military leaders had met in East Germany this week.

In a brief statement, Wilson told assembled dignitaries, including Mayor Klaus Schuetz: "The purpose of my visit is to demonstrate once again Britain's support and admiration for Berlin."



Depression Re-lived

Students at Nicholson Catholic College, engaged in an experimental project in history teaching, recreated the atmosphere of the great depression of the 1930s in their classroom. To illustrate the economic aspects of the decade they set up a store, complete with price tags of the era, and storekeeper and customer in costume. (For story and pictures, see Front Page, Second Section.)

Slavers Found In Brazil

BELO HORIZONTE (Reuters) — Poverty-stricken laborers were sold to farmers for about $15 a head by a slave traffic ring operating in the Brazilian state of Minas Gerais, police said today.

Truck drivers lured victims into the ring with promises of a better life, said police investigating the case in Montes Claros, about 200 miles north of here.

Police first stumbled across the ring when they stopped a truck carrying 58 persons, mostly women and children, to Montes Claros.

The case was turned over to federal police after 11 laborers claimed they were sold to work off their truck passage and the price paid for them by the farmers.

The 11 men said they were whipped out of bed at 3 a.m., forced to work under guard in fields, then dismissed when they paid their price in labor.

National Guardsmen Confront Students

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Student demonstrations were staged on a number of campuses across the United States Thursday and national guardsmen stood by today to control further disorders at two major universities.

Gov. Warren P. Knowles brought in 1,000 guardsmen to relieve 900 already on duty after four days of disorders at the University of Wisconsin's campus in Madison. Also on hand were 600 policemen.

A battalion of 500 riot - trained guardsmen was billeted near the Durham, N.C., campus of Duke University where student demonstrators clashed with local and state police Thursday.

At the University of California campus in Berkley, police arrested 36 persons, including 22 students, after protesters overturned tables in a cafeteria and scattered catalogue cards in the main library.

A detail of 50 state police broke up a sit-in demonstration at the administration building of the University of Massachusetts in Amherst, Thursday night, arresting 34. They were protesting Dow Chemical Co. recruiting.

At the University of Chicago, students who seized the administration building two weeks ago to protest the dismissal of an instructor voted overwhelmingly early today to end their sit-in, unofficial sources said.

Students Condemn Riot

Classes Reopen With Tough Rules

MONTREAL (CP) — Students returning to classes at Sir George Williams University Monday will be faced with seven tought new regulations designed to restore and maintain order and calm.

The administration Thursday announced the new rules in the wake of student occupations which led to Tuesday's violence and destruction of the university's $1,000,000 computer centre.

Breaches of the regulations will be met by "suspension and possible expulsion after due process."

The new rules are:

—The university may demand presentation of identity cards on entry to its main downtown building and at any time within the building;

—There shall be no unauthorized occupation of space or facilities of the university;

—No unauthorized person shall prevent access to any part of the building or its facilities to anyone who has the right of access for legitimate purposes;

—No unauthorized person shall interrupt any authorized activity or event;

—There shall be no violence or threats of violence to any person;

—There shall be no prevention of the legitimate movement of any authorized person;

—No one shall destroy university property.

Student council spokesmen said Thursday a university body is being organized to look further into the establishment of regulations governing the security of the university community.

This body will probably release its report within two weeks.

Student representatives condemned Tuesday's rampage and reaffirmed their "commitment to the university." A joint statement by the associations representing 17,000 day and night students said the university had suffered incalculable loss at the hands of "a very small group."

Of the 97 arrested 42 are black and 55 white.

Police said 44 of the adults are Canadian citizens, 23 are from Caribbean countries, 11 are from England, four from the United States and five from other countries.

Songsters Wing Homewards

The lively Sing Out group arrived back at Canadian Forces Base Trenton yesterday after a five-day trip to Lahr, West Germany, where it performed for service personnel and families at the NATO base. The group is back in time to start rehearsing its next big production — a presentation at Belleville's Centennial Secondary School Feb. 28, March 1, to raise cash for RCAF Memorial Fund project.

Police Youth Officer To Have Special Training

By June 1 this year the Belleville police force will have a full time officer to handle youth problems, including those probelsm to do with alcohol and drugs.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said that the officer who will have this position has not yet been appointed but when a decision is made there will be an extensive training program to go through.

According to the chief the officer will be attending special training courses outside of Belleville and perhaps in the United States.

Behind the decision to add another specialized man to the force is the youth problem which has lately been becoming more and more obvious, not only in Belleville but throughout the country.

Chief Crosbie said that the officer will not necessarily be acting as a conventional policeman but will be working with youth, discussing their problems, listening to their suggestions as well as making suggestions of his own.

Both the United Comunity Services in Belleville and the local ministerial association have already formed committees (Chief Crosbie is a member of both) to look into the youth situation and to try and help those young persons who are having problems.

Kinsmen Club to Mark Anniversary of Feb. 21

Kin Week, from Feb. 16 through Feb. 22 will be celebrated by 13,000 Kinsmen belonging to the 426 clubs across Canada.

The association of Kinsmen Clubs will be commemorating their 49th anniversary.

In Belleville the Kinsmen club has been in existence for the past 35 years.

Local projects carried on by the club in the past few years have included the erection, maintenance and debt retirement of the swimming pool on Dundas St. east. The pool has provided swimming lessons to thousands of children as well as a poolful of fun.

During the Centennial year, the club sponsored the competition for the Centennial Queen of Belleville, at the request of city council.

And now in 1968 the formation of a Kin-20 club was formed for boys of high school age and beyond to meet and serve the needs of the community and their fellow young people.

This is a pilot project and its success in Belleville will provide national Kin recognition and the formation of similar clubs in other areas of Canada.

Enquiries are already being received from other cities for information on forming such organizations.

Anniversary night will be celebrated in Belleville on Friday, Feb. 21 and the founder of the Kinsmen, Hal Rogers, will be in attendance.

Ten Companies to Use Show

Ontario's first Manufacturing Opportunities show since 1963 will be opening in Toronto on Feb. 18 with thousand of imported components and new products up for competitive bids.

And Belleville will be well represented with its own booth under the auspices of the Belleville Industrial Commission. It is expected that at least 10 local companies will be displaying their products at the show.

Sponsored by the Ontario department of trade and development the purpose of the show is to offer firms a chance to find economical new sources for components made in Ontario.

Several thousand component parts will be on display and visiting manufacturers will have the opportunity to contact hundreds of potential customers who will perhaps be Ontario sources of supply for other Ontario manufactured goods.

A central attraction at the fair will be the Industrial Opportunity Information Centre, featuring a stock exchange type of new product listing board itemizing more than 400 products.

Manufacturers outside the country from at least 20 foreign countries have also taken exhibit space.

The department of trade and development will also operate a new product display area, featuring products from 40 other foreign manufacturers.

And around 75 inventors will also be represented at the show, many of them with actual prototypes.

Gerald Joyce, chairman of the Belleville Industrial Commission (the first commmission in Ontario to take a booth at the show under its own name) said the exhibition should do two things for the city.

It will provide an opportunity for old businesses to get new accounts and sell Belleville to prospective industries that perhaps are looking for an ideal location to expand.

Both Mr. Joyce and indus- Brown as well as representatives from various Belleville companies will be present at the show.

All of the local display will be under one booth — Belleville.

Pine Acres Decision Known Next Week

TRENTON — A mix-up in office procedure will force Pine Acres residents to wait until next week to find out if they were successful in an attempt to have their assessments reduced by some 25 per cent.

A written answer to the 17 residents who had complained of the nuisance value of nearby Riverview speedway was expected today.

However, the report has not yet left Port Hope.

Read Budge, Court of Revision official, had completed his report earlier this week, but yesterday stated he forgot to send it to Cobourg to be typed.

"I'll be going to Cobourg this afternoon, and will take the report with me," said Mr. Budge.

"I sent other reports concerning Murray Township earlier, and I thought the Pine Acres one was among them." But it was not, and now the report must be typed, and then signed by Mr. Budge before individual copies can be sent out to the 17 residents concerned.

"It shouldn't take too long because the other reports for Murray should nearly be completed by now," explained Mr. Budge. "I expect they will get them by early next week for sure," he said.

Mr. Budge had hinted earlier this week that an assessment reduction might not be the answer to the problem.

When asked his decision on the request for a reduction, Mr. Budge would not give a direct answer, as he felt it unfair to those concerned.

He did say, however, "You remember during the court proceedings, when I asked the residents if I reduced their assessments completely, would this solve their problem."

"And they all shook their heads," said Mr. Budge. "That is the best answer I can give to that question."

Fire Drill Held at Home

PICTON (Staff)—Fire chief Duane Foshay presented a fire protection course Wednesday at the Thompson Nursing Home, RR1, Bloomfield.

He conducted a fire drill, explained methods of fire prevention, and demonstrated the proper use of fire extinguishers to the staff of the nursing home.

"An inspection of the premises was conducted to find the best means of conducting an evacuation in case of fire," said the chief.

He said, "Staff members took a keen interest in all aspects of fire fighting, and fire prevention."

Raymond Smith, operator of the home, agreed with Chief Foshay that fire was the greatest hazard in an institution of this type.

Tweed Holding Heart Week

TWEED — Mr. J. Harry Thompson, of Colborne Street, Tweed, chairman of the Ontario Heart Foundation in Tweed, has announced that the week of Feb. 16 to 22 will be "Heart Week in Tweed" and that volunteer canvassers will be out to raise funds for heart research.

The rate of progress towards the elimination of heart attacks and strokes depends on the funds available to underwrite the qualified and dedicated people who undertake this work in hospitals.

Mr. Thompson points out that over $1,400 from the canvass and "In Memoriams" gifts was given by the citizens of Tweed and vicinity to the Heart Foundation in the year 1968.

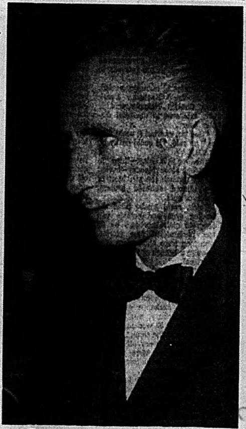
District Governor Visits Lions Club

DESERONTO — Deputy District Governor Barry Miller of Brockville paid his official visit to the Deseronto Lions Club this week, with 24 members attending the dinner meeting. Business was suspended in order to give the evening over to the address of the distinguished guest.

The members heard the organization of Lions International explained and the workings of each department. It is a complex but workable organization, with headquarters in Chicago.

In outlining the activities of the organization, the speaker reminded them of their project of sight-saving. Together with all Lions Clubs, the one in Deseronto pays for eye tests, and glasses if they are needed, for the needy. The speaker referred to the camp for the blind at Lake Joseph in the Lindsay - Peterborough district, a camp established and maintained by the Lions. Here the blind can enjoy camp life in safety. According to its membership, the Deseronto club was asked to subscribe $500 as its share, and doubled that amount.

Individual clubs take on projects of their choice. The Deseronto club sponsors the Guides and Brownies, and is co-sponsor with the Legion for the Sea Scouts, formed a year ago. The Lions Hall is maintained by the club, but is open to all worthy organizations in the town, and is in use regularly every day in the week, even on Sunday, when it is the meeting place for the Salvation Army. It is always open to churches for bazaars or teas. In most cases, only a slight fee is charged, if any. Together with the Red Cross and the Legion, the Lions see to it that those in need have a good Christmas. Many other causes are assisted when need arises.



Trenton Mayor Speaks Out

Community Activity Is Lauded

TRENTON — Trenton Kiwanis Club last night was host for the town's annual Civic Night and, says Mayor James MacDonald "this sort of activity should be carried on more often."

All elected representatives and municipal board members were present at the affair which was held at the Trenton Country Club.

Mayor MacDonald said the event enabled "different boards to get together and a mutual appreciation was established for what each board could do."

"Appreciation for some of our boards in Trenton is lacking," said the mayor. 'And an event such as this evening's is a good thing to make all aware of the work being done."

The mayor said many of the representatives were "unpaid, unsung and unhonored," and for many of them last night's praise was the only reward they would receive.

Local Duo To Debate Y Function

Two members of the Belleville Family YMCA will be television celebrities at least for one evening.

Harry Fast, president of the local "Y", and Mrs. Donald Lockyer, secretary-treasurer of the YMCA board here in Belleville will be panelists on It's Debatable tomorrow night at six p.m. on channel 11.

Mr. Fast and Mrs. Lockyer will be joined on the panel by CBC newsman, Floyd Patterson, and moderator Arthur Phelps.

Topic under discussion will be "Has the YMCA Lost Its Mandate."

IN MEMORIAM

CARR — In loving memory of our dear Dad and Grandpa, William Carr, who passed away February 14, 1967.

Gone dear father, gone to rest,
Away from sorrow and pain,
May you rest in peace dear father,
Until we meet again.

—Sadly missed and never forgotten by daughter Barbara, son-in-law Carl and children.

CARR — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather William Carr, who passed away Feb. 14, 1967.

God knew that he was suffering,
That the hills were hard to climb,
So He closed his weary eyelids,
And whispered, "Peace be thine".
Away in the beatuiful hills of God,
By the valley of rest so fair,
Some time, some day, we know not when,
We will meet our loved one there.

—Sadly missed by son Harry, wife Valerie and granddaughters.

CARR — In loving memory of my dear husband William who passed away, Feb. 14th, 1967.

Since you've gone first and I remain,
One thing I'd have you do—
Walk slowly down the path of death,
For soon I'll follow you.
I want to know each step you take,
That I may walk the same,
For some day down that lonely road,
You'll hear me call your name.

—Remembered by wife Verna.

CARR—In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, William Carr, who passed away Feb. 14, 1967.

In our hearts your memory lingers,
Always tender, fond and true,
There's not a day, dear father,
We do not think of you.

—Sadly missed by daughter Marilyn, Doug and children.

CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to thank our family, friends and neighbors for making our 40th anniversary one we will long remember. It was nice to meet old and new friends and neighbors. Many thanks to all.—Angus and Florence Mumby.

I would like to express my thanks to my relatives, friends and neighbors, Dr. Miles and nurses for their kindness while in the hospital and also Rev. Lamb of Holloway Street Church and Mr. Crossfield. — Mrs. Maud Shorey.

ADOPT A CHILD
MOULD A CITIZEN

Mrs. Suzanne Smith, Belleville, shows foster mother Mrs. Herbert Brown and Mrs. Janette Thompson, supervisor of adoption services for the Hastings County Family and Children Services, the poster which won her second prize in a province-wide contest to encourage more adoptions.

Adoption Poster Wins Prize

A young Belleville woman, Mrs. Suzanne Smith of Bertram Blvd. has been awarded second prize of $100 in an all-Ontario poster contest sponsored by the provincial council of the Catholic Women's League.

The purpose of the contest was to encourage adoption and more foster homes for children. A total of 374 entries was received, the first prize going to a London woman.

Mrs. Smith chose as her poster the outline of two hands symbolizing giving and receiving, with the printed words "Adopt a Child — Mould a Citizen". She used her own hands for the outline with her husband doing the tracing.

To win a prize in the poster contest is expecially meaningful for Mrs. Smith in that she herself is a foster child. She is the foster child of Mrs. Herbert Brown, R.R. 1 Belleville, Diocesan President of the Kingston area Catholic Women's League.

Across the province there is a need for more adoption parents and more foster homes — especially for children of Catholic parents. It was in recognition of this need that the provincial CWL sponsored the poster contest.

New Lights for Consecon

Ameliasburg Taxes Due Bi-yearly

AMELIASBURG — Property taxes will be collected twice yearly instead of annualy, council decided at this month's regular meeting.

Notices for the first interim payments due June 1 will be mailed out to residents early in May.

The township is paying three per cent interest for the balance of the year on payments received.

Robin Adair, a councillor from Hillier township, appeared before council with a proposal for providing new street lighting in the village of Consecon. Ameliasburg's share of the cost would be $480 a year.

Council agreed to be represented at a meeting called for Feb. 20 in the evening in the Masonic hall with all ratepayers in the village of Consecon invited. Area hydro manager Dan Keeler from Picton will be on hand to explain the type of installation being considered.

Consecon is a separated village partly in the township of Hillier and partly in the township of Ameliasburg. It is located on 33 highway halfway between Trenton and Picton.

The residents of the township can expect continuing improvement in roads as the result of the department of highways decision. Council was advised of spending on roads up to $60,000 this year.

Of the suggested sum for spending by the road committee this year $13,000 was earmarked for new construction and $47,000 for maintenance. Township clerk William Nightingale explained what appeared to be a generous action was the department's way of keeping abreast of the township's population growth and need for more and better road facilities.

The township has been invited to participate in discussion regarding day nursery facilities heretofore restricted to the residents of Belleville. The day nursery authority in the city is giving consideration to making available the service to residents of Ameliasburg and other adjoining municipalities.

Council is proceeding with the purchase of additional land to be managed by the Community Centre Board. The piece comprising nine acres borders the township's centennial park on the west. The intention is to clean it up for the public to use away from the softball diamond and beach and picnic areas.

Council accepted with regret the resignation of William (Bill) Tatham as the township's representative on the Prince Edward region conservation authority. The reason given by Mr. Tatham, who filled the post for three years, was "pressure of business."

The names of 68 dog owners who did not purchase tags for their pets last year have been handed to the county treasurer for collection.

Council, on behalf of township residents, will again provide a minimum of 20 silver dollars for the public speaking competition at Kente public school, Thursday, Feb. 20.

Township building inspector Harry Bisdee reports he issued permits to cover $10,800 in new construction during January.

PE School Board Officials Find Duties Mean Long Hours

By ROBERT DUNNETT
Staff Reporter

PICTON (Staff) — It will be the middle of March before there will be a let up in the heavy workload for the Prince Edward County School Board business administrator, E. A. Short.

Mr. Short said this was an unusual period with meetings almost every night of the week.

He gave three reasons for this unusually heavy workload.

The board must have its budget drawn up by Mar. 1, along with the tax requisition statement.

New arrangements have to be made as to how the board will carry out its business.

Each member has some new idea that he wants to see implemented under county administration.

To make things even more difficult, the board is involved in teacher salary negotiations.

Each committee must prepare its own budget and send it to the finance committee, which in turn prepares a budget for the whole board.

The balance left over and above the government grants is the money that must be raised from county taxpayers.

Mr. Short said that in past years the army camp has contributed $30,000 a year to the board's revenue, but this year it will be cut down because of fewer students attending schools from the base.

The army camp is unable to say how many students it will have next year.

The administrator said about the board, "The members are getting tired, but they are doing a good job."

Northport Post Office Is Closed

Another rural post office — this time at Northport in Prince Edward county is being closed.

Picton postmaster Ross Greenfield has advised that the 32 patrons at the Northport office in the Warwick store will have the choice of having mail delivered to boxes in front of their homes or of using sections in a large compartment box, each with its own key.

In the future Northport will no longer be used as a postal address but will be covered by RR2, Picton.

Youth In 1969

Drug addiction . . . alcoholism . . . the so-called new morality . . . student power. There is so much emphasis nowadays on these aberrations of society.

And they are on the increase in North America. Among the young, delinquency runs the whole gamut from shoplifting to drinking and use of drugs. In New York recently, police broke up what they described as a mass "pot party" at a private home in the Queen's district and seized 108 teenagers, more than half of them under 16. The owners of the house were aware the party was going on, but believed it was a purely social gathering for their daughter.

Locally, police are also concerned about a sharp rise in drug trafficking; and juvenile drinking, according to city Police Chief Douglas Crosbie, is an even more serious menace.

What can be done to counter these tendencies? The police department is taking one such step by sending for training in the United States an officer who will specialize in youth problems.

While the problems themselves cannot be ignored, society must address itself increasingly toward channelling the interests of youth into more positive areas.

Sporting activities . . . recreation . . . physical fitness. These must be given every encouragement. Young people should be taught to have more respect, beginning with themselves — for with self-respect comes concern for others. Enthusiasm, the need to develop as individuals as well as members of society at large, to train their faculties to the highest perfection they can attain — these, too, are factors in a sound upbringing. They are ideals to be cultivated in spite of the often poor example set by adults.

The boy scouts, girl guides, and church organizations are groups that still perform a service of incalculable value on behalf of the young. Without them the kind of problems that are rampant today could be even worse than they are.

Another fine influence on the young is the type of activity fostered by the Duke of Edinburgh's award scheme. More widely known in Britain than it is here, young Canadians nevertheless have qualified for this award over the years. Briefly, it has to do with achieving distinction in both academic and sporting activities.

Young people should never lose hold of the spirit of adventure. Physical, mental and moral strength, and personal integrity, are still the highest goals they can attain. Today, as much as ever, these are worthy ambitions.

Medicinal Properties

Garlic, as we all know, is an edible substance — pungently so by reason of its strong flavor and odor, and relished particularly by Italians and other Latin populations.

But how many are aware it has healing properties in medicine? Researchers at Newcastle University in England, after learning that in France horses suffering from blood clots were treated with garlic and onions, have confirmed that boiled or fried onions do indeed raise the blood's capacity to dissolve internal clots. And garlic, too, presumably, although the Newcastle research makes no mention of it. The encyclopedia, however, does mention that garlic is used in medicine in the form of a syrup and as a poultice for bronchitis. This in turn reminds us of a passage in Sir Francis Chichester's book about his lone voyage around the world a couple of years ago.

"I attach enormous importance to garlic and usually ate a clove (garlic breaks up into separate parts, or cloves) a day," wrote Sir Francis. "I had been advised to do this for the good of my lung."

The celebrated yachtsman and one-time pioneer aviator does not specify the lung condition, but from his earlier book, The Lonely Sea and the Sky, we know that several years ago he suffered from cancer. That he not only survived this, but went on to other incredible feats of seamanship and endurance, including his lone trip around the world via Cape Horn in Gipsy Moth is now legend.

It is good to know that even the humble garlic clove has useful properties, despite its devastating side effects! As Chichester observed: "One does not get a chance to eat as much garlic as one wants without bowling over anyone who comes near."

No Heroics

President Nixon Favors Conciliatory Approach

By HAROLD MORRISON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

While shying away from any quick summit meeting, American President Nixon nevertheless appears to be slowly, methodically preparing approaches which eventually may prove more productive than instant spectacles that resolve nothing.

Nixon's predecessors, including John F. Kennedy and Dwight D. Eisenhower, learned the hard way that summits, usually preceded by the drama and excitement of rising expectations, can have shattering impact on public morale when leaders come away empty-handed.

But the lack of communication between the nuclear giants, including personal exchanges among the leaders, also carries with it the possibility of misplaced suspicion, and from published views it would appear that much of the world would be relieved if Nixon and the Kremlin chiefs did manage to have a quiet, friendly chat.

Prospects for such a discussionwere badly jarred by the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia. The Soviet offer of talks to reduce the missiles race may have been partly an attempt to erase the shadows of that invasion though the Czechoslovaks have shown they have the means to make the world remember.

In any case, Nixon has demonstrated a policy of conciliation. Aside from endorsing the Vietnam talks in Paris and urging the United States to ratify the pact against the spread of nuclear weapons, he has supported a Big Four approach on the Middle East which should appeal to the Soviet Union as well as to France.

Biggest move of all was his decision to halt for the moment the deployment of the U.S. anti-ballistic missile system which had been President Johnson's response to the Soviet program. These costly military projects are part of an arms race which brings fear to many smaller powers. Sooner or later, they figure, the buildup will lead to an explosion.

Perhaps equally serious is that the American strategic project would have involved heavy outlays, reducing funds that might help put out the fires in American cities.

While the Nixon government suggests the halt on the anti-missile system is only temporary—until the budget can be reviewed—European commentators consider it a clear invitation to the Soviet Union to begin joint talks on limiting the missiles race. It also may be an appeal to Moscow "doves"—to strengthen their hand in case, as some reports suggest, the Czechoslovak issue has set off a power struggle within the Kremlin which is still unresolved.

Beautiful gowns, lovely ladies, entrancing music, and pleasant surroundings contributed to a most enjoyable event at Hotel Quinte, when the Bachelors and Benedicts of Belleville observed St. Valentine's Day with an assembly which long will be remembered with pleasure by all who were present. The spacious dining room was used for dancing, and was nicely decorated for the occasion. A delicious buffet supper was served at midnight. The Strathdee Orchestra of Toronto furnished delightful music. The stewards were A. P. Allen, Sanford R. Burrows, W. J. Cook, J. Vincent Doyle, B. L. Hyman, Allan C. McFee, W. E. Letters to the Editor

Support for Working Mothers

Editor,

The Intelligencer.

I recently spoke at the Belleville branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association. I found it a most stimulating evening and a most receptive audience.

However, to preclude any uproar from the working mothers in the Belleville area, I would like to point out that I am very sympathetic and even supportive in many cases where mothers find it necessary to add additional income so that their children may have luxuries in life, as well as food and clothing — which with today's high costs and rising rents makes it very difficult for many families to provide.

There are many many problems facing parents and children alike and the fact that one third of the mothers in Ontario work only increases the problems presented to the family today.

I enjoyed very much meeting with the group in Belleville and hope that this will alleviate any concern that the public may have.

University Violence

Montreal Gazette

What happened at Sir George Williams University has proved beyond any further question, the need to defend not only this university, but all universities, from intimidation by the violent. The universities have to be citadels of freedom. But there comes a time when freedom itself can be preserved only if it can be defended. In the history of Canadian universities, this time has now arrived.

It was evident from the uproar and destruction that the real issue is not one between the administration and the students. It is one between the university and a comparatively small group of students. The great majority of those attending Sir George Williams want to get on with their studies. Their college year has been disrupted. The building is so severely damaged that the full restoration of classes may be long delayed. To what extent is the life of a university, as a whole, to be disrupted by the action of the few?

What happened at Sir George Williams has made clear that the line of permissible conduct cannot be left vague and undefined. There has to be a clear statement of the line at which the conduct of any minority goes beyond the right to dissent and becomes an intolerable violation of the rights of the university community as a whole. Those crossing that line will have to be removed from the university community.

Nothing to Do? Remedy May Lie With the Students

Editor,

The Intelligencer.

About the most charitable thing that can be said for Snowball '69 at BCI is that the weather was nice. The whole affair was a very bad example of inept organization and poor promotion. The basic ideas were sound, and, had they been carried through with any degree of efficiency, the events of Feb. 8 and 9 would have been a success.

On Friday evening BCI offered the Snowball '69 Hootenanny which was well attended by students from all schools. The MC's, Larry Dempsey and Dave Lewis, kept the stage clear of the pennies thrown by the audience, but unfortunately, they were unable to control the crowd. Audience participation was quite enthusiastic and sometimes overcame performer participation. For this we must apologize to the singers. Although the calibre of entertainment was not quite up to the standards set at last year's hootenanny, the evening could have been very enjoyable had not the crowd behaved in such a disgraceful fashion. Judging from the remarks of both staff and students, it seems doubtful that BCI will host another evening of such entertainment.

At 9:30 on Saturday morning, a broomball game was supposed to commence the day's activities at BCI. At 9:30 Saturday morning exactly four people were standing on the steps of the school. That set the pattern for the whole day, both at BCI and at Zwick's Island. The turnout from BCI hardly exceeded 30 students at the most. The representatives at Zwick's Island were even less. Perhaps the poor turnout can be attributed to the basketball tournament at Napanee or the computer trip, but essentially the main reason lies in the weekend's poor organization and promotion. Not even all the members of Students' Council put in an appearance and that is the least that can be expected. One student, who was only supposed to announce the events, ended up organizing them both at BCI and Zwick's Island.

The students themselves deserve some of the blame for the failure of Snowball '69, on account of their apathy and disinterest. The most prevalent complaint among students in Belleville is that there is nothing to do. To alter the Prime Minister's words slightly, "Put some action where your mouth is"

Moderates Gain Strength

Student Anarchy May Be Approaching Its Peak

By STEPHEN SCOTT

NEW YORK (CP)—There is a theory that the effectiveness of youthful revolt in the Western world—of which the wild rampage of some Montreal students Tuesday is a violent example—is on the wane.

That is not to say that protest, be it by students or black militants, will not continue. And the protests will have a degree of success.

But moderates in the various areas of society, the public and thus government now are rebelling against excesses.

In the last decade or so protest could count on support from much of the community. In the United States in particular protest resulted in changes in the face of society.

Then the militants went too far in the eyes of the middle class wage earner who has to foot the bill and who elects governments. His "backlash" was felt in the last U.S. election when Richard M. Nixon, running in part on a law-and-order platform, was elected.

The same backlash was felt in France last year when Frenchmen rallied to President de Gaulle after the May student riots.

And the same backlash is showing up at the university level. For instance British non-strikers moved against strikers at the London School of Economics and Cambridge University recently.

In Montreal non-strikers cheered as police routed 150 to 200 students who caused much damage at Sir George Williams University.

There are signs that government is coming to the end of the road with student militants. During the British trouble, Education Minister Edward Short made a strong statement in the Commons which said in part that the strikers were harming the educational chances "of the vast majority of students who are just as idealistic and decent as ever they were."

Educational authorities throughout the U.S. are closely watching the situation in California where Governor Ronald Reagan and S. I. Hayakawa, head of San Francisco State College, are fighting to keep universities open in the face of actions by angry militants.

Particular attention is being paid to Hayakawa Vancouver-born educationist who took over San Francisco State when it was in a chaotic situation.

The outspoken Hayakawa has introduced a new element into the continuing controversy of university revolt. He compares militant leftist disrupters with students who disrupted universities in Hitler's Germany.

The same comparison has been made by Dr. Bruno Bettelheim, an eminent psychiatrist, when referring to a small group that took over the administration building at the University of Chicago. Bettelheim, by the way, can be regarded as a bit of an authority on this—he was a refugee from the Nazi regime.

Reagan and Hayakawa have used every means at their disposal to keep universities open. Reagan has declared an "extreme state of emergency" at the University of California at Berkeley, allowing him to use severe measures to keep the peace.

Neither man could use the measures if he did not [illegible] he had majority support from the public.

If they succeed in putting a lid on protest it seems logical that other areas will follow.

Protests, no doubt, will continue, but it seems clear that a line is being drawn past which protesters must not go.

Quebec MP Who Lost Wife Supports Change in Abortion Law

OTTAWA (CP) — Creditistes argued Thursday that a proposed law on therapeutic abortions goes too far, while New Democrats said it doesn't go far enough.

But Liberal MP Joseph Alfred Mongrain, former mayor of Trois-Rivieres, a Roman Catholic and the father of seven children, fell somewhere in between.

Mr. Mongrain, who now represents Trois-Rivieres in the House, said that unlike the New Democrats, he is opposed to abortion. But unlike the Creditistes, he felt he could not impose his religious convictions on others.

"If anyone doubts the worth of what I am saying, I'll allow myself an indiscretion and recall a personal experience," Mr. Mongrain said.

"I want to tell them that I have had the experience of watching a wife in a sickbed, of seeing three doctors around that bed, them telling me for two weeks that with an abortion they could have saved her.

"And for principles of conscience, they did not abort the wife, and I lost her and the child.

"Eh bien, I ask those who have troubled consciences whether it would not have been better to save the mother at that moment rather than condemn both of them to death."

Mr. Mongrain said MPs who take a serious look at the abortion proposal would find it a step in the right direction.

David MacDonald (PC—Egmont), a 32-year-old United Church minister, argued that it is a half step that merely suggests Parliament is coming to grips with the problem.

The legislation would permit therapeutic abortion where a medical board certified that the health of the mother was in danger.

But women who had been raped or become pregnant as a result of incest would have no escape, nor would those who doctors knew would give birth to seriously-deformed children. Mr. MacDonald said the result will be thousands of back-alley abortions.

Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East) and Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) continued their party's argument that abortion is a matter for doctors rather than judges and should not be regulated by the Criminal Code.

Henri Latulippe (Creditiste—Compton) said larger family allowances and more state concern for mothers would solve the problem. Abortion would only lead to the destruction of the nation.

If the government encouraged rather than discouraged pregnancy, Canada wouldn't have to populate itself with thousands of immigrants, Mr. Latulippe said.

Most MPs praised the bill in general but said it should be treated as a first step in a radical reform of criminal law.

Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Brewin said Justice Minister John Turner's national law reform commission, due to be established next year, must tackle this problem boldly.

Robarts Refuses Plea To Hold Medicare Vote

TORONTO (CP) — Premier John Roberts said Thursday that a referendum on Ontario's entry into the federal medical care scheme is not necessary because the 1967 provincial election had given him the mandate to keep the province out of the scheme.

Replying in the legislature to a request by Elmer Sopha (L—Sudbury), Mr. Robarts also said he has formally asked the federal government for a fiscal equivalent of Ontario's share in the plan.

He said Ottawa has not replied yet, but that Ontario wants about $175,000,000, the amount the province would receive if it took part in the scheme.

Ontario taxpayers this year are contributing $225,000,000 to the plan, the premier said.

Speaking on constitutional problems, Mr. Roberts said conferences of provincial premiers may no longer be necessary because of the decision at this week's federal-provincial conference that such talks should be called more frequently.

Mr. Robarts was replying to a question by Liberal Leader Robert Nixon who asked whether the premier was thinking of reconvening the Confederation of Tomorrow conference as requested by Premier Walter Weir of Manitoba.

In other business:

—Agriculture Minister William Stewart announced the provincial government will no longer supply loans for farm mortgages under the Ontario Junior Farm Establishment Loans Act because loans are available from the federal government through the Farm Credit Corp. Mr. Stewart said the decision was made because there was no useful purpose in duplicating services.

—First reading was given to a bill which would change the name of the attorney-general's department to the department of justice.

—Education Minister William Davis said careful study is being given to the Hall-Dennis report on educational reforms, including an assessment of the costs of implementing some aspects of the report.

Conduct of Judge Subject of Inquiry

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Arthur Wishart announced Thursday that Mr. Justice Donald A. Keith of the Ontario Supreme Court has been appointed to hold a public inquiry into the conduct of Provincial Judge Lucien Kurata.

Judge Kurata, removed from the bench in November pending the outcome of a private inquiry by the Ontario judicial council, had asked that Mr. Wishart lay criminal charges against him rather than hold a public inquiry.

Judge Kurata has said that allegations against him of improper assault on a policewoman, of attempting to interfere with the administration of justice and of making an attempt on his own life are false.

Mr. Wishart said in a statement to the legislature that the judicial council recommended at the end of its inquiry that a public inquiry be held.

The charge of improper assault brought against Judge Kurata was laid by Marlene Watson, a Toronto policewoman, who alleges the offence took place Nov. 15, 1968, in the judge's office at the old city hall.

OTTAWA (CP) — A review of Canadian policy on the admission of draft-dodgers and military deserters from the U.S. is almost completed, Immigration Minister Allan MacEachen told the Commons Thursday.

Legal Aid Plan Flaws Already Known --- Wishart

TORONTO (CP) — The government was already aware of flaws in its legal aid plan when it was attacked last week by Provincial Judge Joseph Addison of Toronto, Attorney-General Arthur Wishart told the legislature Thursday.

Answering a question by James Breithaupt (L—Kitchener), Mr. Wishart assured the house his department is aware of "certain flaws" in the system, and will conduct a "thorough investigation to prevent some of the things of which Judge Addison complained."

The judge said in an interview published Feb. 8 that a handful of lawyers abuse the system, earning more money by making clients sit in jail longer than necessary through several remands and pleading them not guilty against their best interests.

He also charged that a few lawyers get a high proportion of legal aid cases.

"These charges present nothing new," Mr. Wishart said. The legal aid executive and various committees are carrying out constant investigations and are "on top of the situation."

Commons Will Hold Day's Constitution Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons decided unanimously Thursday to hold a special all-day debate today on the constitution.

Each speaker will be limited to 20 minutes except the four party leaders.

Prime Minister Trudeau said in reply to Opposition Leader Stanfield that he will decide after the debate whether a parliamentary committee should be established to look at the parliamentary aspects of constitutional reform.

Mr. Stanfield suggested formation of such a committee in light of federal proposals for constitutional reform in such matters as the Senate.

Mr. Trudeau repeated in reply to another question by Mr. Stanfield that the federal authority does not accept that it should exercise its spending power only after certain consultations with the provinces.

However, the government believed in and had practised consultation with the provinces on shared-cost programs such as medical care insurance.

Mr. Trudeau said he hopes the constitutional question would be raised in legislatures across Canada, and he said a parliamentary committee might want to travel to various places during its study.

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) asked whether the "key and central" issue of spending powers would be one of the specific questions referred to a parliamentary committee.

Mr. Trudeau said this might eventually come before a committee, but it would not be one of the initial subjects.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette asked whether the federal government intends to withdraw from all shared-cost programs with the province. Mr. Trudeau said that since there is no precise definition of spending powers in this field, it would be difficult to give a commitment.

Benson Is Willing to Accept Ground Rules for Spending

TORONTO (CP) — Under a new constitution the federal government would be willing to work out ground rules with the provinces to provide "adequate consultation if not unanimity" on how money is to be spent in areas of provincial jurisdiction, Finance Minister Benson said Thursday.

Mr. Benson told a service club luncheon here that the federal government must have the power to spend to encourage the equitable development of Canada and upgrade the standard of such essential services as health care.

"To consult with the provinces before embarking on shared-cost programs would be against the present constitution," he told reporters later. "But under a new constitution we would be willing to work out ground rules for consultation, at least in some areas."

He said his position is the same as that of Prime Minister Trudeau, who Wednesday turned down requests from two provincial premiers for prior consultation on shared-cost programs. However, the government agreed to set up a federal-provincial tax-structure committee to study joint federal-provincial spending and other fiscal matters.

Mr. Benson said the federal government has felt "impelled" to use its constitutional powers to spend in areas of provincial jurisdiction in order to provide such services as the Canada Assistance Plan and medical-care insurance.

But Canada's present constitution "gives no recognition to the problems which have arisen" in various federal and provincial spending areas.

He said a white paper on income tax reform is to be presented to Parliament in June.

Higher Pay For Interns Is Proposed

TORONTO (CP) — If the Ontario Hospital Services Commission goes along with the Ontario Hospital Association, interns and medical residents in the province may be paid between $1,600 and $3,300 more by 1971.

The association's board of directors decided Thursday to ask the commission to consider a $7,000 starting salary for junior interns and a top annual salary of $12,500 for senior medical residents within three years.

While endorsing increases, the association said the proposed salary increases cannot come from hospital operating costs.

The association recommends that both groups receive retroactive increases to last Jan. 1, bringing the starting rate up to $5,400 and giving chief residents an annual salary of $9,200.

Immigrant Status Probed After Riots

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is investigating the immigrant status of each one of the many non-Canadians arrested in Tuesday's riot at Sir George Williams University in Montreal, Immigration Minister Allan MacEachen said Thursday.

Mr. MacEachen told the Commons in reply to a barrage of opposition questions that it might be possible in certain cases to withdraw student visas.

Later, Prime Minister Trudeau rejected a suggestion that Ottawa investigate the causes of disturbances and unrest on campuses. He said the matter is not within federal jurisdiction.

MPs angered by the destruction of $2,000,000 worth of property at Sir George Williams tossed questions at Mr. MacEachen aimed at getting a clear statement about what the government intends to do about the foreigners involved.

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) suggested that under present regulations "people connected with Carmichael"—Stokely Carmichael, the U.S. black power advocate—are permitted to enter Canada and cause trouble.

Foreigners, particularly from the United States, are causing the Canadian taxpayer the loss of large sums of money, Mr. Woolliams said.

Contract Bridge

By A. D. Heron

The Belleville Duplicate Bridge Club holds a weekly game at 7.30 on Tuesday evenings, in the Belleville Armories. Any bridge player is welcome to attend, even if he has never played duplicate bridge before.

The game is exactly the same, with the exception that everyone gets to play the same hands, and scores are compared relatively, rather than on a total point basis. This removes the luck of the deal.

And don't let the fact that you don't feel "good enough" to keep you away; for although there are many good players who play duplicate, many average players also derive a great deal of enjoyment from the game.

The following deal, taken from the World Bridge Team Championship of 1968, was played between Lebanon and Thailand, and shows that even the experts can run into disaster at the bridge table.

With Thailand sitting North South, South opened four hearts, West passed, and North raised to six hearts, passed all around. With the hand with the diamond Ace and King on lead, this contract went down one.

However, when Thailand sat East West, disaster struck! Over the four heart opening bid, West bid four no trump, showing a minor card two-suiter. East probably should have passed, and let West choose the suit over the double, but he chose to bid five clubs, which was doubled.

After South led the King of hearts and shifted to a trump, and North extracted every one of declarer's trumps before returning a heart, the defenders took all thirteen tricks! Down eleven, doubled.

Bureau in Need of Drivers

The Belleville and District Volunteer receives many requests from Health and Welfare Agencies for volunteers to fill various needs in the community.

The organization is a non-profit community service, which attempts to match the requirements of the community with leisure time donated by volunteers.

In this space, each month, a list will be published of the kinds of service required by the bureau. It is hoped that anyone wishing to give their leisure time will contact Volunteer Bureau Director, Mrs. Ruth Burrows, at 962-9531.

This month, the majority of requests are for drivers, for the following:

- for handicapped child, daily, to and from King George School, (from North Coleman Street)
- to take mother and small child to Smiths Falls to hospital for regular appointments
- daily transportation required for child to Belleville Day Nursery from Emily and Station Street
- drivers needed for children and mothers to and from morning pre-school volunteer program

There are several other needs to fill, in addition to drivers. If you think you can meet these or other requirements, please contact the Volunteer Bureau.

Topic on Homemakers at WI Meet

Mrs. Gerald Brooks was hostess for the February meeting of the River Valley Women's Institute. There were 18 members and three visitors in attendance.

Mrs. Roy Tucker presided at the meeting, and reports were given by Mrs. Ernest Carr and Mrs. J. L. Donohoe.

A letter of greeting was read from Mrs. Austin S. Zoeller of New Hamburg, newly-elected president of the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario. Mrs. Gerald Brooks was chosen to attend the officers conference at Guelph in May.

Mrs. Percy Craighead will be hostess for the March meeting. There will be two more card parties in February, and on the 28th, a pot-luck supper and program at the school house.

Mrs. Roy Irven read a humorous article and Mrs. Alex Bush gave an educational message. Mrs. Percy MacMullen read a poem; and outlinen what she had mailed to England for friendship links in January.

Mrs. Roy Tucker in her ACWW report, gave a message on "the future homemakers of America," and their assistance provided at the recent triennal.

Mrs. Roy Bush, Tweedsmuir Curator displayed the book of history, and also several scrapbooks which contained a vast selection of items of interest. She also outlined what is needed for the books.

Mrs. Gerald Brooks presided over the historical program, and told members, the object is to keep accurate records of important events. Mrs Percy MacMullen read an article pertaining to the necessity of recording happenings. Mrs. G. Brooks gave a reading.

Mrs. Roy Tucker gave a picture of the life of the early settlers for the members, and later, Mrs. Ernest Carr illustrated with pictures.

The hostess, and her assistants, Mrs. Glenn Bush, Mrs. Vernon Harry and Mrs. Percy Craighead served refreshments after which Mrs. Alex Bush tendered thanks to all who had made the afternoon a success.

Home and School News

(Queen Victoria School)

The general meeting of the Queen Victoria Home and School Association had as its guest speaker, social worker, Mr. D. Dohoo.

Introduced to the meeting by John Luscombe, Mr. Dohoo spoke on communications — a key word today. Relating to this topic of communication, was the fifth program on Family Life Education, after which a discussion period followed.

Presiding over the meeting was president, Mrs. B. Skrill. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved by Mrs. Joan McKenna.

Room count was taken by principal Don Lockyer, and the winners were Miss McConnell for the juniors and Mr. W. Workman for the seniors.

At the close of the meeting, coffee was served, and the meeting was then adjourned.

Club Activities

(BELLEVILLE CENTENNIAL TOPS)

Members of Centennial Tops Club, enjoyed a "happening" at their regular meeting this week.

After the "weigh in" and regular order of business St. Valentine's Day was celebrated. One or two games were enjoyed.

Members were then given the privilege of hearing a lecture from a "so called" dietitian" from "way out". This talented woman spoke on the merits of our present day, ready mix foods, canned goods etc. She also expressed the need of strict cleanliness in food preparation.

All in all it was a "fun" evening and our thanks go to the members of Belleville Centennial Tops who took the time to prepare the program.

The regular meetings are held each Tuesday evening at 7.30 at St Thomas Parish Hall perhaps we may help you with a weight problem.

50th Anniversary

Worthy Matron Mrs. Wanda Clare of the Belleville Chapter 55 Order of the Eastern Star assists 50-year member Monte Barlow P.P. cut the beautifully decorated anniversary cake to mark the 50th anniversary of the Chapter.

Chapter Formed 50 Years Ago

On Feb. 14, 1919 Belleville Chapter No. 55 Order of the Eastern Star was instituted in the I.O.O.F. hall on Front Street; and at that time was the only Chapter of the Eastern Star between Toronto and Brockville. The first Worthy Matron to be installed was Mrs. Louisa Modeland and the first Worthy Patron, John McIntosh.

The chapter moved in 1951 to their own chapter room in the new Masonic Temple on Foster Ave.; and on Friday evening Feb. 7th the 50th. anniversary was celebrated, beginning with a banquet at 6.-30 in the auditorium of the Tabernacle United Church, where 250 members of the Order enjoyed a turkey dinner, catered by the ladies of the church. The tables were gayly decorated with baskets of golden chrysanthemums and candelabra with tall golden tapers.

The Worthy Patron, Orley Glass, gave the welcoming address and the Worthy Matron Mrs. Wanda Clare, introduced a large number of distinguished guests.

The invocation was given by the chaplain, Mrs. Ivy Loveless. The toast to the Queen by Mr. Orley Glass W. P.; to the Grand Chapter by Mrs. Luella Brickman, P.D.D. G.M. and responded to by the Worthy Grand Matron and Worthy Grand Patron. A toast to the visitors was given by Mrs. Dorothy McGlashon P.D. D.G.M., responded to by Mrs. Viola Greatrix, W.M. of Minerva Chapter; to the members by Mrs. Marguerite Burgis, DDGM responded to by by Miss Mary Carmichael. Greetings from the General Grand Chapter were brought by Mrs. Mabel Mackereth P. G. M., Toronto.

After the dinner the members and guests assembled in the auditorium of the Masonic Temple, Foster Ave., where a meeting and reception was held when 500 or more were present, including 16 Past District Deputy Grand Matrons; 41 Past Matrons and Patrons of Belleville Chapter; 60 P.Ms. and P.Ps. from visiting Chapters; and 24 presiding W.M.s and W.Ps. from other Chapters.

After the meeting, two charter members, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Stephenson, and a 50-year member, Monte Barlow, P.P., were escorted to a place of honor. Mrs. Marion Kuhns, W.G.M., presented Mr. Barlow with his 50-year pin, and left one with the Worthy Matron to be presented to Mrs. Edna Wannacott, another 50-year member, who was unable to be present.

A beautiful four tiered birthday cake was brought in, made and donated by the secretary, Mrs. Wynne Tomlinson P.M., and decorated by Mrs. Carmen Bailey of Roslin. It was iced in white with a golden dove on top, over which was a lacy gold heart centred with the numbers 50 in gold; the sides decorated with stars, 50s and leaves all in gold.

A ceremony took place in which the officers, in their long white gowns, came in carrying golden links, led by two officers carrying lighted candles, they formed a circle around the altar, and as the Worthy Matron gave a reading concerning the highlights of the past 50 years, they joined the links into a golden chain. An appropriate solo was sung by Barbara Pettinggill, conductress of Lakeside Chapter, Wellington.

The 50-year member, Mr. Barlow, assisted by the Worthy Matron cut the cake. The Worthy Grand Matron, Mrs. Kuhns, called on Roy Brickman P.P. and appointed him grand representative of the State of Indiana, and presented him with his badge of office. She congratulated the chapter on attaining 50 years in the service of the Order of the Eastern Star, and wished for them many more happy birthdays. The Worthy Grand Patron also gave congratulations and good wishes, as did Mrs. Evelynne Little G. Sec.

Gifts were presented to the Worthy Grand Matron and Worthy Grand Patron by the Associate Matron and Associate Patron of the chapter. A gift of a large golden key containing a thermometer, and suitably inscribed was given to every one present, and a program of the occasion in book form, containing the history of the Chapter, was given to every member.

Lunch and social hour brought to a close a most enjoyable and memorable evening.

St. Andrew's WMS Holds Valentine Tea

Eye-catching Valentine decor including various sized hearts and colorful arrangements of flowers formed the setting in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church hall for the WMS Valentine tea held on Wednesday afternoon.

Conveners of the successful event were Mrs. E. Pigden and Mrs. W. N. Clendenan, while receiving guests at the entrance were Mrs. A. L. Sutherland, wife of the minister and Miss L. Burnside, president of the Women's Missionary Society.

The attractive tea room was in keeping with the general decor and was highlighted with the tea table covered with white hand crocheted lace table cloth over red underlay. This was centred with a floral certrepiece of white mums and red tulips in antique silver dish. The guest tables were equally attractive with white and red luncheon cloths centred with red carnations.

Hostesses here were Mrs. C. Baragar, Mrs. E. Boyce, Mrs. E. Shier and Mrs. R. C. Jones.

A number of the members assisted with the serving in the tea room, replenishing the plates and various other duties in the kitchen.

Always a drawing card at teas the various sales tables displayed an array of merchandise and these included the miscellaneous table convened by Mrs. W. Mantle and Mrs. J. Webb, a table with pot holders, Mrs. J. Robertson and the home baking table with Mrs. H. Yorke and Mrs. J. Miller. The Explorers' group was responsible for the candy table where Mrs. E. Fraser and Mrs. P. Bondy were in charge of sales.

Treasurers throughout the afternoon were Miss H. Blair, Mrs. G. Millar, Mrs. C. Adams and Mrs. F. Parsons.

Indira Gandhi Gains Self Confidence

BOMBAY (CP) — As Prime Minister Indira Gandhi begins her fourth year in office, the general feeling among Indians is that she has gained more self-confidence.

"The world's only woman prime minister is doing much better than we hoped in January, 1966," one Indian columnist wrote.

"Though the economy is still somewhat sluggish, Mrs. Gandhi is showing signs that she can deal with the nation's troubles more confidently and with assurance of better results."

When Mrs. Gandhi succeeded the late Lal Bahadur Shastri there were misgivings that she might not be equal to the many challenges inherent in the Indian political and economic scene. There was doubt whether she would continue to enjoy the support of the ruling Congress party and about her powers of economic management.

It now is recognized that Mrs. Gandhi's hold over the Congress party machine has actually become stronger.

The defection of about a dozen Congress party MPs could result in a major government crisis. Observers say that this has not happened—and is not likely to happen—because of the general confidence in Mrs. Gandhi's parliamentary leadership.

Improvement in the Indian food situation and recovery from a recession, though slow, have helped to strengthen her official and political position.

Mrs. Gandhi also has emerged as a determined political campaigner in opposition strongholds.

Big crowds, at times 100,000 strong, greeted her during a recent tour of West Bengal province where the Communists are powerful. She also has made many successful forays into the strongholds of Hindu and Moslem religious parties in Uttar Pradesh, Bihar and Punjab provinces.

One hazard these days is heckling by anti-government youths and demonstrations.

Mrs. Gandhi has stood up to the test well. She does not get easily rattled by Communist and other opposition attempts to disturb her meetings.

Need Support

CALGARY CP — Of 122 countries in the United Nations, only 37, including Canada, have ever appointed women delegates, says Rev, Roy Henders, Alberta human rights officer. "If you are refused a job because you are an Indian or a Negro, the Human Rights commission will fight for you. If you are a woman, you have to fight it alone."

Ask Uncle Ed

DEAR UNCLE ED:

Can you help me select a birthday present? My husband is a pipe smoker but has lots of pipes and things like that. But I'd like to get him something different.

Yours truly,
WIFEY

DEAR WIFEY:

I'd suggest you get him one of those new pipe lighters now on the market. It's called Mooch-Lite. You press a button and an arrow pops up and points to the nearest guy with a match.

Yours tenderly,
UNCLE ED

CLUB 4-H NOTES

SIDNEY SOUTH II FLOSSIETTTES

The third meeting of the Sidney South II Flossiettes was held on Feb. 8 at the home of Mrs. C. Moon.

It was agreed to pay the press reporter 50c for postage charges and covers were 55c each. Cheryl Hosking read the treasury report. How to enlarge a design was discussed and the group filled in the uses of the blanket stitch, fastened the sample on the illustration sheet, cut a sample stitch, and worked the feather stitch, after the leaders demonstrated it.

The next meeting will be held on Feb. 15 at the home of Mrs. D. McComb.

IODE Presents Flag To Kent St. School

CAMPBELLFORD — The recent presentation of a new flag to the Kent St. School, a gift from the Bemersyde Chapter IODE, was made by Regent, Mrs. Pearl Rutherford.

Rev. Lance Woods of St. John's United Church gave the invocation, and later, the dedication of the flag. The flag was accepted by Eddie Shearer, a pupil. Mr. C. V. Johnson of the United Counties Regional School Board expressed thanks, and raised the flag.

The Campbellford and District High School Band presented two appropriate numbers to the program.

Principal of the Kent St. Public School, Mr. A. Whitefield, expressed his appreciation to the Bemersyde Chapter IODE, and to all who had taken part in the impressive ceremony.

Police Injuries Stem from Family Brawls

TORONTO (CP) — A recent United States report said one of every five policemen killed on duty died trying to break up a family fight. The New York police force estimates 40 per cent of its injuries stem from family quarrels.

Toronto police records indicate that a similar situation exists here.

Inspector Fern Alexander, who heads the Metro police youth bureau, says "most of us feel inadequately equipped" to deal with family quarrels.

"As a rookie," said Inspector Duncan McCowan, "you're inclined to be gallant toward women. You lose some of that feeling with experience."

Const. James Cole went to rescue a wife who repaid him by sinking her teeth so deep into his wrist he required stitches and an anti-tetanus shot.

Inspector McCowan said: "I've had a gun pointed at me more than once."

One ticklish situation he recalled involved a factory worker who in a drunken rage demolished the living room furniture, and tried to choke his wife. Police calmed the man down at midnight.

Six hours later the wife called police to say she had been threatened with a butcher knife and a shotgun. She told police: "He said that before he dies he'll take two or three cops with him. So be careful."

Fortunately the man had fallen into a drunken stupor by the time police arrived.

From a police point of view family quarrels are fraught with legal hazards. In general the law holds that a man's home in his castle and you can't invade it, except by invitation.

Inspector McCowan, who has handled hundreds of domestic calls, said: "I let the wife blast away at her husband. . . . I make a concession to the husband by saying that sometimes I have the same kind of trouble with my wife."

To assist police in doing a better job handling domestic problems, many police officials and social workers would like to see special officers trained in family crisis intervention.

In New York's 30th precinct, 18 specially trained officers have been formed into a Family Crisis Intervention Unit.

ST. MICHAEL'S C.W.L.

F. B. Allore, superintendent of the Hastings and Prince Edward County R.C.S.S. Board was the guest speaker at St. Michael's CWL Council meeting on Feb. 10 held in the league room of St. Michael's Junior School.

Mr. Allore said that the objectives of the re-organization of the board was to offer a school program that will meet the needs and interests of the student, and will provide for the greater variety represented by individual differences in ability, background and experience, also for an equitable distribution of educational costs which a larger unit makes possible.

The speaker hoped for more communication between the Catholic Women's League and the Separate School Board in the future. He invited the executive members of the CWL to visit the board rooms informally at least once a month. He said that in the schools all are asked to work overtime and contribute more so that the less fortunate can achieve dignity of person through better educational opportunity.

During the business session members were urged to attend the "World Day of Prayer" to be held at the new Salvation Army Citadel on Victoria Ave., on March 7.

St. Michael's membership fee will now be $1.25 and will cover the cost of the league magazine that all members will receive.

Plans were made to co-operate with the Knights of Columbus who will sponsor a poverty (or rice) supper early in March. The object is to remind and inform all of the poverty in the world today.

Kitchen Tested Recipies

Salad Dressing for Dieters

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I would be very pleased if you could explain to me how to cook eggs similar to the way they serve them in the hospitals. The egg looked like it had been boiled (was served hot in the shell). Upon breaking the shell the white was reasonably firm but not hard as a hard boiled. The yolk was flaky — not runny or soft. One could eat it without any difficulty although in bed. Miss G. W. C.

ANSWER: The following method is foolproof.

BOILING EGGS IN SHELL

Measure 1 cup water for each egg to be cooked. (If only one is to be cooked use narrow pot and measure in enough water to cover egg.) Bring water to hard boil. Add eggs that are room temperature (not cold from refrigerator). Cover pan and remove from burner but leave it nearby. For soft cooked eggs let stand 6 to 8 minutes. For the hard-cooked eggs let stand 25 minutes.

QUESTION: While visiting in Florida recently I was very impressed with the Thousand Island Dressing which I was served on many occasions. I would appreciate a good recipe for the above if you could recommend it. If you have a low calorie dressing recipe, it would be a help.—Mrs. D. K. S.

ANSWER:

THOUSAND ISLAND DRESSING

To 1 cup genuine mayonnaise (not salad dressing) add 3 tablespoons thick best quality chili sauce, 1 teaspoon each chopped pimentos, chopped chives, finely chopped green peppers.

While the two following low calorie salad dressings are not Thousand Island they have been worked out with great care. The first, Diet Dressing, has only 4 calories per tablespoon.

DIET DRESSING: 3½ cups warm water, twenty ½-gran saccharin tablets, 1½ tablespoons gelatine, ½ cup cold water, ⅓ cup plus 2 tablespoons flour, 1 tablespoon dry mustard, 1 cup cold water, ¼ teaspoon butter, 2½ teaspoons salt, 2 teaspoons accent, ⅞ cups white vinegar, 3 cloves garlic grated, ¼ cup horseradish, 1¼ teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, ¼ teaspoon Angostura Bitters (optional). Measure the warm water into a large saucepan and add saccharin tablets and stir until dissolved. Soak gelatine in the ½ cup cold water. Mix together dry the flour and mustard and stir in the 1 cup cold water until perfectly smooth. Now add this to the warm water and cook, stirring constantly until thick. Remove from heat. Stir soaked gelatine in until dissolved. Now add butter, salt, accent, vinegar. Grate the garlic on very fine grater, coaxing through the little nubs which remain on your finger tips with the tip of a paring knife. Add grated garlic along with the horseradish, Worcestershire sauce and Angostura. Stir thoroughly. Allow to remain in saucepan until cold, stir occasionally. Pour into three 16-oz. jars covering tops with foil before screwing on lids. Store in refrigerator.

LOW CALORIE SALAD DRESSING: 2 tablespoons cornstarch, ½ teaspoon each salt and dry mustard, ¼ teaspoon celery seed, 1½ cups water, one-third cup vinegar, 1 teaspoon sucaryl or 8 crushed tablets, 2 eggs, beaten, combine first four ingredients in top o double boiler. Combine water, vinegar and sucaryl. Add small amount to cornstarch mixture to make a paste, then add remainder of liquid. Add beaten eggs and mix well. Cook over boiling water until thick. Cool in covered container.

The Experts Say

Most Women Know Little About Estates

TORONTO (CP) — Though many people don't realize it, most of them have an estate. Anyone with savings, pension, insurance, home and car has one.

Mary McRae says this is one reason why women, single or married, should give up their traditional innocence about how money works and take an interest in its use and investment.

"A man is not really protecting his wife if he handles all the finances. He is leaving her vulnerable."

Mrs. McRae is business development officer for the Royal Trust Company in Toronto. She says that for most people, the bank manager is probably the most logical person to turn to first for knowledgeable advice about what to do with money. If you are dealing in large amounts, you will probably need access to research and experts, through a broker, an investment dealer, counsel or a trust company.

Regardless of the amount involved, she says there are several common types of investment possibility which should be considered.

The most basic is a savings account, though Mrs. McRae points out that involves the temptation of easy access. There are also accumulation accounts with a slightly higher rate of interest. You cannot write cheques on them.

Another possibility is investing in guaranteed investment receipts or term deposits. Depending on the amount of money involved, they can be bought for terms from 30 days to five years. The longer the term, the higher the interest rate.

Mutual funds or managed funds pool the money from a number of investors who receive fund units in return. The money is invested in a diversified portfolio of securities and contributors may be paid from the return or may choose to have their earnings reinvested for more units.

Canada Savings Bonds are an investment that can be used as a cash reserve because they can be bought and sold easily, but Mrs. McRae says you cannot have such advantages and a high interest rate as well.

For a regular income, you may want an annuity. Mrs. McRae advises comparing them before you invest, because rates vary. The government and life insurance companies sell annuities.

INTEREST IS LOW

If you need money in an emergency, though, you could probably only use an annuity to help you get a loan. Because it has a guaranteed rate, an annuity usually pays low interest.

Another possibility for someone who wants to use money for regular income is a carefully planned portfolio of bonds and stocks.

Mrs. McRae points out that will planning can be an important part of estate planning for women as well as men.

"A lot of people have a fear of making a will, but one thing you can guarantee is that making a will won't shorten life by one minute.

"It is important for women to make a will, especially women who work. But even if they don't earn money, it is the only way to ensure that grandmother's chair or their full-length mink goes to the person they want to have it."

Ann Landers

International Club May Help Overweight

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read the letter from the 21-year-old girl who is 50 pounds overweight, has never had a date in her life, refuses to go to any more doctors, has no willpower, eats herself sick, cries herself to sleep, and hates you because you are so mean to fat people.

Your answer was great. But why didn't you tell her about TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly?)

TOPS is an international club for overweight people. We have no magic formula. We promise no miracles. We meet regularly, discuss our problems and have weekly weigh-ins. The member who has lost the most weight wins a prize. The member who has gained the most also wins a prize — a plastic pig.

Here is our pledge: "I am an intelligent person. I will control my emotions, not let my emotions control me. Every time I am tempted to satisfy my frustrated desires, build up my injured ego or dull my senses, I will remember that even though I overeat in private my excess poundage is there for all the world to see. What a fool I have been. — FORMER FATTY.

DEAR F: I know of your organization and am impressed because you don't approve of crash diets and other nonsense. So — look in the Yellow Pages, all you fatties out there. A new life is waiting for you — if you want it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a man, 43, unmarried — and I like it this way. I've read that sleep is important so I try to get at least seven hours every night, but I can't sleep.

This morning, after eight hours in bed, I am exhausted. Several people have asked if I was out all night. I look terrible and I feel lousy. Do dreams rob a person of rest? I dream a lot and my dreams are always full of action. Is this why I'm tired so much of the time? — MR. BIAH.

DEAR MR: If you are dreaming you are sleeping. Most Insomniacs sleep more than they realize.

When did you last get a physical checkup? Maybe you need a change of diet, more exercise, or a new mattress. Get going.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You drive me crazy. I hate you and I love you. Your column is like a narcotic. I am hopelessly hooked. There are times when you make me so furious, I swear I will never read another word you write. Then I find myself sneaking back the next day to see what you have to say.

I marvel at your turn of phrase and your ability to get to the heart of the matter. Every word rings out — a true conviction. You remind me of my grandmother Penelope. When Grandpa died the minister came to call. He asked if Grandpa had any last words. Grandmother Penelope replied, "Of course not. I was with him to the end."

Get it? — HOUSTON HANK.

DEAR HANK: Yeh, I got it. Right between the eyes. And now, as usual, I'll have the last word. See you tomorrow, Buster.

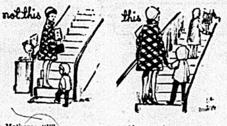
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Where are you, Johnny? I thought you were right behind me. Let me hold onto your hand while you're on the escalator. Watch out you're going to fall."

Always take a small child's hand before getting on an escalator, instead of reaching for it after you're on. Both parent and child should stand on the same step."

It's easy for a child to lose his balance and fall if you wait until you're on the moving stairs before grasping his hand.

Successful Living

Correction On 'Anonymous' Verses

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Last night I felt very sad to see a garbled version of one of Henry Van Dyke's sonnets in your column. It was attributed to "anonymous" and maybe this was just as well. With all the mistakes, Van Dyke might have preferred the anonymity.

I am sending you a copy of "The Three Best Things". When I was a student at McMaster University we heard Van Dyke speak, and the copy of his poem which my mother gave me when I was a teenager is nearly worn out.

I have found that the people in the reference section of the library are very good about helping check the exact wording of poems. — McMaster Twenty-Two.

Dear McMaster: Henry Van Dyke is one of my favorites too, and I am delighted to have that New Year's message properly identified as being his; also glad to have the right wording. I went to considerable trouble to discover the author before putting the little sonnet in the column but you are right — I should have asked those all-knowing librarians.

You are greatly privileged to have heard Henry Van Dyke speak. Because of my error, I will be glad to make up copies of The Three Best Things (three sonnets in one package) and supply one to anyone requesting the complete poem and enclosing ten cents and a stamped envelope.)

Dear Doris: If a man in his eighties were in a mental hospital for 10 months, then put out in a nursing home, I understand he is not allowed to vote. Is this correct?

If this is correct, would his signature on a transfer of property be legal? — Not Sure.

Dear Not Sure: Is the man discharged from the hospital and into a private nursing home? Or is the new location a home for special care and as such merely an extension of the hospital? This is the crux of the matter, in most provinces.

If he is seen to be cured or sufficiently convalescent to be sent back to his community, the public trustee restores to him his civil rights. Whereupon he may vote and have a legal signature again.

While in mental hospital (or one of its special auxiliary homes) he is relieved of these privileges, which carry with them a responsibility he is not considered able to carry.

Confidential to Shocked Mother: One hardly expects a four-year-old to be given a demonstration of the facts of life, even if his playmates do live on a farm! Your calmness, in the face of what must have really been a jolt, is a credit to you.

In your private talk with him, explain that physical contacts like this are meant just for mothers and fathers who want to have babies. Young children are not ready for this and might hurt each other. Then let one of the excellent books on sex guide you from there. I'm sending you my list of recommendations. (Available to other readers for 10 cents and a stamped envelope.)

Remember that your little fellow's ultimate conduct will depend on your attitude. Treat the whole thing as serenely and naturally as possible.

Nicholson Project

Students Recreate Depression Years

By LENNY WILLIAMSON

(Staff Reporter)

"There's more to history than they tell you in the text books".

With this conclusion Grade 12 students at Nicholson Catholic College summed up a two-week experiment in history teaching.

At the request of the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, they were guinea pigs for a research project conducted in 200 Ontario classrooms.

Their subject was the depression decade of 1930 to 1940, and the students planned their own approach to the study with the aid of a kit prepared by the Institute in Toronto.

Yesterday they summed up their discoveries in a series of short skits evoking the spirit of the 30s, and discussed their reactions to the "discovery method" of learning history. Their conclusions will be compared with those of the 200 other classes and incorporated into future projects.

The students divided their study of the 30s into three sections — social, political and economic, and used novels, films, records, newspapers and original documents for their research. They interviewed people in the community who had lived through the depression and heard Mrs. Harry Fast recount her experiences during the depression in Saskatchewan. Mrs. Bessie Slettebo wrote to the students about conditions in Belleville during the 1930s.

"The reports of the two women were invaluable in bringing to life in the students' minds the facts they had learned in their research," commented Sister Anna Moran, teacher of the Grade 12 class.

"This approach humanized history," summed up one boy.

"Research used to mean going to another text book, but this experiment showed us the use of different media" a girl concluded.

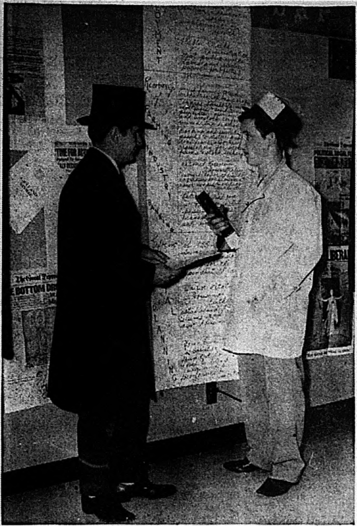
The students also came to conclusions about the quality of life in the 1930s.

"Their dances were as bad as ours, but different," one girl asserted.

"The depression wasn't all bad," said another. "It taught people a set of real values and how to make their own fun."

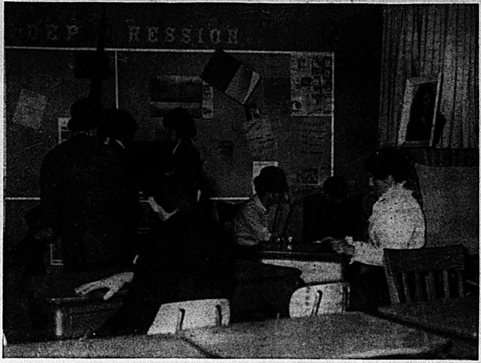
Most revealing was the remark of one girl who appeared to express the opinion agreed upon by the class

"People in the 1930s didn't expect as much out of life as we do and were happier," she decided.



Sidewalk Interview

Students chose a mock radio interview with a Washington politician to outline the provisions of the New Deal.



Learning by Doing

Grade 12 students at Nicholson Catholic College enact a playette in their classroom to give fellow students a dramatic presentation of their research of the welfare provisions during the great depression of the 1930s. Students working on other aspects of the history course presented their findings in similar dramas.

Scout Troops in Area Plan Winter Outings

Camping used to be considered an exclusive summertime activity. But not any more. Today people go camping all year. This is pointed up by the fact the Belleville Boy Scouts Association is planning to construct permanent buildings on their leased camping site in the Vanderwater Park area.

Appropriately known as Camp Sagonaska — the Indian name of Moira Lake and River — it is located on the Moira River less than an hour's drive from Belleville. Plans for the next five years include the building of two sleeping cabins on the Oneida sub-camp.

In the warm months cubs will sleep there, in winter time scouts and venturers will use the cabins.

The camping site is divided into four sub areas — designated Oneida, Cayuga, Mohawk and Seneca. Since the property was leased in 1960 from the Moira Valley Conservation Authority many improvements have taken place. A large shelter was constructed in 1963 and partitioned and enlarged in 1967 .

Scouts themselves have laid out many trails and planted numerous trees. The Moira Conservation Authority have worked with the scouts. They have supplied wood and erected many signs.

It is important that all used area be left in a wild state. The boys have seen that they share the land with such animals as racoons, squirrels, rabbits, groundhogs, flying squirrels, muskrats, beaver, deer and the pesky porcupine — who eats anything made of wood.

A record number of 23 birds were identified one morning. These ranged from the tiny humming bird to the great blue heron.

Camp Sagonaska has been made possible by boys and leaders, and also by the generous response by the many friends of scouting in the Belleville area. On the eve of Boy Scout Week Feb. 16-23 the scouts take stock and look forward to a new season of camping.

Week on Education To Stimulate Thought

Everett Fairman has been appointed Hastings County Board of Education representative on the Education Week committee.

He will serve on the publicity committee arranging activities for the week of March 2 to 8.

The Hastings board has assured the committee of financial support to a maximum of $300 to help defray the expenses of the kick-off breakfast and the advertising campaign.

Unrest in Education • • • Change to What? is the slogan for education week this year.

The committee hopes to promote discussion among teachers, students and taxpayers on modern trends in education, and thus gain ideas from the people immediately involved on the way they think schools should proceed.

Brotherhood Week Celebrated Here In Keeping with Provincial Theme

Feb. 16 to 23 has officially been delegated as Brotherhood Week throughout the world and Belleville is not excluded from the activities and philosophy associated with that week.

A brotherhood message from Premier John Robarts starts the week off and his message supplies the skeleton of principles and beliefs put forward by observance of Brotherhood Week.

'This year, as we observe Brotherhood Week," the message begins, "we in Ontario are also commemorating the 25th anniversary of the passage by the Legislature of Ontario of the first of our modern human rights statutes.

"That statute, the Racial Discrimination Act, was the foundation upon which we have erected the Ontario Human Rights Code. The Code establishes in law that every resident in Ontario is free and equal in dignity and rights. While the Ontario Code, supported by the outstanding work of the Ontario Human Rights Commission, is one of the finest of its kind, we must continue to strive for higher levels of improvement in the field of human rights.

"These beliefs, which are enshrined in the Ontario Human Rights Code and which are the very cornerstone of our way of life, are exemplified in Brotherhood Week. Each year we set aside this week to the end that we may reaffirm our dedication to the basic ideals of respect for human life and human rights.

"On behalf of the Government of Ontario, I urge all of the people of Ontario to make Brotherhood Week, Feb. 16 to 23, the occasion of personal rededication to the universal principle of brotherhood."

Brotherhood Week first came to Belleville in 1962 when Eastminster United Church began to observe it. Since then it has slowly become part of the churches on the east hill in Belleville. In Centennial year all the churches of Belleville took part in a brotherhood service.

Brotherhood Week was actually a day when it was created in Denver, Colorado in 1934. In 1946 it was enlarged to a week and became observed throughout the world. It came to Canada in 1947 in Guelph.

Observance in Belleville for 1969 will see Dr. J. B. Hardie, professor of Old Testament and Hebrew language and literature of Pine Hill Divinity Hall in Halifax, Nova Scotia, speaking this weekend.

He is scheduled to preach at the anniversary services being held at Eastminster United Church Sunday and at the Brotherhood Week banquet on Monday.

Dr. Hardie was born and educated in Scotland. He has travelled widely and is internationally recognized as an expert in the languages and customs of the Middle East, both ancient and modern.

He has appeared frequently on national television and radio as a speaker and panelist.

Rev. Alexander McDowell of Eastminster United has watched Brotherhood Week in Belleville come alive and grow.

"Understanding is the only basis for meaningful brotherhood," he said.

He explained that Brotherhood Week is designed to afford individuals a chance to get to meet people of other faiths and beliefs and then to get to know them and finally understand them.

"It's to make us conscious of the other fellow," he said.

Deseronto Problems Explored

DESERONTO — Deseronto council chambers saw an interesting experiment last Thursday when all members of the Deseronto council were joined by the full membership of the Tyendinaga Township Council for a look at their mutual problems. The meeting was purely exploratory, but everyone agreed that it had been helpful.

With an eye to regional government, which has already been introduced in some areas in Ontario, both councils felt that it would be a wise policy to set in motion the machinery for making improvements privately and now, rather than to delay until such time as they might have to wait for them, should their authority be taken away or weakened. Councillors George Lyons and Jack Layfield of Deseronto were helpful. Both had attended the conference in Madoc, and were able to pass on some of the findings there.

One weakness of Tyendinaga Township, as of so many others, came to the fore. It has no zoning by-law. It was pointed out that, without such a by-law, the township had no way of preventing a developer from buying up land, building houses, and then demanding services, and perhaps on land more suit- perhaps on land more suitable for industry.

Further meetings will probably be held perhaps bringing in other neighborhood municipalities Mr. Layfield stated.

Cottage Break-in Reported

NAPANEEE — A rash of cottage break-ins has broken out in the area covered by the Napanee Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police, according to the public information release for the first week of Feb. Cottage owners are urged to check their cottages or to have others check for them. Early reporting of such occurrences will assist police and discourage similar offences.

The city's ice-bound smoke-eaters have announced their secret weapon for Sunday's annual Market St. duel with Belleville's finest.

Me!

Or should I say "Me?"

It would be indiscreet to reveal all the conditions of my contract for aiding the bladed Firemen to hose the Campbell St. constabulary in a 2 o'clock preamble to the Belleville Morrisons' - Kingston Frontenacs junior "B" fixture.

Suffice to say, the smokies had to meet substantial terms to obtain my services: limousined transportation to and from the arena; two years' supply of hip waders; 14 inches of hockey tape, two bits to buy my way into the rink, and an economy-size jub of embalming fluid.

There are, however, a pair of pre-game manoeuvres on the part of my newly-acquired firemen-teammates which have me puzzled.

First off, I understand the West Moira St. station platoon have taken out a $200,000 insurance policy on my life.

And secondly, I would like some clarification as to the meaning of the word "CLOWNS" as it appears on the tickets to Sunday's red-and-blue duel.

I either want to see a circus in town, or an apology.

Speaking of apologies, attendance at Sunday's "Soup-er Bowl" exhibition and the following junior tilt would be a good way for local rink-rats to make up for the dismal support the Morrisons have languished through during a rather disappointing season.

A quarter isn't much to pay to see any junior-calibre hockey game — let alone have the opportunity to see your local police department chased around a rink.

And chased they will be.

A fair prognostication would be Firemen — 8, Bobbies — 3. Sounds fair to me anyway.

Undaunted by the fact the men on the beat will be dressing no less than eight players with pro experience, the hook and laddermen have held fourteen practices, for a total of 37 minutes warmup preparation for Sunday's battle.

An all-points bulletin from "Wrinkles" Reid reports that the men in blue have only one fear — that Punch Imlach will hear of the game and have his scouts in the area to skim off the cream of the coppers' crop.

They'll wish they WERE playing for Ballard's Bums by the time the smokies extinguish them.

That's 2 p.m., Sunday, when the Firemen show 'em how 'The Fugitive' felt.

While on the subject of running, for fun or profit, it's an interesting aside that harness racing led all other sports in paid admissions in Canada during 1968.

Total attendance at sulky raceways across the country was some 6,405,000, with about half of that figure representing Ontario harness fanciers.

The trotters and pacers drew three million more than Canadian flat-racing events during the year.

NHL Race Tightens As Canadiens, Kings Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Canadiens and Los Angeles Kings did little Thursday night to ease the tight race for playoff berths in the Eastern Division of the National Hockey League.

But their victories over Detroit Red Wings and New York Rangers helped the cause of Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Canadiens ended a Red Wing four-game winning streak by edging them 3-1 while in Los Angeles the Kings downed the Rangers 4-1.

Both the Red Wings and Rangers are battling with the Leafs and Chicago Black Hawks for two of the four playoff spots in the NHL's Eastern Division. Montreal and Boston Bruins seem assured of winning two.

The Leafs, with 59 points, are only four points behind third-place New York, and three behind Detroit, in fourth place. Chicago is in last place with 56 points while first-place Boston, with 78 points, and Montreal with 74, appear to have playoff berths wrapped up. The Leafs have played four games less than Detroit and New York.

Meanwhile, St. Louis Blues defeated Philadelphia Flyers 2-1.

The Canadiens not only handcuffed the Red Wings in their own rink, they also stopped two of the Wings reaching NHL milestones. A goal or assist by Alex Delvecchio would have made him the third 1,000-point player in NHL history behind Detroit's Gordie Howe and Jean Beliveau of Canadiens.

The Canadiens also thwarted Frank Mahovlich scoring his 37th goal, which would have made him the Wings' all-time top-scoring left winger.

Centre Jacques Lemaire scored two goals to pace the Canadiens and Ralph Backstrom added the other. Bruce MacGregor scored on a deflection for Detroit.

At Los Angeles, the Kings made their three goals in the first period stand up. Bob Wall scored after only 21 seconds of play. Eddie Joyal made it 2-0 on his 24th goal of the season and Ted Irvine increased the lead to 3-0 at 5:33. Howie Hughes scored for the Kings in the third period before Jim Neilson scored for New York to ruin Gerry Desjardins shutout bid with a 40-foot slap shot.

Jacques Plante of St. Louis also was deprived of a shutout when defenceman Allan Stanley scored for Philadelphia with less than two minutes remaining to play. The Blues had scored earlier on two second-period goals by Ab McDonald and Jean-Guy Talbot.

The win for the Blues increased their point total in the Western Division to 70, 20 more than second-place Oakland Seals.

All 12 teams will be in action during the weekend with Toronto and New York playing home-and-away games. In other games, Boston is at Montreal, Detroit at Minnesota, Chicago visits Philadelphia, Oakland plays at Pittsburgh and Los Angeles is at St. Louis, all Saturday.

On Sunday, Montreal visits Pittsburgh, Boston plays at Chicago Los Angeles meets the Wings in Detroit, Oakland is at Philadelphia and Minnesota plays St. Louis.

A Subtle Blockade

Quinte senior Saint Steve McKeown has missed in his attempt to block a pass by BCI's Ken Richardson, but McKeown is intent on blocking Richardson out of the play, in Wednesday's Class "AA" basketball game between arch-rivals, BCI and Quinte. McKeown and his teammates did block BCI players out much of the night, controlling the defensive backboards en route to a 61-53 upset victory over the previously unbeaten Collegians.

Allan Ray's Had His Day; CFL Changes Field Goal Rule

OTTAWA (CP) — You've had your day, Alan Ray.

No longer will you be permitted to bound up onto a lineman for that necessary elevation to block field goals.

The Canadian Football League executive committee Thursday ratified 11 rules changes and clarifications for 1969 and specifically outlawed the manoeuvre made famous by Alan Ray Aldridge of Toronto Argonauts.

In the last paragraph of the CFL release, it states:

"Pyramiding of players to block a field goal attempt has been outlawed. The penalty shall be loss of five yards."

Among the other changes is one rescinding the requirement that at least six players of the kickoff-receiving team be stationed on the restraining line 10 yards from the kickoff line.

"The receiving team does not have to have any players on the restraining line," the rule change states. But, as commissioner Jake Gaudaur points out, watch out for an onside kick.

To bring conformity to the regulations, the CFL decided that "following the scoring of a single point by means of a punt through the end zone without touching the ground, a player, a goal post or any other object, the team scored against shall scrimmage the ball on its 35-yard line."

Previously, the team scored against took over the ball on the 40.

The "loss-of-ball" penalty assessed for infractions on repeated third downs and on kickoffs has been eliminated. Normal penalties still apply but there can be any number of repeated third downs and kickoffs.

On a kick from scrimmage, other than a field goal attempt, only two players of the kicking team will be permitted to proceed downfield at the snap of the ball.

These shall be the players widest flanked at each end of the line of scrimmage. Others cannot go downfield until the ball has been kicked. Penalty for infraction—loss of five yards, down repeated or option.

On kicking plays from scrimmage such as punts, field goal and convert players, a player wearing an eligible-pass-receiver number may play centre to snap the ball. However, he shall be regarded as any other ineligible receiver should the play evolve into a forward pass play.

On a kickoff, time shall commence when the ball is touched by a player. Previously, time commenced when the ball was kicked. Object—to save time and get in more offensive plays.

The player holding the ball for the kicker on a field goal try shall be considered offside in relation to the kicker. He cannot recover the kick himself and must give yards to the receiver.

A team recovering its own kickoff shall be permitted to block to advance the ball. Previously, the kicking team had no blocking privileges.

Picked Under A 'Rule Technicality'

Lions' Choice in Draft Shocks CFL

OTTAWA (CP) — British Columbia Lions jolted the Canadian Football League college draft meeting Thursday when they picked a student who still has a year to go in university.

Wayne Holm, a six-foot, 200-pound quarterback at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, B.C., was the eight-round choice of the West Coast club.

General Manager Denny Veitch of the Lions said he had picked Holm under "a technicality in the rules—but it wouldn't be appropriate for me to say exactly what it is."

Veitch said he had told CFL Commissioner Jake Gaudaur of his intention and that Gaudaur would rule on it at the semi-annual meeting later this year.

"Naturally, since he has another year to go, we don't intend to touch him for the next year."

As expected, halfback Doug Strong from Waterloo Lutheran was picked up by Winnipeg Blue Bombers, who had first and second choices.

Winnipeg had first pick by virtue of finishing last in the conference whose champion lost the Grey Cup game. They had acquired Montreal Alouettes' first choice in an earlier deal.

Hamilton Tiger-Cats picked defensive back John Krawczyk of McMaster University as their first choice and made Tom Krawczyk, a McMaster tackle, their second choice. They are not related.

Ottawa Rough Riders' first choice was quarterback Jim Foley of St. Dunstan's University in Charlottetown, P.E.I.

Some top college names were missing from this year's draft. These were students drafted last year when their classes graduated but who continued to play university ball while taking an extra year in school.

Ted Williams New Manager of Lowly Senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lowly Washington Senators have hired former baseball hero Ted Williams as manager.

"I cannot immediately deliver a new team, but it is possible to get a storybook manager," said Bob Short, the Minneapolis millionaire who purchased the team last December and took full control of it two weeks ago.

Williams could not be reached for comment, but a source close to the scene told The Associated Press Thursday night Williams signed a long-term contract at a price "he just couldn't afford to turn down."

A few years ago, Williams, the last of baseball's .400 hitters said, "You couldnt' pay me enough to manage."

Williams, 50, is a vice-president of Boston Red Sox, the team for which he starred from 1939-60.

In fact, Williams still is drawing deferred salary from his playing days. For tax purposes, he was paid only $65,000 during several years of an estimated $103,000 contract.

He also gets $80,000 for acting as a representative for a department store.

During a brilliant but stormy career, interrupted twice for almost five years of service as a marine pilot, Williams compiled a lifetime batting average of .344, hit 521 home runs and won the American League batting title six times, hitting .406 in of Fame the first year he became eligible.

1941. He was elected to the Hall

Grant Wants Starting Role

MONTREAL (CP) — Jim (Mudcat) Grant, obtained by Montreal Expos from Los Angeles Dodgers in last October's National League expansion draft, said Thursday he hopes to resume a starting pitcher's role with the new club.

Grant, 34, who doubles as a nightclub entertainer in the off season, told a news conference he was limited to a relief role last season "because there were too many good young pitchers with the Dodgers last year."

"I pitched only 95 innings last season, mostly in relief and that's not enough," he said. "In order to have a good season you should pitch at least 300 innings."

Grant started four times for Los Angeles, completing only one game. He made 33 appearances in relief and finished with a 6-4 won-lost record and a respectable 2.08 earned run average.

Mo-Hawks Need Win To Keep Playoff Hopes Alive

The Belleville Mo-Hawks will be looking for a pair of weekend wins and some help from Lady Luck, in the form of the Barrie Flyers, as the eight team OHA Senior "A" Hockey League completes its 39 game schedule on Sunday with the final two playoff spots still up for grabs among three teams.

Belleville currently trails Kingston and Collingwood who are tied for fifth place, by two four points going into a heavy weekend which will see all three teams play two games.

The big game for the Mo-Hawks will be a 9 o'clock encounter with the Kingston Aces tonight at the Belleville Arena. A Mo-Hawk win tonight coupled with a Kingston loss to the powerful Barrie Flyers Saturday night in Kingston would leave the door open for the Mo-Hawks to tie Kingston with a win Sunday over Woodstock, in Woodstock.

Belleville will also be out to extend their home ice string over the Aces to five straight in tonight's crucial encounter.

The Aces yesterday announced the signing of veteran defenceman Bill Burega in an attempt to strengthen the club for the playoffs. Burega is expected to play against Barrie Saturday night in Kingston.

A pair of Mo-Hawk wins this weekend and a pair of losses by either Kingston or Collingwood who are at home to Woodstock tonight, and travel to Orillia Sunday, would ensure the Mo Hawks of a tie for the last playoff spot.

The possibility of a three-way tie for the last two playoff spots exists, and would be realized if Belleville wins both weekend games, while Kingston and Collingwood drop each of their two games.

Tonight's game with Kingston promises to be a real battle, with the Mo-Hawks needing a win to stay alive in the playoff race, and the Aces looking for a tie or a win to clinch a playoff spot.

Shift Carries Moira Seniors To Victory Over Centennial

STAFF — An unbalanced shift with four men lined up in a row enabled Moira senior Trojans to free Rob Rolston to play Centennial Chargers fifth player man-to-man, and carried the Trojans to a 73-61 win over Centennial in Class "AA" basketball action last night.

The shift upset Centennial's man-to-man defence and allowed Rolston to throw in 24 points and top the game's scorers. Dave Grant added 13 points for Moira and Doug Mason netted eight points for the fifth place Moira seniors.

John Kock's 17 points and 16 points each by Pascoe and Neron accounted for the bulk of the Centennial scoring.

In the night's other games, first place Moira juniors ran their unbeaten string to ten games with a 53-27 win over fourth place Centennial. While Moira midgets moved into a three-way tie for top spot in the seven team league with a 50-33 triumph over the Chargers.

Paul Hayes contributed 17 points to lead the junior Trojans to victory, and he was supported by Dave Thompson with 14 points and Martin Warmold with ten. Frank Johnston's 14 points were high for Centennial.

Trenton Rink Undefeated In Ontario Legion Bonspiel

NORTH BAY (CP) — Rinks skipped by Ron Merriam of Trenton, Gus Goring of Gravenhurst and Murray MacGregor of Guelph took undefeated records into the fourth round of the nine-rink round-robin Ontario Legion curling championship today.

Merriam, who boasts a 3-0 record, went against Guelph—2-0—in the fourth round, while Gravenhurst, also 2-0, met Harvey Chappel of Georgetown, whose rink had a 1-1 record after Thursday's opening rounds.

In other fourth-round matches, Forest skip Mike Turner took on Del Hickling of Highland Creek, defending national champion Rudy Steski of North Bay went against Bill McIntosh of Pembroke, and Gord MacDonald's Kirkland Lake rink drew a bye.

Steski took a 2-1 record into the fourth round, while Highland Creek and Kirkland Lake were 1-2, and Forest and Pembroke lost all three of its first three games.

Rounds were also scheduled for 2 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. today.

Sports On All Fronts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sam Huff, linebacking great on championship teams of New York Giants, came out of retirement Thursday to rejoin Washington Redskins as player and assistant coach. The Redskins' new head coach, Vince Lombardi, said Huff would bring tremendous leadership to the young, unsettled National Football League team. Huff, who took a pay cut to quit the business world and return to football, said his one year in retirement was "the worst year I've ever spent in my life." Huff, who will be 35 next fall, played a dozen seasons with New York and Washington before hanging up his jersey at the end of 1967.

NEW YORK (AP) — Baltimore Colts will receive $9,265.58 each for winning the National Football League championship, NFL president Art Modell announced today. With $7,500 as the losing share in the Super Bowl, each Colt picked up $16,765.58 for two games. Cleveland Browns, who lost to Baltimore 34-0 for the NFL championship, will get cheques for $5,937.08 for each loser's share. Both payoffs are the second highest in NFL history. Green Bay's 1966 cut of $9,813.63 for beating Dallas Cowboys was the highest. The Cowboys' losing share in that same game set a record at $6,527.85.

* * *

OTTAWA (CP) — Ralph Sazio, general manager of Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Eastern Football Conference, said Thursday he has been asked to go to Stockton, Calif., to testify for the defence in the trial of Cliff Watkins, charged in a shooting fray which killed his brother, all-star end Ted Watkins. "I got the word from my office in Hamilton," Sazio said. He is here for the Canadian Football League annual meeting which ends today. Ted Watkins was shot and killed and his brother wounded in an incident in a Stockton liquor store which police said occurred during an attempted holdup.

* * *

NEW YORK (AP) — Each member of the winning New York Jets received a record $7,007.91 as his share of the American Football League title game at Shea Stadium Dec. 29. The AFL announced the financial breakdown Thursday of the game in which the Jets beat Oakland Raiders 27-23. Each Raider player gets $5,349.42 as his loser's share. Coupled with the $15,000 for winning the Super Bowl game over Baltimore Colts of the National League, each Jet collects a total of $22,007.91 for the two championship games.

* * *

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos are negotiating with Canadian radio stations and television networks to set up nationwide coverage of the National League baseball club's games, Expos president John McHale said Thursday. McHale made the statement in announcing the appointment of Raymond G. Blomquist, a U.S. radio and television sports producer, as director of radio and TV operations for the Expos.

* * *

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dave Cutler, linebacker and kicker with Simon Fraser University Clansmen in suburban Burnaby, Thursday signed a contract with Green Bay Packers of the National Football League. Cutler, 23, said the contract was "substantial and included a bonus." He would not disclose the terms. Meanwhile, Edmonton Eskimos named Cutler their first choice in the Canadian Football League college draft in Ottawa.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose, who topped the National League in batting in 1968, disclosed Thursday that he has rejected an offer for 1969 that would make him the highest-paid player in Cincinnati Reds' history. "It's not enough, and I'm not asking $100,00 either," the outfielder-infielder said. He declined to specify the figure he was offered but replied that it exceeded the record $68,000 Frank Robinson, now with Baltimore Orioles, made five years ago.

Knudson, Balding Two Strokes Back

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Two Canadians are two strokes back of the first-round leaders in the Phoenix open golf championship which enters its second day today.

Defending champion George Knudson and Al Balding, both of Toronto, were among a host of pros who shattered par on the 6,389-yard, par 35-36—71 Arizona Country Club course Thursday. In all, 82 bettered the par 71 and 26 matched it.

Going into the second round today are seven players who fired six-under-par 65s for the first 18 holes—Miller Barber, Dutch Harrison, John Jacobs, Larry Ziegler, Terry Wilcox, Billy Maxwell and Lee Elder.

Wilcox, of Bronxville, N.Y., drew top billing with a hole-in-one on the 154-yard 15th hole.

Pressing at 66 were Hugh Royer, Frank Beard, Ron Funseth, Paul Harney, and Jerry Barber.

Ten more, including Knudson and Balding, were jammed at 67.

Locals Fare Poorly

STAFF — The name sounds like an "egg-rolling" contest, but actually, the "Humpty-Dumpty" Master-Junior Tournament held in Kitchener on Sunday, February 9, was a five-pin bowling competition which attracted over 600 bowlers from throughout the province.

Each of the teams consisted of a Master bowler and a girl and boy from the junior division of the Youth Bowling Congress.

The team headed by Gord Lee of Scarborough topped the men's division with a total of 3235, while Ken Edge of Hamilton captured the Masters' Singles Championship with a 1750 six game total, and Dorothy Lecjacks of North Bay bested the women with 1704.

Three Belleville teams competed in the event, with the team composed of Master Bowler Bill Bateman and juniors Sheila McCrystal and Bill Kitcher topping the local list with a 2678 twelve game total.

The team of Jim McKenzie and juniors Joe McKenzie and Deborah Driver wound up second with a total of 2625, while Master Bowler Ed Lugtenburg and teammates Sandra Reid and Harry Burley totalled 2617.

Ed Lugtenburg topped the three Master Bowlers from Belleville with a 1466 six game total, while Joe McKenzie rolled 631 for three games to head the boys, and Sheila McCrystal counted 681 for the girls' high score.

Kinsmen Seek Cornwall Title

The Belleville Kinsmen Bantams may get some insight into their chances of successfully defending their Ontario championship this weekend when they travel to Cornwall to compete in the two day Cornwall International Bantam Hockey Tournament.

Twenty-four teams from Ontario, Quebec and the United States will compete in the weekend tournament.

The Kinsmen will leave Belleville Friday at 6 p.m., and take to the ice at 8.45 Saturday morning for a tussle with Camp Borden.

Belleville will play again Saturday night at 8 p.m., and a win would enable them to advance into Sunday's third round.

SURPRISE! THE BIRDIE IS WATCHING YOU

What was the world really like in the early centuries? We have to depend upon the artists of long ago for pictures of what life in general and people were like. The first cameras became popular in the 19th century, and people have been saying "Cheese" by the millions ever since.

If someone just gifted you with a new camera, don't throw your old one in the closet. — Someone is reading The Intelligencer Want Ads today with a good used camera in mind. Help him and you.

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Use of LSD Has Declined But More Using Marijuana

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: After waiting many years for a child we at last had an only daughter. She is now in college. With all we hear and read you can imagine our — anxiety about whether or not she'll become a victim of marijuana or LSD. When she was younger we tried to protect her from glue-sniffing and smoking. Then came the anxieties about drinking and sex when she became high-school age. Now come the bigger worries: marijuana and LSD. She has so far been a good kid who confides in us. She does not smoke or drink. "I behave all around," she says, "so why worry?"

I suppose all we can do is have trust in her and believe her. But meanwhile, we'd appreciate anything you can tell us about the dangers of psyche delic drugs and how commonly they are used by college students. Mrs. Y.

Comment: From what you say, your daughter seems like a level-headed girl. I suggest that you accept her at face value; don't openly distrust her. This is the most certain way for her to resent your lack of faith in her, and push her into experimenting with these drugs.

According to some recent reports, when LSD was at the height of its popularity several years ago, about 5 per cent of college students tried it. One estimate is that at present only 1 per cent use it.

This decline in use is probably due to the fact that students have become aware of its potentially bad effects: psychotic depression, schizophrenic and paranoid reactions, chronic anxiety — and even suicidal tendencies.

Perhaps they have been more influenced to stay away from LSD by recent reports that its use may produce chromosomal damage and possible birth defects. Kids don't look forward to such serious complications after they fall in love, plan on marriage and raising a family of their own.

However, the current favorite among college students appears to be marijuana. According to an editorial in Connecticut Medicine: "At a recent symposium held at the College of Physicians of Philadelphia, Dana F. Farnsworth of Harvard reported that 30 to 35 per cent of the students of major universities in the East and West coasts had tried marijuana at least once. About half of the students did not repeat the experiment. Even so, 15 to 20 per cent did."

The danger in taking marijuana, which is being used more and more in high schools and in universities, is that it leads to more serious adventures such as LSD, heroin, barbiturates and amphetamines. Large doses of marijuana itself can produce such serious reactions as confusion, disorientation, increased anxiety and psychoses which may last for hours or weeks.

According to most users they first began to use marijuana because they were curious, or wanted a thrill, or just wanted to be "in" with their fellows; or (because of resentment against parents) they wanted to demonstrate their independence from their alcohol-drinking, older generation.

What can we do to stop the spread? Just as the educational releases about the dangers of LSD have had an important part in slowing its use, perhaps we can do the same about marijuana. Information is the strongest deterrent.

Its dangers should be brought to students in primary and secondary schools as well as to those in college. Information should be bombarded on all sides: by physicians in their offices, and by all communications media such as radio, TV, newspapers magazines and books.

Bell to Reinforce Phone Lines

Bell Telephone is going to reinforce its lines running from the city to the Ameliasburg area.

A company spokesman said yesterday that installers would shortly commence running now cable from Rossmore to Ameliasburg with expectations of having the work completed by late spring or early summer.

A section of the installation in the immediate Rossmore area will be underground with most of the new cable being hung on existing poles.

Installation of the new cable will cost an estimated $115,000.

Historical Society Wants Preservation of Shoreline

NAPANEE — The Lennox and Addington County Historical Society has sent a letter to the Ontario Hydro Commission requesting a meeting with its representatives to discuss the preservation of the natural beauty of the shoreline near its proposed nuclear power plant. The letter was read to the meeting held recently and was approved by those attending the February meeting in the Memorial Building.

President Mrs. N. W. Hutchison displayed a recently published book presented to the society giving the history of the Strathcona Paper Co. by Mr. Warren Finlay. An attempt is being made to collect paintings by Peter Varley, many of whose paintings are believed to be in homes in this district. The Society would be glad to know about them.

In her remarks after having been elected president of the society, Mrs. Hutchison expressed a hope that meetings of the society could be held in various places in the county, with the history of that area brought out at the meeting. The first of such meetings will be held in Roblin in April. May will see the annual meeting, and it is planned to make it a dinner meeting. Only tentative plans have yet been made.

Following the business meeting, Miss Anne Turner took the audience on a picture tour of Napanee, showing them many interesting features of its buildings which may never have come to the attention of her listeners. The town hall was included, and Napanee's last hitching post, on Adelphi Street, near the Court House. Business blocks having special ornamentation on their upper stories are numerous, among them, the Harshaw block.

A film showing Black Creek Pioneer Village dwelt mostly with the old-time crafts, such as butter making, weaving, spinning, and blacksmithing.

School Board Sits 11 Hours

The separate school board of Hastings and Prince Edward counties and Nipissing district held a marathon committee of the whole session Tuesday night, lasting 11 hours.

The 14 board members discussed property and personnel between 5 p.m. last night and 4 a.m. this morning. Trustees met at the board office at 133 Dundas St. East and broke into small committees for informal discussion about 11.30 in the evening.

The separate school board has about 16 temporary committees organized to plot various aspects of the change-over from small boards to a combined-counties administration.

The next regular public meeting of the board will be Feb. 26 at 7 p.m. at 133 Dundas St. East.

TV and Radio Store Opens in Tweed

TWEED — a New store opened on Tweed's main street (Victoria) during the past week. Hastings TV Service is not a new business in this village or community, however, nor is the proprietor, Clayton Langevin, a newcomer to Tweed and district. Mr. Langevin has been operating his TV and radio repair service from his home on the Bogart Road, for some time, which is at the easterly outskirts of the village.

This recent move has transferred an established business to a downtown location in the Trudeau Building formerly occupied by the D. Gaebel Law Office.

In addition to the service department, the new store contains two showrooms, one for TV and the second for stereo and sound equipment.

Mr. Langevin has one employee, Eric Reid, from Belleville, who joined the staff in August of 1968. He is qualified in servicing solid state equipment (transistors) and is serving an apprenticeship on servicing equipment.

Trenton and Townships Happy With Fire Plan

TRENTON — It doesn't appear that the Trenton Fire Department will be raising its rates to give protective service to nearby townships.

The Trenton Fire Department services both Ameliasburg and Murray townships. The rates that these townships have been paying, have remained stable for the past eight years.

In 1961 ,the following set of rates were established: first three calls of the year $350 each; and future calls under two hours, $150. If the fire exceeded the two hour limitation in this latter case, the rate per hour is $100.

Clerk comptroller O. W. Larry said today he knew nothing of any possible hike in rates. "I have heard nothing of any such raise in service payments," he said.

Murray Township seems to be quite happy with its agreement. Angus uGnter, clerk-treasurer said that the subject of a new fire department for the township had been discussed in past years. But this plan met with no success.

"We like it the way it is, we get better service than we could give ourselves for this price," said Mr. Gunter.

He added that he and members of council knew nothing of any hike in service rates by the Trenton Fire Department.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market lost ground in active mid-morning trading today after closing at a record level Thursday.

The industrial index fell .27 to 193.11. Western oils and base metals were firm.

Oshawa A dropped ⅛ to 33⅝, CPR ⅜ to 84⅝. Inco ⅜ to 41¾ and Toronto-Dominion Bank ⅜ to 20⅞.

Among the heaviest traders, Revenue Properties rose ⅜ to 20 and E-L Financial ⅜ to 13⅛.

Canadian Pacific Investments warrants, up 40 cents to $9.80, continued to head the list of actively traded industrials. The warrants were first boosted early this week by a stock market tip published in West Germany.

Maple Leaf Mills was up 2½ to 24, Dylex Diversified 2⅛ to 39½ and Hand Chemical 2 to 27.

Moore Corp. gained ¼ to 31¼. The company reported higher annual profits. Trans Mountain Oil Pipe Line slipped ⅛ to 14⅛ after reporting a drop in annual earnings.

Among western oils and mines, Home A rose ¾ to 43¾. Ranger ⅛ to 11½ and International Mogul ⅜ to 27⅜. Falconbridge fell 1 to 125.

Placer fell ¼ to 37¼. Annual earnings were down to 1.33 a share from $2.23 the previous year.

On index, western oils gained .59 to 246.02 and base metals .03 to 120.50. Golds fell 1.12 to 243.36. Volume by 11 a.m. was 1,440,000 shares compared with 1,338,000 at the same time Thursday.

Human Chain Reaction

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

December 2, 1942 marked a turning point in the history of mankind. On that day, in the stadium of the University of Chicago, Enrico Fermi threw the switch that started the first man-induced atomic chain reaction in the history of the world. The world has not been the same since, and never can be again. Now it stands on the verge of harnessing the most fantastic power with which men have ever had to deal, or of atomic destruction. Every international political move must take this fact into consideration.

School lesson for February 16: "Jesus Commissions Workers, Mark 6:7-56.

Twenty centuries ago, a chain reaction began that completely changed the course of history in the western world. This was a human chain reaction. It started the day John, the Baptist, looked at Jesus of Nazareth, and intrigued his Jewish followers by referring to Jesus as the "lamb of God (John 1:29) Two were led by this remark to find out for themselves what Jesus was like. One of the two was named Andrew. A few hours in Jesus presence convinced Andrew of the uniqueness of this Man of Galilee. He went immediately to share his discovery with his brother, Simon. Simon, in turn, persuaded others, and the chain reaction was on. To this day it continues as faithful followers pass their faith in Jesus from person to person, and from generation to generation.

Jesus Himself contributed to the continuance of this human chain reaction by training His followers, and sending them out two by two to tell others of Him and His message (Mar. 6:7) Thus the Christian movement was launched. The nature of its launching tells much about the nature of this movement.

For one thing, it was launched without capital or fan-fare. People today are accustomed to the expenditure of millions of dollars by men who are running for high office. Every conceivable kind of fund-raising device is used to finance the campaign. Jesus, on the contrary, instructed His followers not to take money with them (Mark 6:8) They were not to impress people by fine clothes and a full purse. They must not be tempted to try to buy their way. Only their own sincerity concerning Jesus and His cause must sell the movement. They must not depend on finances, but on faith; not on material wealth, but on spiritual power.

So it has been ever since. The money spent each year for missionary work by some of the largest denominations would not pay for one battleship. Missionaries have worked on a shoestring. One missionary equipped his mission hospital with instruments that had been discarded by American doctors "Wastebasket surgery" he called it. Schools have been established on a pittance. And yet the Christian movement has spread across two thousand years, and the face of the globe.

Moreover, it was a person-to-person movement. Each convinced person would tell another. So the movement spread from mouth to mouth, and heart to heart. No Madison Avenue techniques. No great advertising campaigns. Just quiet witnessing, as one heart on fire set another heart on fire with the same faith.

And so it must ever by with the Christian cause. Its greatest argument is a committed Christian. It must spread from life to life. It cannot be forced upon another. It cannot be spread by force of arms. It must grow by word of mouth, the message of the printed word, deeds of mercy, and the compelling influence of Christian character.

When the followers of Jesus returned, Jesus asked them if they lacked anything (Luke 22:35) They answered, "Nothing." They had lacked most of the things associated with worldly success, but they were rich in satisfaction at having done a good job for their Master.

Contrast this with the plight of Herod. He had everything. He had power, and wealth. But he was trapped by his own wife into committing a heinous crime (Mark 6:18-28) And he lived the rest of his days with a horrible sense of guilt. All his power and money could not free him from his superstitions and fears. His paranoic guilt tricked him into believing that Jesus was the murdered John, the Baptist, come back to haunt him (Mark 6:16)

Like all guilt-ridden persons, Herod experienced the psychological truth expressed in the Bible: "The wicked flee when no man pursues" (Proverbs 28:1). While humble followers of Jesus enjoyed the satisfaction of a job well done, Herod tossed on his pillow, the tortured victim of an accusing conscience.

Teachers Granted Mediation

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec government and school boards have agreed to mediation in an attempt to settle contract negotiations with 70,000 teachers.

The announcement was made here Thursday by Fernand Lefebvre, president of the Quebec Federation of Catholic School Boards, and in Montreal by Marcel Masse, minister without portfolio attached to the civil service.

Mr. Masse said the government and school boards have agreed to have a "third party" sit in on talks with union representatives for the province's teachers.

Asked if the "third party" would be a mediator, Mr. Masse replied that terms were not important.

The third party would be responsible for "fostering dialogue" between negotiators, he said.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For Feb. 15th,

Your birthday today: Now is the time to get right to work on your long-studied plans. Obligations are the order of the year. This being the case, move promptly to your own affairs first. Many adjustments are feasible in midstream of a successful work program, but do not expect full results immediately. Today's natives tend to big plans!

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): The trends of yesterday continue. Social contacts broaden and tempt you to divert more of your energy from serious business to pleasures for their own sake. Keep a fine balance between work and fun.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Pleasure travel, particularly in groups or tours, turns out to be very inviting. Dealings with and visits to institutions or hospitals are strongly favored. Sentimental interests beckon this evening.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): The temptation is to take off from duty and just play. Distant places are most alluring. Gather your friends for the grand effort.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Today brings you a chance to do for others. Give what is needed, and go on as if nothing has happened. Arriving news precipitates changes in travel or shopping plans. You will find new qualities in those you love.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): The day is encouraging thanks to the continuing trend. Get away from trite routines by any practical means. Other people surrounding you have the bright ideas today, but skip the influence of friends who dissipate great energy with their inner tensions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Promotion is the keyword, both in career effort and your personal affairs. If you want or need relocation or a switch in conditions, make them top priority now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Personal relationships now appear so much more complex and important than they did. Simplify your outlook. The prospects are excellent for coming to a happier state of affairs all around.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Some recognition and acceptance give you that nice glow. Get out and make the rounds in lighthearted frame of mind, then set up your best style of entertainment for the evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Get all your routines done early, as there is adventure in the air for the afternoon and evening. Accept invitations, follow the whim of the moment when it comes. See what comes of the "way-out" ideas of the people around you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Those who care about you are in there pitching today to help your ideas prevail, and come to reality. Spend part of your time and energy on purely social sharing and enjoyment of these people there'll be much more progess on all fronts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Favorite projects are forwarded by leaps and bounds today, particularly those which will flourish about three months from now. Very different conditions of life are promised in the coming season, perhaps rather drastic changes. Be ready.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): The middle of the road is the best route to follow today. Call in professional skilled help if necessary. Think ahead to avoid any conflict between competing factions.

Anybody Allowed to Drive

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

I was sitting in my car the other day, waiting for someone, and parked in front of an office building whose tenants are mostly doctors. For nearly a half-hour, I watched people leave the building and get into their cars.

'Get into" is hardly the verb. They hobbled, wobbled, shuffled, fumbled, and dragged their ramshackle bodies behind them. Some were too old to be out alone; some could scarcely see 50 paces ahead; some trembled so much that it took them a full minute to unlock the doors of their cars.

But cars they all had, and cars they all drove, as an inalienable right in modern American society. I wouldn't have ridden with any one of them as a passenger for all the oil in Arabia, yet they are perfectly free to drive anywhere, any time, until they happen to kill or maim me.

We are so aroused about "crime" in this nation, but so apathetic about the far biggest killer of all — the automobile, which has knocked off more Americans than all our wars combined, and which is the leading cause of death among U.S. young people from 16 to 24.

Why is our attitude so inconsistent, in terms of life and limb? Why are we so hysterical about the rare mugger, and so indifferent to the homicidally incompetent driver?

Millions upon millions of Americans are driving cars who have no more business behind the wheel than I would have orbiting the moon. They suffer from faulty vision, neurological disorders, the aging process, immaturity, schizophrenia, hysteria, obsessive-compulsive phobias, tics and toxicity, deafness, partial paralysis, and a host of other orders.

Drivers' tests are a sour joke in many, if not most, states; in my own, Illinois, I and millions of other residents were simply given licences in 1939 on our unsupported statements that we were experienced drivers with no physical or mental impairments. Since that time, 30 years ago, nobody has bothered to check our condition, or will until we are dead in a traffic smashup.

We are monumentally apathetic about the enforcement of drivers' licences, which means that, along with the physically defective, millions of paranoids are driving around with fever in their brains and hate in their hearts using their cars as weapons to compensate for their failures in business, in love, in basic human relationships.

Nobody can observe heavy traffic for a moment — its vicious maniacal quality, its desperate rudeness, its infantile lack of prudence — without knowing this is true. But nobody calls it "crime."

Hand-crafted UNIROYAL MASTER

The safest, brawniest tire built

Tubeless 4 Ply Nylon Cord Construction
Slim-Line White Sidewalls with distinctive Pin-Stripe red ring

A product of continuous development since 1937, Uniroyal Master has consistently led the field in blowout protection, mileage and performance. More people ride on Uniroyal Master tires than the "Premium Quality" tires of all other manufacturers combined.

BLOWOUTS — High-speed torture tests have proven the strength and durability of the new Uniroyal Master to be virtually fail safe in normal around town, and high speed turnpike use.

PUNCTURES — Polybutadiene, toughest tread rubber made, will give you virtually worry-free driving. Seal Rite™ liner immediately surrounds any penetrating object and minimizes loss of air. This special sealant does not reduce the high speed capability of the tire.

SKIDS — The Uniroyal Master's deep gripping tread assures road bite throughout the life of the tire.

HIGH-SPEED DISINTEGRATION — The Uniroyal Master's design retards heat build-up — runs cool and safe. The Uniroyal Master costs more to make and to buy. Your life is worth the difference.

IF IT ONLY SAVES YOUR LIFE ONCE — IT'S A BARGAIN

A brand new Uniroyal Master free if it fails*

Every new Uniroyal Master tire, when used in normal passenger car service carries this written guarantee:

If a Uniroyal Master fails for any reason (except abuse or repairable puncture) we'll give you a new one free so long as there's half the original tread depth left. If you've worn away more than half the tread, you'll find our pro-rata adjustment is better than all leading makes.

Montreal:

1-Man Caught Between Guns

MONTREAL (CP) — A father of five children died in hospital Friday night of bullet wounds shortly after he was caught in the middle of a gun fight between police and holdup men.

Henry Sauve, 40, a credit union accountant, died about an hour after the 10-minute gun battle.

He had been grabbed by one of the four holdup men and used as protection when police entered the credit union after they had been tipped about the robbery.

It was not immediately known whether Mr. Sauve died as a result of being hit by police or holdupmen's bullets.

Two bandits were wounded in the shooting, one in the arm and the other in the stomach, and two others were captured.

About 40 shots were fired, narrowly missing other credit union workers and clients who were hugging the floor. Bullets tore into the woodwork and shattered glass in the building.

Three of the masked holdup men entered the building shortly before 7 p.m. Friday armed with a machine gun and revolvers. Two of the men jumped onto the counter and ordered everybody to lie on the floor.

As they were scooping up money, police arrived. They captured the fourth man waiting outside as a lookout and then moved into the building.

"I have never witnessed such a scene in my life, one of the cashiers said. "He pointed a gun in my face and told me to lie on the floor. I didn't even see the police come in. . . .

In another incident, about 40 miles south of Montreal, a motel manager was killed Friday when his car missed a curve and went off the highway as he chased bandits who had just robbed him of several hundred dollars.

That robbery brought to more than $26,000 the amount stolen in the Montreal area Friday in a wave of robberies which also included two other credit unions, three banks and a supermarket.

The total included:

—$8,000 stolen from a credit union;

—$6,400 stolen from a branch of a Royal Bank of Canada;

—$5,000 taken by the four bandits from the credit union;

—$4,000 robbed from a branch of a Toronto-Dominion Bank;

—$1,500 taken in a robbery of the Canadian Nation Bank;

—$400 taken in a supermarket holdup.

2-Reward Raised

MONTREAL (CP) — New measures to help stem a wave of bombings here were announced Friday as the Montreal and Canadian stock exchange resorted to makeshift blackboards and chalk in place of ultra-modern electronic quotation boards and computers damaged by an explosion which injured 27 Thursday.

Mayor Jean Drapeau announced that rewards increased Friday to $51,000 for the capture of persons responsible for the bombings "might reach $100,000."

Lucien Saulnier, chairman of the city's executive committee, said the city is seeking complete control over explosives in an attempt to curb the "local bomb epidemic."

And Police Director Jean-Paul Gilbert said extra men have been assigned to the city's special bomb squad.

3–Students Quit Union

MONTREAL (CP) — The Sir George Williams University students council Friday withdrew from the Union generale des etudiants du Quebec, a militant students union.

In a statement, the SGWU students council said it was opting out of the union in reply to a letter sent SGWU students by the union executive expressing support for persons who heavily damaged the university computer centre last Tuesday.

'What he needs is plenty of fresh air, keep him in for a few days.'

Saturday Walk

C. J. Smith, mail carrier with the Belleville Post Office, started out this morning on his last Saturday delivery in the city. From now on, under the policy introduced by Post Master General Eric Kierans, mail will be delivered on Saturdays only in some rural areas.

Question:

Who Sets Bombs?

MONTREAL (CP) — People should not jump to conclusions about the bombings that have terrorized Montreal, industrialist Gerard Filion said Friday.

"Is it a French-Canadian, an English-Canadian, a white man, a black man?" asked Mr. Filion, president of Marine Industries Ltd. and former editor of Montreal Le Devoir.

The longtime French-Canadian leader in Quebec's intellectual educational and industrial life said the inability of the police to stop the bombings indicates an extremely small number of perpetrators are involved, conceivably only one or two.

ROME (AP)—Col. Frank Borman said Friday night that before the flight of Apollo 8 he and his two companion astronauts believed they had an 80-per-cent chance of returning safely to earth. "Actually, the scientists told us that he had a 90-per-cent," Borman told an Italian television interviewer.

Police on Alert At Quebec City

QUEBEC (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau opened the Quebec Winter Carnival weekend of fun by dancing until 2 a.m. today.

The Toronto Globe and Mail and the CBC report that there have been threats against Prime Minister Trudeau, attending the Quebec Winter Carnival this weekend, but the reports have been denied by the prime minister's staff.

The Globe and Mail quotes Rural Development Minister Marchand as saying at a Quebec City reception that he had received a telephone call Friday afternoon conveying a threat against Mr. Trudeau's life.

The newspaper also reports that Mr. Trudeau is being guarded by 1,000 members of federal, provincial and municipal police forces.

In Quebec City, however, members of the prime minister's staff said Mr. Marchand had denied to them he had received such a telephoned threat. Mr. Marchand was not available for amplification.

The CBC, in its national television newscast, said extraordinary precautions were being taken to guard Mr. Trudeau and other dignitaries visiting Quebec following recent bombings in Montreal.

Mr. Trudeau flew in Friday—Valentine's Day—and was escorted the 10 miles to Quebec City from Ancienne-Lorette airport by three patrol cars with 15 RCMP members as well as a squad of motorcycle police.

An RCMP officer in civilian clothes accompanied Mr. Trudeau everywhere he went, but a member of the prime minister's entourage said that even though "precautions are heavy, they are not extraordinary."

Only hotel guests and accredited reporters were allowed to enter the Chateau Frontenac where Mr. Trudeau is staying.

Police in uniform stood at a tunnel leading to the hotel entrance and turned away hundreds of carnival celebrants who hoped to enter the hotel for a glimpse of Mr. Trudeau.

More police stood at the hotel entrance to stop persons who might have eluded the first security check by arriving in taxis or private cars.

The Chateau Frontenac also hired security guards to control crowds lining the lobby to see Mr. Trudeau escort Ginette Guay, 21, the carnival queen, to the ballroom.

Mr. Trudeau's mood was jovial.

"Premier Bertrand went to Ottawa last weekend for the federal-provincial conference and I'm coming to Quebec this weekend for fun—that's what I call federal-provincial co-operation."

Postmen May Strike In Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — A group of Metropolitan Toronto's 1,500 letter carriers voted 228 to 102 Friday night for strike action if the post office invokes a straight-through working day scheduled to begin Monday.

The postmen object to a proposed working day which would declare a letter carrier to be on his own time if he travels to the postal station to use lunchroom facilities. Union officials say this will add 40 minutes or more to the working day.

Another 2,500 workers from Oshawa to Milton and from Lake Ontario north to Orangeville are to hold a similar strike vote Sunday.

No strike action is contemplated by Belleville letter carriers, James Campbell, head of local 45 of the union here, said this morning.

LSD Sends Two Youths To Hospital

Two Belleville youths, both 17, were taken to Belleville General Hospital last night suffering from the effects of an LSD trip.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie, who informed The Intelligencer of the incident, withheld the names of the two youths because it is not an offence to be in possession of LSD.

Turbo Train Being Tested

SUDBURY (CP) — The CNR's Turbotrain, troubled by cold weather problems since the winter began, is undergoing rigid new tests in the sub-zero weather of Northern Ontario.

The Turbotrain arrived in nearby Capreol from Ottawa Thursday night and immediately set out on a test run to Hornepayne, 280 miles to the northwest where the temperature registered 20 degrees below zro.

Peru Frees Tuna Boat After Seizure by Navy

LIMA (AP) — The Peruvian government has released a United States tuna boat captured in the Pacific Friday, but Washington sources said the incident could precipitate a cutoff of U.S. aid to Peru.

The American vessel, Mariner, was captured by a Peruvian Navy gunboat which attacked a small fishing fleet more than 23 miles off the Peruvian coast. The skipper of another vessel reported his boat was peppered with machine-gun fire before the gunboat was driven off.

No injuries were reported in the attack, which U.S. State Secretary William P. Rogers called "wholly unjustified."

Peru's ambassador to the United States, Fernando Berckemeyer, said the American boats were operating in Peruvian waters without licences. Peru claims territorial jurisdiction 200 miles out to sea, but the United States considers any boat in international waters if it is more than 12 miles off the coast.

Skipper John Verissimo of the San Juan, one of the American fishing boats, said the Peruvian gunboat put five men aboard the Mariner.

"Then they came after us," Verissimo said in a radio-telephone interview. "They fired more than 50 shots at us.

"They tried to board us from the stern, but I outmanoeavred them."

Pakistan Riots Turn Into Dance

KARACHI (AP) — Riots gave way to merrymaking today after President Mohammad Ayub Khan freed his main political foe and announced Pakistan's 41-month-old state of emergency will be lifted Monday.

Chanting crowds danced in the streets of Karachi and planned elaborate festivities at Larkana, 300 miles north of here, to celebrate the release from detention of former foreign minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, the symbol of opposition to Ayub's 10-year-old regime.

Thousands of well-wishes crowded outside Bhutto's house, demanding that he come out every half hour to make speeches. Bhutto told them he will not call off his planned hunger strike until "Ayub's promise to lift the state of emergency becomes reality."

Bhutto was released Friday when Ayub bowed to massive opposition pressure. The day was marked by wild riots, fires and gun battles that required army intervention in three cities. Five persons were reported killed in a general protest strike.

Sirhan Fired Gun in Trance Is Contention by Defence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A moment after Senator Robert F. Kennedy was shot, a young busboy cradled the senator's bloody head in his arms, whispered encouragement and placed a rosary in his hands.

"I said the first thing that came to my mind," Juan Romero said Friday to the jury that is trying Sirhan Bishara Sirhan for Kennedy's death. "I said, 'Come on senator, you can make it.' Then his head dropped back."

Emile Zola Berman, one of Sirhan's three defenders, said in his opening statement that "there is no doubt . . . that he (Sirhan) did, in fact, fire the shot that killed Senator Kennedy." But, Berman said, the defence will present psychiatric testimony that "at the actual moment of the shooting he was out of contact with reality, in a trance."

The state is trying to prove Sirhan killed Kennedy, June 5, 1968, with malice and premeditation—the elements of first-degree murder. The defence hopes to show the killing was impulsive, without premeditation or malice. As Berman put it: "Totally a product of a sick, obsessed mind and personality."

The pale, 24-year-old Jordanian rose from his chair in protest as Berman described him thus. He was obviously agitated, murmuring "No, no."

Defence investigator Michael McCowan pushed Sirhan back into his chair and whispered to him for several minutes. There were no further incidents and Sirhan smiled broadly a number of times during the day.

JFK's Blood Flew Backward

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The 20-second movie filmed as a bullet smashed into President John F. Kennedy's head set off an angry protest Friday at Clay Shaw's conspiracy trial.

"The state's sole object is to prejudice the jury," shouted defence lawyer William Wegmann when the movie was screened for the second time of the day —the sixth time since it was introduced Thursday.

The vivid movie was made by Abraham Zapruder, a Dallas dress manufacturer. What it proved was a matter of dispute. The Warren commission pored over it and reached one conclusion. District Attorney Jim Garrison reached another.

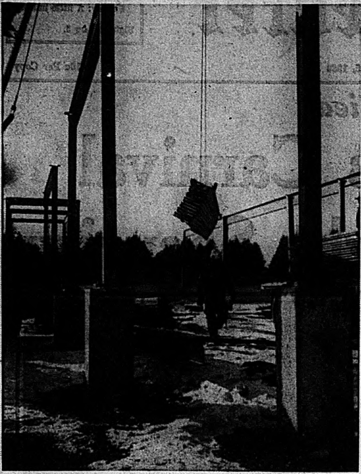
FBI photographic expert Lyndal L. Shaneyfelt of Alexandria, Va., testified that the study of the film confirmed that, though the president's head jerked backward, the spray of blood and tissue from the bullet's impact went "forward and up."

"On the third shot his head exploded and went back," testified Mrs. Philip Wilis of Dallas, who took the stand after Shaneyfelt.

"What was the direction of the matter coming from the president's head?" asked Assistant District Attorney Alvin Oser.

"Back," said Mrs. Willis.

Then came Billy Joe Martin, the 30th state witness called since testimony began Feb. 6, to testify that he was riding his motorcycle some 10 feet behind the presidential limousine and was splattered with blood and tissue.



New School Takes Shape

Steelwork for the new Georges Vanier Separate School in North Belleville is now being erected. General contract for the half million dollar school is Miron-Wiggers Construction of Trenton. School will have accommodation for 200 students from Kindergarten to Grade 6 and will feature learning areas instead of conventional classrooms.

Economy Stands Up

Picton Survives Guards Leaving

PICTON — The withdrawal of the Canadian Guards from the Picton Army Camp has not affected business as much as was anticipated but it still had an effect, according to local merchants. Some of them said that business was down. Hardest hit appear to be service stations.

Shoe store owner A. F. Anderson said "one can't take $3 million out of an area, and not have it have an effect, it is just as pure and simple as that." Many of the merchants agreed with this statement, most of them saying the same thing themselves.

J. E. Folds, owner of Mr. and Mrs. Shop, said business was up 25 per cent over last year, despite the lost Army payroll. He admitted that he had expected the opposite.

Mr. Folds attributed this partly to the new bridge which allows people from Deseronto and area to shop in Picton.

Although he has had a good year, he said he misses the army payroll. The final fate of the camp with its $3 million payroll, is not yet known, except that at the present moment only a handful of soldiers are on the base.

Last year at this time, the camp housed 900 soldiers, now it has a company of 125, and many of these are away on training courses.

Of the 250 permanent married quarters only 100 are occupied. The other 25 families are living in the Picton area, and most of these have been told they will be transferred. At one time there were 600 army families in the area.

Asked about the base being completely closed up one officer replied "all we get at this level are the rumors." He said he expected to hear shortly what was in store for the base.

Most of the transfers have ben to Petawawa.

He said that neither he nor the individual soldiers wanted to leave Picton, because they liked the area so well.

Belleville Sends Out Interim Tax Bills

Belleville ratepayers this week are receiving their interim tax bills and in keeping with the general increase in the cost of living are finding that taxes also have increased.

The interim bill this year is for 20 mills — or about one half of last year's total 41.7 mill residential rate. Last year's interim bill was for 16 mills.

The interim bill is divided into two payments, one due Feb. 28 and the other April 30.

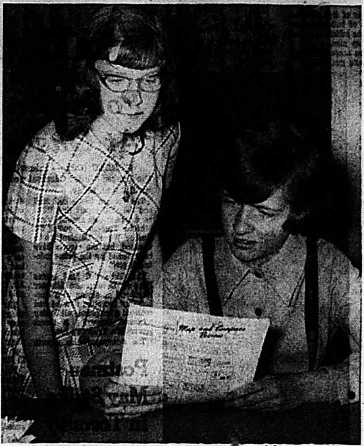
Accompanying the interim bill is a separate information sheet prepared by city treasurer John Grohn explaining tax payment procedures.

The sheet explains that after the year's mill rate has been struck, ratepayers will receive a final tax billing to be divided into three payments.

The 1969 city tax rate will not be struck until late in March and the only thing certain is that it will be up from last year.

What the increase will be is anybody's guess but there is talk of at least five mills. Last year's residential rate was 41.7 mills for public school supporters and 44.3 mills for separate school supporters.

Last year residential property owners and tenants received a property tax reduction payment from the provincial government amounting to approximately $52.



Contestants Nancy Priest and Debbie Hager

Next Step Zone Finals

Nancy Priest of King George School Thursday won the public speaking competition for Belleville, sponsored by the Ontario School Trustees and Municipal Councillors' Association.

She will compete in the zone 9 finals at Queen Elizabeth School March 1, against other elementary school pupils from the district between Peterborough and Kingston.

The zone 9 winner will enter the finals at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, March 17.

Nancy's speech on Laura Secord, delivered at the Queen Elizabeth Home and School meeting last night gave her the win over her competitor, Debbie Hager of Harry J. Clarke School. Debbie chose Negro-white relations as her topic.

Mayor Russell Scott presented Nancy with her award on behalf of the trustees and councillors.

LBJ Is Named Honorary ANAF Member

Former president Lyndon B. Johnson is now a member of the American Unit of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans in Canada.

Jack Lundberg of Belleville, Dominion president of the ANAF said today that he had received a letter from Mr. Johnson expressing his aprpeciation on becoming a member of the veterans' organization.

"Nothing could have pleased me more than to receive the material making me a life member of Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans' Association of Canada and the U.S.A.," Mr. Johnson's letter said.

"I am honored by the thoughtful gesture and I extend to you my thanks and best wishes."

The letter was written from the Johnson ranch in Texas and was forwarded to Mr. Lundberg by Col. Frank Kossa, secretary of the American Unit of the ANAF.

Dominion president Lundberg will go to Washington early in March to meet with American Legion and ANAF officers in the USA at their mid-winter conference.

Fitness Program Tailored to Individual

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

For 25 Belleville business men the moment of truth came around noon today, when they learned the harsh facts about their physical fitness — or lack of it.

The men spent the morning taking the YMCA's fitness appraisal test, administered by officials from Central Y in Toronto. The result will be a personally-designed preventive coronary heart disease program for each person.

"The incontestable evidence is there, that lack of exercise and good health habits has resulted in the increase of heart and lung disease we are noting today," said Floyd Johnson of Toronto's Central Y.

An expert on physical fitness as it applies to health, he was at Belleville's Family Y this morning with his staff to administer the tests and advise the men on a fitness program to bring them back into shape.

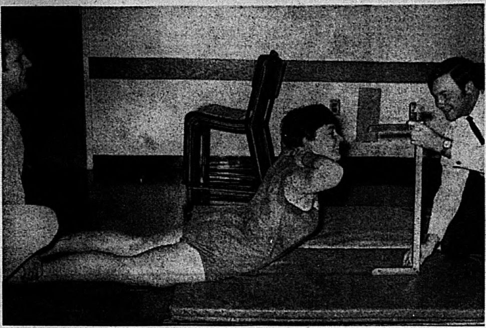
The fitness appraisal of each man, and the two women who showed up to be examined, began with a medical examination and electrocardiogram administered by Dr. Douglas MacIntosh, Dr. C. R. Lenk and Dr. C. C. Brant.

Then came tests for strength, flexibility, balance, cardio-vascular capacity and obesity. A consultation with each man ended the session.

He was informed of his physical strength and weaknesses and given a recommended program to up-grade his condition.

A banquet and discussion period was held at noon.

"Overweight, lack of exercise, high blood pressure and a high stress job makes a man coronary prone", Mr. Johnson asserted. "The Y has undertaken this program to show people how to live longer and more happily through wise use of their bodies.



Flexibility Plus

Wendy Rodger sent the marker shooting off the end of the yardstick this morning as Brad Royea, Toronto, measured her flexibility during fitness appraisal tests at the Family YMCA.

Township Counters Proposal On Mutual Aid Fire Scheme

Belleville's proposed new fire fighting agreement with the four neighboring Quinte townships is unacceptable to the municipalities involved.

This was announced last night by area municipal representatives in a statement following a meeting of council members from Ameliasburg, Sidney, Thurlow and Tyendinaga held at Ameliasburg.

The prepared statement said a counter proposal would be offered the city.

The city's proposal was that fire fighting services provided to the four neighboring municipalities be charged for on an assessment basis which would have boosted fire protection costs to the townships by up to 1,400 per cent.

For instance Thurlow's cost would be increased from about $5,000 to $57,000 per year, while that for Ameliasburg would have jumped from $2,495 to about $32,000.

The statement issued by municipal reeves following last night's closed meeting read: "It is agreed that the proposal made by the city of Belleville is unacceptable . . .

"The reeves and clerks have been instructed to seek a meeting with the city of Belleville at the earliest convenience to present a counter proposal.

This morning Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott said the city would be prepared to negotiate with the townships on fire fighting costs, but at the same time re-iterated a former statement that the city could not go on providing fire protection to the townships "for next to nothing."

Mayor Scott said the city committee would hear the townships' counter proposal and report back to council.

"It will be up to council whether the counter proposal is accepted," he said.

No details of the counter proposal were released but it is understood the proposal is for fire protection costs to be based on assessment in that portion of the township receiving protection from the city.

Township reeves pointed out that rural areas do not require the same calibre of fire protection as do built up areas. Rural areas generally do not require such costly equipment.

Host Reeve George Cunningham of Ameliasburg explained the purpose of last night's meeting to visiting councillors.

First matter on the agenda was discussion on the counter proposal to be offered the city.

Also under discussion was the possible advantage of separate municipal volunteer fire departments capable of providing adequate protection and whether there would be any advantage in a regional fire department involving all four municipalities.

Costs of equipment and other factors will be explored.

Indicative of the interest by municipalities, there was 100 per cent attendance of reeves, clerks at last night's meeting in Ameliasburg.

Heading the Sidney representation were Reeve Jack Bush and clerk Byron Harder; Thurlow — Reeve Horace Casey and clerk Earl Dafoe; Tyendinaga — Reeve Carman Gibson and clerk William Walsh and Ameliasburg Reeve George Cunningham, and clerk William Nightingale.

Quebec Terrorism

The early period of separatism in Quebec some years ago is raising its ugly head again. Bomb explosions — the latest at the Montreal Stock Exchange — rend the air.

Terrorism is perhaps the most infamous expression of a man's being. It is an act of cowardice; oftentimes the work of people who are deranged. Unfortunately, it comes under the cloak of respectability when associated with political pressure. Nevertheless, those who indulge it are fanatics and dropouts from society seeking to draw attention to themselves rather than to any legitimate cause.

That is the growing threat in Quebec today. Politics are losing grip of the orderly democratic processes and in their place there is violence. And the victims are not those who are accountable for Quebec's discontent — the government for example — but rather innocent people going about their legitimate business.

The government of Quebec should concentrate all its powers of law enforcement to end this growing menace. Premier Bertrand, whatever his other concerns for Quebec — and they are many — must realize that the province can have no future when threatened with anarchy.

The Montreal Gazette has put it this way: "The protection of the citizens is overwhelmingly the first consideration . . . When every province in Canada is vigorously seeking to expand its economy, Quebec is placed at a massive disadvantage when bombings take place, one after the other. A Government that is not in control of public order cannot hope to offer an inviting climate of confidence."

The Gazette speaks of the search for the guilty being "perplexing and laborious." And there is no doubt it is, but in the case of the stock exchange blast they have excellent leads.

That morning (the explosion occurred in the afternoon) a saleswoman in a cigar store on the first floor noticed what she thought was an unusually large number of young people. They carried what looked like transistor radios and hung around in groups talking. Suspicious, she mentioned it to the head of security who, interviewed after the blast, said: "What did you expect me to do?" They often get invited to the Stock Exchange?" Well, perhaps if he had been as observant as the saleswoman and acted upon her tip, the explosion might have been prevented. As the saying goes, forewarned is forearmed.

But then, others might have been involved. However, there was a suspicion these young people may have perpetrated the blast. It is a matter for the investigators, and the sooner the culprits are apprehended the better. Quebec's future is at stake. So too is Canada's. Relatively law-abiding, this nation should try to maintain a society where people can live without fear of civil disturbance.

Student Anarchists

It is becoming increasingly obvious that among the thousands of young people attending universities in Canada there are many who simply should not be there. In Montreal the destruction of the million dollar computer and burning of the data centre at Sir George Williams University is the most melancholy example to-date of student irresponsibility in this country. Universities are getting a bad name because of the actions of student militants. How to weed out these anarchists is a matter that should be exercising the attention of university authorities (if they still retain any authority, that is). It is bad enough that taxpayers should be saddled with the burden of supporting the education of worthless dissidents without also having to witness an orgy of destruction (fire axes and wrenches were used) like this one at Sir George Williams.

Summer and Winter

For a couple of hours Thursday night the Canadian winter was magically dissolved for a group of young Filipino women staff members at Belleville Hospital, as they watched Russ Potter's film on their Pacific homeland. They were among the audience in the Kiwanis Club's continuing series of travel movies. It is a far cry from home for the Filipinos, but not so far when they were able, as on this occasion, to see once again the sights and sample the atmosphere of the tropical isles that, together, make up the Philippines.

Maritime PC Master of the Loaded Question

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — So you are an opposition MP, one of 72 Conservatives, of 21 New Democrats, or 14 Creditistes.

You could even be the one independent.

You do not have to be Conservative Leader Stanfield, Acting NDP Leader David Lewis or Creditiste boss Real Caouette to make your mark.

You do not even have to sit on the front bench, the more easily to catch Mr. Speaker Lamoureux' eye and get to ask your questions when the Trudeau cabinet is open to its daily 40 minutes of cross-examination.

You do not have to be a flaming orator, writing your name in large letters across the pages of the parliamentary Hansard and in the big black headline type of the front pages.

You can be Mr. Meek N. Mild, seldom if ever raising your voice.

And silently you can sink some of the deadliest shafts in the elephant hide of the government.

Ask an oral question — a real sharpie, lovingly honed and calculated to bring cries of pain from your intended victim on the cabinet benches — and you run the very real risk of being fobbed off.

Presuming you ask your nifty - of - a- question confidently, without a stumble or a mumble and get it by Mr. Speaker, you are open to instant reprisal and massive retaliation.

The cabinet minister you are trying to clobber can hammer you with an answer far harder than your question. And a snicker of laughter from the government benches sends you sinking back into your seat, humiliated.

Jack Pickersgill of the Liberals and George Hees of the Conservatives, in their cabinet days were masters of the political blood sport of the boomerang.

The minister has another option of the open-ended answer, starting nowhere, wandering through a maze of words and finishing where it started — still nowhere.

Former Prime Minister Diefenbaker with his endless sentences and former External Affairs Minister Martin with his huffery-puffery were artists at spinning these impenetrable word-clouds.

Finally, the minister, if you have well and truly nailed him, and he knows it, can stonewall you, just sitting there trying to make it look that you are too much the dum-dum to be taken seriously.

But despair not.

You hold in your hand the ultimate weapon — the written question. You can work on it until it's politically letter-perfect, loaded with parliamentary poison, and then sock it to him on the Commons Order Paper.

If you have your facts and figures — and never, never prepare a question unless you know the answers — you have him cold.

He has to answer sometime— so keep nagging him — and when he comes clean, he will show the bruises, maybe even blood.

Like just what sort of written questions?

Well, for instance the one being asked by that Maritime Tory, buzz-saw Robert Coates:

". . .is it the intention of the prime minister and members of his cabinet who have chauffeured limousine service provided at government expense to return their $2,000 car allowance to the federal treasury?"

Now there is a little dandy of a question.

The $2,000 car allowance is just one of the fringe benefits of being a cabinet minister.

It goes on top of his $18,000 parliamentary pay as an MP and the $15,000 salary as a minister. For the prime minister it is a little "extra" on his $18,000 parliamentary pay, $25,000 ministerial salary and the roughly $33,000 in housekeeping money for his official residence at 24 Sussex Drive.

With $18,000 plus $15,000 making $33,000 for cabinet ministers, and $18,000 plus $25,000 plus $33,000 totalling $76,000 for the prime minister, you might almost think they could afford to run their own cars without that $2,000 allowance. Especially when some of them get chauffeured limousine service provided.

If they answer "no," to Bob Coates' barbed question they might look like chisellers. And if they answer "yes," they are out $2,000. Answer they must.

And then Coates has a follow-up set of questions almost as difficult to answer as his first doozer:

"How many Cadillacs are in the government motor pool, available for cabinet use . . .and since June 25, 1968 (when this government came to power) how many and specifically who among the ministers (pocketing the $2,000 allowance) have used them how many times?"

Marijuana Can Harm The Brain

Peterborough Examiner

Dr. Louis Jolyn West, head of the department of psychiatry, neurology and behavioural sciences at the University of Oklahoma School of Medicine, and once pro-"pot" is now turning over to the other side, according to a U.S. publication, National Voice. He now believes biochemical changes may be occurring in the brains of persons using marijuana over a long period.

Some of the changes listed are: their imagination and creative productiveness are down; their concentration span has been shortened; and they read less and complain of having trouble finishing a book.

The Jockey Is A Lady

Hamilton Spectator

Three cheers for jockey Diane Crump and a horse laugh for those who never thought a mere female would ever be allowed to ride a horse in a race at a major American track.

Diane didn't win the race (her horse came tenth in a 12-horse field) but she won a tremendous moral victory. Simply by riding in a recognized race at a big track (Hialeah, Florida) she integrated the jockey fraternity if not the tack room.

Letters to the Editor

$6,500 To-Date

March of Dimes Campaign

Editor,

The Intelligencer.

The March of Dimes committee is pleased to report that the recent campaign was most successful with donations reaching $6,500 to date.

We wish to thank the citizens of Belleville and district for their generous support of disabled adults. Without the support of six hundred canvassers and captains this would not have been possible. We want to give special thanks to the Keyettes from Centennial, Quinte and Moira Secondary Schools, to the Key Club Members from BCIVS and to the student nurses from the Edith Cavell School of Nursing. With so much criticism levelled at our young people, it was most heartwarming to see their enthusiasm and eagerness to help with a community fund drive.

From the surrounding areas of Belleville came almost ten per cent of our objective. These areas included Point Anne, Pete's Point, Massassaga Road, Rossmore, Rednersville Road, Corbyville and Bird Crescent. The inclement weather made canvassing the rural roads very difficult so to these workers we offer our sincere thanks for a job well done.

A unique idea for raising money this year came from a service station operator on Dundas St. E. He offered two cents for every gallon of gas pumped the day of the campaign and for the week which followed. This resulted in a very generous donation. His hope was that other service station operators would perhaps follow his lead another year.

The citizens of Belleville and district deserve to be congratulated for their support of the Rehabilitation Foundation for Disabled Adults (March of Dimes.)

A Question of Initiative

Teens Need to Be Up And Doing

Editor,

The Intelligencer.

I would like to point out that "Concerned Mother" whose letter appeared in Thursday's edition is emblematic of the careless, selfish parent.

Judging by her plea for somebody or anybody to provide some place (free, it would appear) where these poor neglected teenagers could go and waste their time she is far from being concerned; as a mother, she is demonstrating total lack of concern.

"A place to call their own," she asks. Sure, it's called HOME.

That's the place, remember, where on a Saturday afternoon a youngster could read a good book, listen to the Metropolitan Opera broadcast, build a model airplane, design a dress, or paint a picture. Or play a game of chess with his father or learn how to make a perfect omelette.

But of course, these activities might just improve the kid's mind in some way.

Or outside the home the teenagers could go hiking or cycling. He could ski, skate, swim, or play tennis.

However, these sports might tend to improve their health or fitness.

God forbid even the thought of chores around the home, or a part-time job.

And never, never, under any circumstances, encourage the kids to bring their friends home for an afternoon's session of records and discussion. This could lead to all sorts of work and concern for the mother.

Much better to get someone else to do it. At some free ("sponsored"?) place, well away from home. Where the kids can sit around and drink coke. Or dance.

I hope "Concerned Mother" is a minority of one.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The U. S. battleship Maine was blown up in Havana Harbor 71 years ago today—in 1898. Of the 350 men aboard, 252 were killed or drowned and eight died later. A court of inquiry was never able to fix responsibility but the disaster stirred passions to the point where the United States went to war with Spain little more than a month later.

1950—Price control, introduced during the Second World War, ended in Canada.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1944—President Roosevelt declared that military necessity forced Allied troops to turn guns on the Benedictine monastery in Italy; Russian forces south of Leningrad advanced from captured Luga towards Pskov, capturing more than 40 communities; Allies started a three-day battle to destroy 12 Japanese merchantmen and three warships in convoy bound from Turkey to Bismark Archipelago bases.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1944—Allied photographic reconnaissance showed Monte Cassino monastery had been destroyed by Allied bombardment; American surface and air forces attacked Truck, the principal Japanese naval base in the south Pacific; Russian planes again bombed Helsinki, Finland.

Education Costs and Sunday Fair Opening

Editor,

The Intelligencer.

May I comment on two subjects which concern many of the taxpayers of Belleville and Hastings County.

I too, am concerned, with Mayor Scott, about the exorbitant salaries being paid to the new Hastings County Board of Education executive officers When most of the taxpayers, who must foot the bill for these salaries, have average or below average incomes, then surely these salaries must be out of line. We all appreciate the value of education, but I feel it is about time that some of these costs were questioned.

I would also like to comment on the recent city council meeting, when delegations were present to protest certain aspects of the Sunday operation of the Belleville Fair. I believe that Alderman Soden should publicly retract his statement in which he called these people "narrow-minded." I hope voters will remember this episode at the next election for city council.

Papal Tour Likely

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — A special session of Pope Paul's consultative synod of bishops dominates the Vatican calendar this year, but there also is speculation that he may fit in a trip to Africa or Poland.

A new consistory to name a number of cardinals also is widely expected during the year.

But the synod, called by the Pope to hold quick consultations with bishops around the world, is the only major event definitely scheduled.

It will meet Oct. 11, two years after the first synod, to advise the Pope at a time when church crisis poses one of the gravest challenges to papal authority since the Reformation.

The crisis followed a papal ban on artificial birth control last July which aroused widespread dissent.

The Pope called a special—instead of a general—session to speed up the whole synod procedure. It will have fewer participants, shorter debates and quicker voting.

Vatican observers speculate that the 71-year-old pontiff may make another trip this year, following his visit to Bogota, Colombia, last August.

Africa and Poland were understood to be high on the list of places the Pope would like to visit.

The Pope previously visited the Middle East and three continents—Asia, North America and South America. It may be Africa's turn next, observers believe, particularly since the Pope has shown special concern for the plight of poor, backward countries.

A trip to Poland, a Communist state with a population more than 90 per cent Roman Catholic, would fulfil an old wish.

He wanted to visit the country in 1966, for celebrations marking 1,000 years of Christianity in Poland, but the Polish authorities vetoed the trip following a crisis in church-state relations. In recent months, a thaw in Poland seems to have set in.

Most Ex-priests Are Happy And Doing Well at New Jobs

NEW YORK (AP)—A sampling of former Roman Catholic clergymen who have left the priesthood in the United States in recent years indicates that most of them now have secular jobs and are happy in their new work.

About half of them have entered the business world. Most of the others have taken educational or social service posts. Their average salary is $9,200 a year.

The survey, described as the first study of its kind, was made by Gallagher President's Report, a weekly newsletter circulated among corporation executives.

Based on responses from 231 former priests, most of whom left their church vocations in the last two years, the findings were said to show "a vast untapped manpower resource for business."

At least 1,174 priests are known to have quit the ministry during that period, with an unknown number of cases unrecorded.

The survey report says the former clergymen are working as personnel directors, industrial relations executives, economists, advertising executives, office managers, public relations counsellors, teachers, social workers and in other fields.

The majority of them—73.2 per cent—listed Roman Catholicism's rule of priestly celibacy as the main reason for leaving the ministry. Half of them now are married: 84.7 per cent of the remainder said they intend to marry.

Other major reasons cited included: a seeming irrelevance of church work, moral or theological differences with the church, and differences with ecclesiastical authorities.

Only 3.2 per cent felt the priesthood had been a wrong vocational choice in the first place. They had been in it an average 11.4 years.

Nevertheless, 71.6 per cent are happy in their new endeavors.

Most of them—76.4 per cent—still are practising church members.

In changing from religious to secular vocations, nearly half—48.5 per cent—said the major obstacle was public opinion. Other major problems listed were lack of marketable skills and family upset.

Eighty per cent of them got new jobs within 60 days, and have stuck with them.

WE WANT A SPECIAL KIND OF NURSE

We want a nurse who can handle two jobs; one who can nurse the men of the Canadian Armed Forces and who can accept the responsibilities of being a commissioned officer. That is why we are offering a salary of more than $590.00 a month. It is challenging and interesting work. You could travel to bases all across Canada and be employed in one of several different hospitals.

If the idea intrigues you, you are probably the kind of special person we are looking for.

We would like to have you with us.

Congregational Meeting

TYENDINAGA RESERVE — The annual congregational meeting of the Parish of Tyendinaga was held Sunday in the Guild Hall, with the rector Rev. F. F. Downing presiding. The meeting had been set for an earlier date, but weather conditions had forcer a postponement.

Financial reports were given, showing that the congregations of both churches, All Saints Church, and Christ Church, had a small balance. Donald Green, reporting for the combined congregations, showed that there was a slight deficit. As his warden for Christ Church, the rector appointed Garnet Maracle. The people elected Richard Maracle as their warden. Appointed in Christ Church as the rector's warden was John R. Brant. Earle J. Brant was elected people's warden.

The rector reported that he hed held 106 public services during 1968, and 26 private celebrations of Holy Communion. There had been 28 baptisms, five of these of adults; 13 marriages had been solemnized and 16 candidates had been presented to the Bishop of Ontario for confirmation.

Rev. F. F. Downing drew the attention of the meeting to improvements which had been made in Christ Church, at no cost to the parish. The church had been re-painted, and from various sources had come $3,000 which paid for the work and assisted with the maintenance of congregational affairs.

Women's Institutes

RIVER VALLEY W.I.

STIRLING — River Valley Women's Institute sponsored their weekly card party at the schoolhouse. Mrs. Roy Tucker and members of the agriculture group furnished refreshments.

There were 13 tables in play, and winners were Mrs. Claude Tucker and Mrs. Leonard Waterfall; George Sarles and Milford Wrightman.

A special prize was won by William Ashby and won by Mrs. George Heasman. There will be two more card parties and a potluck supper in Feb.

Alouette Club Lists Committees

At a recent meeting of the directors of the French Alouette Club for Belleville and region, the following committees were formed under the direction of its president, Mr. Donat Clement, for the year 1969. The auxiliary committee with Mrs. Jacqueline Hultquist as chairman included Mrs. Ann Chiasson, assistant, and members Adele Berube, Rejeanne Morin, Rachel Bissonnette, Huguette Lavoie, Cecile Bedard and Leona Huard. Mrs. Pauline Beaulieu, Mrs. Leona Huard and Mr. Maurice Beriault were named members of the cultural and social activities' committee, and Mr. M.-Claude Huard, its chairman.

This year, the entertainment committee will be directed by the club's vice-president, Gilles Lavoie, as chairman, assisted by Michel Lemire, and members Guy Chevrier, Denis Pellerin and Gerard Turmaine. The responsibility of the reception and recruitment committee was given to Edmond Hall and Mrs. Claire Hall.

The publishing committee responsible for the club's monthly bulletin, L'Ideal, will be made as follows: J. A. C. Berube, chairman; Bruno Rivard, editor; Mrs. Jeannette Pilon, printer; Mrs. Jacqueline Rivard, shipper; Mrs. Mariette Germain, young folks' page writer; and reporters Cecile Bedard, Leona Huard, Rejeanne Morin, Rachel Bissonnette and Andre Mercier.

Last year's president, Bernard Gagnier having been transferred to Bagotville, P. Que., M. James Hultquist, Sr., was named past president of the club and as such became chairman of the club inspection commitee. Members to assist him on this committee will be Edmond Hall and George Chiasson.

Msgr. J. A. Carley, St. Joseph's parish priest in Belleville will be chaplain of the club for the current year. The directors of the club have also obtained the services of Olivier Gibeault, as secretary, and Mrs. Pauline Beaulieu, as treasurer.

The service initiated a few years ago to provide French newspaper and magazines to sick people in hospitals who would like to have something to read in French, will not be abandoned. For now it will be the responsibility of the cultural and social activities' committee.

Since the election in Jan. the directors have already held a social activity, on Feb. 9, in the form of an outdoor time, at Frankford. It included sleigh rides, snowmobile rides, walks on the hills at the Black Oak Farm, and other winter sports. Some 13 families and 35 children enjoyed the event.

The next activity will take place Feb. 22 in Trenton, in the form of a square dance night.

Club Activities

SENIOR CITIZENS

Twenty-four members of the Marmora Senior Citizens Club gathered in the club room to celebrate the sixth anniversary of the club's formation. At noon all sat down to a bountiful potluck lunch.

The afternoon entertainment commenced with a Valentine Hat Parade by members. Winner of the contest was Mrs. Robert Southworth. Mrs. Ed Post provided piano accompaniment for a sing-song, and readings pertaining to valentines were given by Mrs. Frank Sweet and Mrs. Luta Lawrence.

A recital was given by E. D. O'Connor, humorous stories by James Auckland, and Mrs. Don Bailey.

Tea with anniversary cake and ice cream was served, rounding out a very pleasant afternoon. A sincere vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Post and everyone who helped to make the event successful.

County W. I. Groups Meet for 'Summary Day'

STIRLING — On Wednesday, Feb. 12, more than 125 women from 12 groups in Hastings County gathered in Stirling Community Hall for Summary Day in connection with the Senior Institute project, "vegetables with a flair".

Home Economist Miss Mary MacEachern and specialist Miss Lois Clipsham from the Home Economics Branch, Toronto, were in charge.

Miss Hazel Thompson, Queensboro was chairman for the program. There were 12 groups and the leaders and assistants were presented with badges and each leader outlined the highlights of the individual meetings.

Each Institute group presented a humorous skit, song or reading on the theme of "vegetables and valentines." Each group also provided food for the buffet table. Conveners of the buffet table were: Mrs. George Wood, Ivanhoe and Mrs. Allan Thompson, Queensboro.

During the afternoon, a film was shown, which was most interesting. It especially stressed food arranged and cooked in a variety of new ways.

Miss Clipsham, in her message, gave a graphic picture of the value of vegetables in the daily diet, with emphasis on proper cooking procedure.

C.A. MEETING

FRANKFORD — Frankford Full Gospel Tabernacle C.A.'s met recently for their weekly service. President Ricky Reilly welcomed everyone, and opened the meeting.

Mrs. E. Strome led in prayer; and Mrs. M. Patrick led in singing. Announcements of various coming events were given.

The offering was received by Barry Reilly. The president then brought the evening message after which the service closed in the usual manner.

UCW Meetings

FLINTON U.C.W.

TWEED — The members of Flinton United Church Women attended the Feb. meeting at the home of Mrs. Edith Gruhl with Barbara Wiley conducting the devotional service.

Here theme was "Women in the Bible".

A gift was presented at this time to George Gruhl in appreciation of his service in playing the organ at the church for Sunday services. A new member was also welcomed to the meeting.

A social evening will be held at the home of Mrs. Thelma Blackwell on Feb. 25. Membership dues for the coming year were also received.

Following a motion to adjourn by Eva Marrisett, lunch was served, and an organ program provided by Mr. Gruhl. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Madeline Freeburn.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

AT HOME

Mr. and Mrs. Archie C. Cook of Belleville, RR 7 will mark the occasion of the 50th anniversary of their wedding, when an "At Home" for friends, relatives and neighbors will be held at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Ronald Giles and Mr. Giles on the second concession of Ameliasburg, south of Rednersville, on Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 22 and 23 from 2 until 5 p.m. No gifts please.

MR. AND MRS. WILLY M. WILHELM

Wilhelm – Sine

College Hill United Church was the scene of the recent wedding, when Rev. R. Vessey united in marriage Paula Mary Elizabeth Sine, daughter of Mrs. B. Keegan and Mr. Malcolm Sine, of Belleville, to Willy Martin Wilhelm, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wilhelm, of RR 3, Frankford.

The bride, given in marriage by her eldest brother, James H. Sine, wore a dress of white satin, empire style, with a lace inlay. Her shoulder-length veil was caught to a satin rose headdress and she carried a bouquet of red roses and white 'mums.

Matron of honor, Mrs. Otto Bloedorn, sister of the bridegroom, was attired in an empire-style dress of pink satin with lace inlay. Bridesmaids were the Misses Barbara Wilhelm and Katharina Wilhelm, sisters of the bridegroom, who were attired similarly to the matron of honor. All attendants carried nosegays of white and pink 'mums.

Flower girl was niece of the bridegroom, Miss Monika Bloedorn, who was dressed identical to the other attendants.

Attending the bridegroom was best man Gary Schalton, while the ushers were Paul Sine, Gary Sine, brothers of the bride, and Otto Bloedorn, brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

For the reception held at the Quinte Hotel, the mother of the bride received the guests wearing a camel hair suit, with brown accessories, complemented by a corsage of talisman roses. Assisting her, the mother of the bridegroom chose a suit of winter white, and contrasting black accessories, completed by a corsage of red roses.

After returning from their honeymoon, the couple will be residing at 17 Front St. in Stirling.

A ROMANCE OF PIONEER DAYS

Captain Meyers gave his name to Meyer's Creek, which later became Belleville." — from Pioneer Life On The Bay Of Quinte.

* * *

Here is a love-story; a picturesque romance of pioneer days.

In the early days, Squire Bleeker, (of Trenton) and Captain Meyers, of Meyer's Creek, were important personages. The Squire married the Captain's daughter, Catherine and had two sons by this marriage.

After her death, he fell in love with Mary, another daughter of the Captain, who, knowing that the Squire had proved a model husband to her sister, Catherine, fell in love with him and so, they were betrothed.

But the old Captain would not have it so. He was headstrong, woridly, and not much given to piety, but yet was scrupulous in his religions notions.

The idea of a girl marrying her own brother-in-law was not only a flagrant violation of all the known proprieties, but a sin in the sight of God. He put down his cow-hide boot with a crash that might have been heard all the way to Trenton, and swore that such a union should not be!

But, love, like truth, is mighty, and in the end prevails. There are conflicting versions given of the elopement, but the Squire and Mary did not run away; they paddled away during the absence of the old Captain. He had gone down to Montreal with his batteau and the Squire and his sweetheart took advantage of his absence.

They resolved to go to Kingston in a clandestine manner to have the marriage solemnized. Unfortunately, they arrived there only to run against the Captain on his return. His suspicions were at once aroused, and he landed with "blood in his eye." The Squire succeeded in eluding him and Mary disguised herself by wrapping an Indian blanket about her and squatting among a group of squaws. It was well that it happened so, for the Captain was determined, and had the two men met on that occasion there might have been one less Squire on the Bay of Quinte.

This elopement occurred when the new Province of Upper Canada was one year old."

Points for Parents

Mother: "Jenny's hair spray can wouldn't work and she poked into the valve with a bobby pin. Some of the spray shot up into her face. The doctor says she's lucky her eyes weren't injured."

Mother: "If the valve on your aerosol can is defective, let's get a new can. Never try to force an opening or the container might explode or spray the contents in your face."

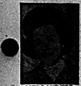
Ann Landers

Child's Hostilities Must Be Released

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Perhaps I can help the woman who had a terrible problem with her child when a second baby arrived. I lived through a very difficult time until I hit on a solution.



ANN LANDERS

Our son was two and a half years old when his little sister was born. I had to remain with them constantly to catch flying objects and prevent him from pinching and hitting her. After months of policing the boy I could stand it no longer. I became so angry I came within inches of spanking the living daylights out of him.

Suddeny I realized that if I, an adult, could not contain my anger, how could I expect a two and a half year old child to contain his? When I get very angry I feel like striking out at something. So I reasoned if he were half as angry as I, he must feel like striking out at something, too.

I made a game of it. When we became angry we went together and kicked all the soft furniture in the room. Then we kicked the floor as hard as we could.

You can't believe the change that came over this boy. Within days he was a wonderful child again. Please tell parents not to intensify a child's anger by spanking him. Instead show him how to direct his anger toward an inanimate object — and get rid of it. — HOOSIER MOM:

DEAR MOM: Hostile feelings must be released. If children could be taught to vent their anger against furniture and not other people, they would grow up to be healthier and happier adults and we could close some of our reform schools and penitentiaries.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter Mary was going steady with Arthur. After he left for Vietnam they exchanged letters three times a week.

Then Chuck appeared on the scene. Her letters to Arthur fell off. Chuck kept pressing to be her one and only. Mary stopped writing to Arthur completely.

Four months later Mary accepted a diamond from Chuck and the wedding plans were set. Then Arthur came home. Mary saw him on the sly and the poor girl was a wreck. She couldn't make up her mind which boy she loved. Until the day of the wedding I wasn't sure she'd go through with it.

Well, Mary did marry Chuck and that was eight months ago. Last week she told me she made a mistake. She says Chuck is a bore and she is in love with Arthur. She is sure if she divorces Chuck, Arthur will marry her although she has not seen him since the wedding.

I am ashamed to go to a preacher with this. You can't imagine how it hurts a mother's heart to see her 19-year-old daughter looking for a second husband already. What can I do? — SHATTERED MOM .

DEAR MOM: Nothing. This is your daughter's problem. Unfortunately Mary wasn't ready for marriage. If she chucks Chuck and marries Arthur she'll probably decide in eight months that Arthur is a bore. This girl has a lot of growing up to do before she can be a fit wife for anybody.

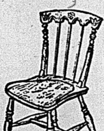
Chair Humble Specimen Of Home Manufacture

When Charles Lock Eastlake published "Hints on Household Taste" in 1868, he included the chair illustrated as a "humble specimen of home manufacture. . .really superior in point of design to many pretentious elegancies of fashionable make".

Eastlake was English and his book was published there, although his ideas had an enormous effect in this country from 1875 onwards.



EASTLAKE

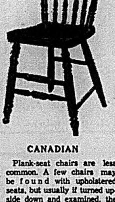
The type of chair approved by Eastlake was already being made in Canada in 1868 and seems more prevalent here than anywhere else. There are a number of variations on this design. The "gun stock" chair is one, with extensions at the base of the back support, cut off in Eastlake's design. Gunstock chairs come with round or U-shaped seats, generally but not always caned.

The painted Canadian chair pictured is a good example of chairs of its type. It is black, stencilled in gold, a late survival of earlier painted style of chair. The turned rungs are typical, two elaborately turned rungs at the front and one plain dowel rung at each side and back. Eastlake shows an H-stretcher arrangement generally connected with chairs of the 18th and early 19th century in Canada.

Chairs in this style turn up in all parts of Canada. The turnings are usually similar but not identical, giving the impression that a great many different "factories" turned out this same style. One variation has a second cross-bar to support the spindles at the base of the back and is in general of a lighter and more delicate design. Later chairs of this style frequently have bamboo-turnings on the legs with a slight splay to the foot. At one time they were favored for hotel ballrooms and were often lacquered in gold.

Spindle-back and gunstock chairs are usually made of walnut, and varnished, not painted. If paint-remover is used to strip the varnish it will generally be found all parts are walnut except the side and back stretchers and legs. Walnut tended to split and therefore maple, birch or some other more durable wood was used at the points of stress. Like other well made cabinet work of the 19th century, these chairs were made without corner braces, a feat the modern chair-maker is not able to emulate.

Gunstock chairs sell from $35.00 to $50.00 in perfect condition and about half that price if the seats have to be recanned. Caning costs up to 35 cents per hole and may add considerably to the cost of repairing a chair.



CANADIAN

Plank-seat chairs are less common. A few chairs may be found with upholstered seats, but usually if turned upside down and examined, the original holes for caning will show.

Railway Auxiliary Enjoys Dinner

A tasty steak dinner was enjoyed by the Canadian National Railway Ladies' Auxiliary and their husbands at Club Canara recently.

Mrs. Lillian Meagher, the only member present who attended the first meeting 20 years ago cut the anniversary cake and was presented with a bouquet of flowers.

Lucky tickets for the blankets were held by Dorothy Vanstone and Alice Storms.

Entertainment was provided by Jack Fitzgerald after which games, bingo and cards were enjoyed to conclude a memorable evening.

WEDDING

CAMPBELL — LEONARD

Rev. Roy Vessey officiated at the recent marriage ceremony of Patricia Ann Leonard, and Kenneth Frederick Campbell, in the College Hill United Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. George McKillop, Belleville, and the late James Wilson Cleary, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Campbell, RR 1, Carrying Place.

The bride's attendant was Mrs. Orpha Bolton and the best man was John "Mackie" Campbell, brother of the bridegroom.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Following the reception the bride and bridegroom left for a motor trip to New Brunswick.

Parents Need to Show More Affection in Home

By DORIS CLARK

Look, Mum and Dad, do the kids know you love each other? Recently a middle-aged woman told me it never occurred to her when she was growing up that her parents were in love.

Whenever she saw them they were dead serious, discussing something weighty, like finances or new shoes for Joey or cleaning the basement. Sometimes they shouted at each other. Was that love?

Any flare-up between his two important adults is upsetting to Junior; but if it is over quickly he can learn that expressing anger needn't mean hate. Basic antagonism is something different again.

Someone said that every time a woman gives a man a piece of her mind, she loses a piece of his heart.

Isn't it best of all to take the positive approach? Make a point of showing affection to each other in front of your little carbon copies. And if you have been taking each other for granted, try resurrecting the gentle and courteous manners you used to hear when you were courting.

Dear Doris: Could you please explain emotional illness?

Our son has been teaching school for three years and going to university in the summer. He has had a breakdown. What would cause this?

His grandfather died in a mental hospital years ago. Would this have anything to do with it? — Upset Emotions

Dear Upset: Only his doctor can say for sure just what triggered your son's particular trouble.

We live in a stress-ridden age, and when we take on just too much, we pay a toll. I'd guess that teaching for a full school year and filling the summer with university studies would leave little time for a needed let-down.

Psychiatrists do say our tolerance for emotional strain is inherent in our genes — those tiny cells which determine our physical and mental natures. Yet we know also that everyone has his limits, when it comes to standing the gaff.

Dear Doris: I need a recipe for a paste for some small jobs of papering. — Amateur Paperhanger

Dear Amateur: A bit out of my line, but I found one, so here goes: You grind up a powder made up of 42 parts flour or potato starch, 4 parts powdered caustic soda or potash, 4 parts ammonium sulphate. Mix well. Store in a cool place.

When you want to make a paste for a small job, scoop out what you think you'll need and add it slowly to lukewarm water. (It doesn't say how much water, but I'd go easy.) Stir in just a little powder at a time. Heat it, still stirring, until it becomes a smooth mass of proper consistency.

And good luck. Hope you don't have to throw the whole thing out. I would.

A Recipe for Butterfly Cupcakes

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I have requested many recipes from you and have run into a problem that I am hoping you can solve, again! Several (about 20) years ago I clipped a recipe from a newspaper. I think it was called Butterfly Cupcakes and when done looked like a butterfly sitting on a flower. The recipe contained flour, white sugar, and other ingredients, and shortening. It is a very smooth batter and quite thin. It poured very easily into cupcake papers and when baked was fine textured and light. A circle was cut off the top of the cupcake (they rose a little bit in the centre) and the cupcake was filled with about 2 tbsps. lemon filling, then the piece cut off being cut in half and put into the lemon filling to make it look like a butterfly. I hope you can help me. Thanks so much for your help. I follow your column every night in the paper. — Dorothy H.

ANSWER:

BUTTERFLY CUPCAKES WITH LEMON FILLING

1 2-3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
2½ tsps. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. nutmeg
2-3 cup shortening (or butter)
1 cup granulated sugar
2 well-beaten eggs
¼ tsp. vanilla
¼ tsp. almond extract
2-3 cup milk

Sift together twice the sifted flour, baking powder, salt and nutmeg. Cream shortening (or butter) and sugar until light in mixing bowl. Beat in eggs. Fold in flour mixture alternately with milk to which you have added the extracts, 1-3 of each at a time, until batter is just smooth. Line your muffin tins with cupcake papers, preferably of various pastel shades. My assistant, Shirley, had 24 about 2" in diameter, or you could use the size that fits two 8-cup muffin pans. Fill paper cups 2-3 full. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr.: small — 10 min.; medium — 12-15 min. Cool on cake racks in paper cups. When cool, with a sharp pointed knife cut a shallow cone from top and fill with English Lemon Butter (see below). Replace halved tops like spread wings and sprinkle with colored sugar or icing sugar. If desired tops may be frosted with varicolored icings — but it is gilding the lily.

ENGLISH LEMON BUTTER

In top of double boiler beat 6 eggs enough to mix the yolks and whites. Add 2-3 cup lemon juice, ¼ cup butter and 2 cups sugar. Stir over boiling water until it thickens. It does not thicken a lot so do not stand there stirring expecting it to thicken more. Remove from heat and cool. Store in refrigerator in covered jars. Makes about three 8-oz. jars.

Football Huddle Copes With All Problems… Except TV Pacts

OTTAWA (CP) — After a week of wrangling, there still was no agreement Friday on television contracts which could be worth as much as $1,000,000 to the Canadian Football League.

The spectre of cable television cutting into game attendance still remained when the NFL annual meeting ended.

And it took the whole week to decide on a proper schedule and nobody was completely satisfied with the result.

But the week wasn't entirely wasted. A move was made toward streamlining the more than 35 player awards issued annually.

Officers were elected and rules were amended or clarified.

Grey Cup dates were set for 1970—either Nov. 28 or 29, with the site still to be decided. Vancouver and Toronto have bid for the game. This year it's Nov. 30, a Sunday, in Montreal.

Winnipeg was set as site of the semi-annual meeting in early June.

Sixty-seven players were drafted from Canadian colleges, most of whom won't even see training camp, but as Ken Preston of Saskatchewan Roughriders said:

"The calibre is improving. Last year there were 24 Canadian draft choices who made good in the CFL."

Lew Hayman of Toronto Argonauts was elected president of the CFL, taking over from Allan McEachern of British Columbia Lions. Dr. Neville Winograd of Winnipeg Blue Bombers was named vice-president.

Sam Berger of Ottawa Rough Riders, said there was hope the television contracts—worth $500,000 to the Eastern Conference and $310,000 to the Western Conference last year—will be signed within "a short time."

The subject of cable television cutting into gate receipts was before the Canadian Radio-Television Comission and he said he hoped a decision on the CFL complaints would be brought down before the TV contracts were signed.

The clubs amended the punt-runback rule—they didn't bring in blocking but they restricted the movement of the offensive players closing in on the receiver.

A proposal to widen the import restrictions was studied but the managers voted to keep the number of imports to 14 for each club.

Among the final business was the completion of schedules for exhibition games and the regular season contests.

There will be 18 exhibitions during July and 68 regular games split 40-28 between West and East.

Commissioner Jake Gaudour summing up after the closed meetings, said there had been no proposal for pushing the schedule earlier into the year.

Such a move, while it might mean that fans would not be sitting through playoff games in the dead of winter, would have the clubs going into training camp in May.

The other alternative, to compress the schedule, was not feasible, he said. It's as tight as it will go now.

The controversy over scheduling caused Gaudaur at least one unhappy scene.

He gave the general managers of the nine league clubs a deadline to produce a schedule agreeable to all—they had studied more than 30 proposed schedules before coming to the meeting.

When the deadline passed without agreement, Gaudaur submitted his own schedule. It was challenged and amended by the general managers, who questioned his interpretation of the constitution in this regard.

Gaudaur sought support of the CFL executive committee for

Last-game Mo-Hawk Playoff Bid Worthless Without Barrie Assistance

By MAURICE SWITZER

Sports Editor

Belleville Mo-Hawks OHA Senior A playoff hopes hinge on whether or not Barrie Flyers — whose bid to overtake Galt for the league pennant was nullified by a 4-3 loss in Orillia last night — play to win against Kingston Aces tonight.

A convincing 5-3 win over the Aces here last night left the locals two points back of their arch-rivals in the battle for the loop's sixth and last playoff berth.

Now, the Mo-Hawks need a road win over last-place Woodstock tomorrow, and a Barrie win in Kingston tonight to force a sudden-death playoff with the Aces for the last playoff spot.

The slumping Collingwood Kings assured themselves of a playoff position with a 7-0 rout of Woodstock last night, thereby erasing any Mo-Hawk hopes of a second avenue to post-season play in the event they couldn't pull oven with Kingston.

The 1,600-plus who paid last night to see the Mo-Hawks win their fifth game of their last seven also witnessed one of the milder Kingston-Belleville encounters, with only eight minor penalties called, and nothing more violent than a shove or well-placed elbow to interrupt the action.

George Godson's second goal of the night, into an empty Kingston net with 16 seconds remaining, sealed the win for the Mo-Hawks — their fifth in as many home games this season with the Aces. Kingston won their five home games with the Mo-Hawks.

Rick Smith's second goal of the night pulled the Aces even for the first time in the game, tying the score 3-3 at 2.44 of the final frame, before Ron Riley got the fourth and winning Belleville marker 22 seconds later.

GEORGE GODSON

A pair of goals by Ralph Plane and Wayne McConnell gave the Mo-Hawks a 2-0 edge before Smith replied for Kingston at 18.40 of the opening period.

Killing Greg Marchen's early second-period penalty, George Godson took "Wiener" Brown's pass at centre ice, cut across the Kingston defence, and made it 3-1 with a 25-foot backhander. John Mercer got another late-period rally for the Aces to keep the visitors within striking range going into the final 20 minutes.

Gordie Howe's HOCKEY

Alex Delvecchio, to me, is an All-Star without the title.

He is also one of the most underrated players in the National Hockey League. I believe I'm qualified to speak on Alex because I've played on a line with him for at least 10 years, longer than with any other player.

People often mistakenly believe I played with Ted Lindsay for years and years. Actually we didn't play together that long, although we did have some tremendous years together and had some outstanding centres on our line — Sid Abel, now our general manager; Norm Ullman, Dutch Riebel. There were a lot of them.

Ted was traded to the Chicago Black Hawks at the end of the 1956-57 season. That trade was made in July, 1957 and Ted and Glenn Hall went to the Black Hawks for Johnny Wilson, Forbes Kennedy, William Preston and Hank Bassen.

Lindsay was traded at the end of my 11th season with the Wings, but we didn't team on a line until my fourth or fifth season, I've forgotten just which one. So at best, we played together for maybe seven series.

I've been with Alex for 10 or 11. One of my regrets about having Delvecchio for a linemate is that I don't have a chance to watch him skate. To me it's a treat to watch him dance around on the ice. When he's really going, he's like a tap dancer bobbing around and he does it on dull skates. He will let Lefty Wilson, our trainer, sharpen his skates about once a month.

Alex has also been captain of the Wings for the last seven seasons and one of his favorite complaints is that he's always taking up collections for something or other.

I will say this, playing centre is tough. There are more good centremen in the league than any other position. Tick them off — Jean Beliveau, Norm Ullman, Stan Mikita, Phil Esposito and so on.

Last season I played 40 games at that position and I'd just as soon forget it. When I was playing centre, Alex shifted over to left wing and for several of the games we had Doug Roberts on the right side. He's with Oakland now and playing defence. Kind of strange, eh? We sound like a bunch of mixed up kids.

Alex is now in his 18th season and counting the first 50 games we've played this year, he has a total of 314 minutes in penalties. That's not very many. The last time I looked I think I was about ready to break the 1,600-minute barrier.

But don't let Delvecchio's skimpy penalty record fool you. He plays a tough game. Rival players, however, know he plays it clean and for the most part they play it clean with him. They respect him.

Stars' Pair Swapped To Black Hawks

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League traded defenceman Mike McMahon and centre Andre Boudrias to Chicago Black Hawks Friday night for defenceman Ted Reid and left-winger Bill Orban.

Coach Wren Blair of the North Stars said his team also will receive a player to be named at the end of this season to complete the trade.

Boudrias, the North Stars' chief penalty killer, has scored four goals and nine assists, McMahon 11 assists.

The trade is effective immediately, Blair said. Orban and Reid will be in Minnesota uniform here tonight for Minnesota's game with Detroit Red Wings, Blair said.

Boudrias and McMahon each were threatened with suspension from the North Stars earlier this season for what Blair termed "indifferent and ineffective" play.

McMahon led NHL defencemen in scoring in 1967-68 with 14 goals and 47 assists.

Sets World Mark

Nearly Missed Meet, Makes Up for Lost Time

TORONTO (CP) — Willie Davenport's record-breaking sprint across 50 yards of varnished hardwood and hurdles Friday night had 15,137 fans roaring and the American star wondering what would have happened if he had been ready.

Davenport, gold medallist in the 110-metre hurdles at the 1968 Olympics, almost missed the meet because of poor plane connections but won the 50-yard hurdles in the unofficial world record time of 5.8 seconds at the Telegram-Maple Leaf Indoor Games.

"I didn't get to the hotel here until 7:30 and I didn't have time to loosen up after I arrived at the Gardens," Davenport said.

The spindly, six-foot-one hurdler originally was scheduled to arrive in Toronto at 5 p.m., but missed a vital plane connection in New Orleans, arriving in the downtown area here about an hour before he was scheduled to sprint from the starting blocks.

"And besides, I'm out of shape," he said. "this is my first 50-yard hurdle event of the season. But ever since the Olympics, I seem to be running on confidence."

The record, as well as all others in the evening meet at Maple Leaf Gardens, is considered unofficial because indoor times and distances are not recognized by the Amateur Athletic Union.

Two other unofficial indoor Canadian open records were established, two were equalled and one Canadian native record was set.

Meanwhile, Bob Beamon of the U.S., world record holder and gold medallist in the long jump at the Olympics, re-injured his right leg and was beaten by Michael Charland of Montreal.

Beamon, one of the headliners with Davenport, completed one jump, taking off on the wrong foot to clear 24 feet. Charland won the event with a leap of 24 feet, one inch.

Barbara Ferrell of the U.S. established a Canadian open record of 35.2 seconds, just one-tenth of a second off the unofficial world record in the women's 300 yards.

The second Canadian open record for an indoor meet was set by Antonina Okorokova Lazoreve of Russia who won the women's high jump with five feet, 11½ inches to beat the former mark of 5-9 held by Dianne Gerace of Trail, B.C.

Tommie Smith of the U.S. equalled the Canadian open record of 31.5 seconds in the 300 yards, edging John Carlos, also of the U.S. at the tape. Smith had set the record in Vancouver last year.

Another Canadian open record was equalled by Irena Szewinska of Poland, who finished second to Miss Ferrell in the 300 yards in a time of 35.5 seconds.

Debbie Miller of Brantford, Ont., second to Mrs. Szewinska in the second heat of women's 50-yard dash, placed fourth in the final of that event.

The Canadian native record was established by Bob Finlay of Toronto, who lapped the entire field while winning the three-mile race in 13:21.9. It cut almost five seconds off the previous record of 13:26.4, set by Dave Ellis of Toronto in 1965.

Grant McLaren of Guelph, Ont., finished third to Finlay behind Kerry Pearce of the U.S.

Finlay was the only Canadian winner in the open events, although Charland was credited with a victory in the long jump after Charley Mays of the U.S. dropped out before competition started.

Top Peewees Tangle

QUEBEC (CP) — Today is grand champion day at the Quebec international peewee hockey tournament with four teams still in contention for the over-all tournament title.

Toronto Young Nationals will tangle with Grand'Mere, Que., in one playoff semi-final contest while Pointe Claire, a Montreal suburb team, will face Princeville, Que., in the other semi-final game.

The semi-final winners then will meet in the grand championship, the last game on the tournament schedule.

Two other games also are scheduled today. Quebec Indians will meet Caughnawaga, Que., in the annual Indian exhibition game while Quebec Beavers and Boston will square off in the Canada-United States exhibition encounter.

The Young Nationals, Pointe Claire, Princeville and Grand'Mere all advanced to the grand championship playoffs after winning their respective divisional championships Friday.

Trenton Jrs. Blow Lead And Playoff Spot Ground

TRENTON (Staff) — The Golden Hawks lost a 4-1 lead over Peterborough Don Bye's last night, the game 6-5, and the chance to go two points up on Cobourg Cougars in the battle for the Eastern Ontario Junior "B" loop's fourth and last playoff spot.

Each team now has 28 points, and two games remaining in their 30-game schedules.

Goals by Wayne Gillette, Gary Lisle, and Don Potts gave the Hawks a 3-0 edge after the opening 20 minutes of play. Bill Ellis narrowed the margin to 3-1 at 1.26 of the middle frame, before Lisle's second goal sent the hometowners into a 4-1 lead just past the midway mark of the period.

Then the Don Bye's went on a scoring spree, getting second-period tallies from Tim Powers and Pete Sullivan, and early third-period contributions from Sullivan and Bill Ellis to take a 5-4 lead.

Don Potts' second goal of the night, from Gillette and Lisle, pulled the Hawks even with less than five minutes to play, but Peterborough, hungry for a first-place finish over Oshawa's Crushmen, got the 6-5 win on Terry Harrigan's marker at 17.23.

The Hawks outshot the visitors — now two points up in the six-team league's top spot — by a 37-35 margin, and drew eight of 13 penalties called.

Monday night, the Golden Hawks journey to Cobourg in what should be a battle for the fourth-spot playoff spot.

Trenton Rink Leads

NORTH BAY (CP) — Ron Merriam's Trenton rink held the lead today with five wins and one loss in the Royal Canadian Legion provincial championship after six rounds in the nine-rink, round-robin tournament.

Merriam had little trouble in the sixth round trouncing the Mike Fraser of Forest 20-3. Earlier in the day, Merriam beat Murray MacGregor of Guelph 9-5, then suffered a 7-6 defeat to Gus Goring of Gravenhurst.

Harvey Chappel of Georgetown and MacGregor were tied for second place with 4-1, won-lost records, followed by Rudy Steski of North Bay, the defending national champion, with four wins and two losses.

Goring was in fifth place with a 3-2 record and Del Hickling of Highland Creek held sixth with two wins and three losses.

Gord MacDonald of Kirkland Lake had a 1-4 record, Fraser was eighth with 1-5 and Bill McIntosh of Pembroke trailed with five straight losses.

Winner of the tournament, which ends Sunday, will advance to the national final in Truro, N.S., next month.

SURPRISE! THE BIRDIE IS WATCHING YOU

What was the world really like in the early centuries? We have to depend upon the artists of long ago for pictures of what life in general and people were like. The first cameras became popular in the 19th century, and people have been saying "Cheese" by the millions ever since.

If someone just gifted you with a new camera, don't throw your old one in the closet. — Someone is reading The Intelligencer Want Ads today with a good used camera in mind. Help him and you.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Know Less Than We Know In Matters of Medicine

As aphorisms sometimes do, this came to me suddenly: "We know less than we know." I had to repeat it out loud a few times before it made sense. It relates to every phase of human endeavor, including medicine.

For example, we know what health is: freedom from illness. We call this healthful balance of life a "homeostasis." But what really is health? Nobody knows. What is sickness? Absence of health. Homeostasis of the body cells has been tripped up and unbalanced.

Mr. A. has a cold today and it's gone tomorrow. Mr. B. has a cold today and pneumonia tomorrow. We can explain it superficially as being a difference in bodily resistance; as the effect of antibiotics, etc. But, basically, what is the answer? ("We know less than we know.")

We recognize cancer. How it acts. How to cure it if caught in time. We have become experts in the use of controlled elements in its cure: X rays, radium, cobalt.

But what causes cancer? A virus? What virus? Or something else? How can we prevent it? ("We know less than we know.")

Chronic alcoholism? The diagnosis is simple; its treatment obscure and difficult. Prevention almost impossible. ("We know less than we know.")

High blood pressure? In about 90 per cent of patients the cause escapes us. We call it essential hypertension in our ignorance. We can't prevent it, but we can control it ("We know less than we know.")

Why do some eat a lot and stay thin? Others eat less and stay fat? Why do some smokers never get cancer of the lung, bronchitis, emphysema? Why do some break all the rules and live till 90? Some others with good habits are shuffled off at 50. The answer is evident: "We know less than we know."

This is good for doctors to remember. It promotes humility in practice and lessens smugness and self - satisfaction. A doctor who knows his shortcomings is a better doctor for his patient.

Let's keep remembering: "We know less than we know."

For Mrs. G.: There are numerous reasons for an irregular pulse rate. Common ones are skipped beats (extrasystoles) often found in perfectly healthy hearts. The other is auricular fibrillation, in which the actual heart rate is irregular in force, and not all the beats come through to the pulse. If you have an irregularity, better have your doctor check on it even though you feel fine.

* * *

For Mrs. D.: A black and blue mark under the skin after a hypodermic injection is not unusual. It is due to the needle having pricked a small capillary or vein, which causes slight bleeding. It should disappear in a few days.

* * *

For Mr. Z.: One reason for cystitis (infection of the bladder) after operation is the prolonged use of bladder catheterization. This is why, whenever possible, the doctor tries to have the patient urinate after surgery rather than rely on a tube in the bladder.

* * *

For Mrs. L.: No, I am not in favor of the use of reducing pills. Some can be dangerous to the patient especially if they contain such machine - gun therapy as digitalis, thyroid extract, diuretics (fluid removers) cathartics and amphetamine. Good old-fashioned diet cannot be improved upon for safety and effectiveness.

* * *

For Mrs. M.: It's true: a snack a day will keep anxiety away but oh what they do to the figure!

Library Film Highlights

THE ACCESSIBLE ARCTIC 24 min. col.

The Arctic — frozen tundra of the north is not at all isolated as is shown in this film. The new industries have opened up the Arctic and made life in many northern communities little different from life in cities farther south.

AMSTERDAM CONCERTO 10 min. col.

Holland's capital city Amsterdam is explored in this lively film. The background music is provided by the Concertgebouw of Holland.

CIRCLE OF THE SUN 30 min. B and W.

The Alberta countryside is the background for this moving film of one of the last gatherings of the Blood Indians celebrating the passing glory of their tribe.

EVERYBODY'S PREJUDICED 22 min. B and W

Various kinds of prejudice are brought out in this film which sparks lively discussion about a subject important to all of us.

HIGHBALL HIGHWAY 12 min. col.

The hazards of drinking and driving as well as carelessness, exhaustion and lack of courtesy are well illustrated in this short but highly effective film.

MAGIC FIDDLE 20 min. col

The Norwegian ballet perform their interpretation of Mozart's Magic Fiddle in this charming music-filled film.

MOTHER DEER AND HER TWINS 11 min. B and W.

An interesting study of how a mother deer looks after her twin fawn and how the twins learn to fend for themselves. A good nature film.

PANTOMIMES 10 min. col.

The famous French mime, Marcel Marceau performs three of his well known episodes. Children especially enjoy this film.

ROGERS' PASS 28 min. col.

The discovery of an opening through the Selkirk Mountains of British Columbia allows a scenic super highway to be built. The effects of the highway on Canadian - U.S. relations are explored.

SCIENCE, SEEDBED OF INDUSTRY 26 min. col.

The discoveries made by Canada's research council are interestingly presented in this film about Canada's inventors and their work.

Wallbridge

WALLBRIDGE — Wallbridge L.O.B.A. No. 1168 members held their euchre party this week, with a good attendance.

Mrs. R. Crysdale has returned home from the Belleville General Hospital.

Wallbridge U.C.W. members held their monthly potluck dinner recently, after which their regular meeting was held in the church, with Mrs. Clifford Clapp, president, taking charge.

Mrs. J. Sine, Mrs. Ed Spencer and Harry Fisher are all patients in the Belleville General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bush of Toronto spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Clapp.

GROWS BETTER CROP

HALIFAX (CP) — Apple chemistry helps turn out firm, fresh, rosy apples each harvest time in the Annapolis Valley. Chemists at the Nova Scotia Research Foundation test the skins of Nova Scotia apples to gather data that will determine the soil composition of the next year's crop.

Indexes Move in Narrow Range On Canadian Stock Exchanges

By GERALD CLARKSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian share prices continued to edge up into new high ground this week, although the indexes fluctuated in a narrow range.

The Toronto industrial index, main indicator of price levels, advanced .80 to 193.04. The average established a record at 193.26 Thursday.

The composite index on the Montreal and Canadian exchanges gained .03 to 187.57, after floating in plus and minus territory throughout the week.

The bomb blast on the trading floor of the Montreal exchange Thursday afternoon had been expected to hold up trading for several days, and special arrangements were made to channel business through Toronto and Vancouver.

However, this proved unnecessary and the two markets, which share the same floor, reopened at 11 a.m. Friday.

The week's strongest industrial groups were real estate issues, steels, communications, utilities and trust and loan stocks.

Among unusual gains, Dylex Diversified was up 8¾ to 37¾, Hand Chemical A 8¾ to 38, Ingersoll 3 6¾ to 24¾ and Koffler Stores 5⅝ to 54⅝.

Weaker groups were pipelines and construction stocks. Oil stocks also were lower, and the Toronto western oil index lost 5.15 to 244.65, about 15 points below its record last month.

Canadian Superior dropped 3⅝ to 59⅞, Banff 1⅛ to 13⅞ and Ulster Petroleums 45 cents to $5.35.

Although prices continue to show a general upward trend, analysts and market commentators still are hedging their bets. There is a general mood of apprehensive caution.

No-one has forgotten the sudden three-day slump in early January when Canadian stocks recorded their sharpest plunge for several years.

The major indexes have more than recovered from this brief decline, but investors are keeping a wary eye on what happens in New York where prices have been hovering uncertainly for about a month.

The Wall Street Journal says "there is a spreading impression that the 1969 market has been notably lacking in conviction.

"This is leading analysts to conclude that time is running out on the recovery effort since early January, and that the effort has reached a mature stage without especially improving investor sentiment, or powering a new uptrend."

The monetary policy of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board takes much of the blame for current uncertainty. Investors are waiting to see if the board will take further steps to tighten credit and raise interest rates on bank loans.

E. A. Walker, research director of Gairdner and Co. of Toronto, says the next few months should be exciting for the stock market.

"Factors that govern buying and selling decisions are locked in conflict. The battle becomes more and more accentuated as each day goes by.

"My opinion is that buying will continue to win out over selling for some time. Properly selected stocks should move higher."

In a move to control the speculative side of the market, the minimum margin requirements were raised to 60 per cent from 50 per cent at the Toronto, Montreal, Canadian and Vancouver exchanges, effective Feb. 13.

The margin is the down payment made by an investor who buys stocks on credit. The margin, either in the form of cash or stock, now must amount to 60 per cent of the market value of an investor's purchase.

The higher margin requirements follow warnings about the dangers of over-extended stock market credit since last November, which was a month of unusually heavy speculation.

January proved to be a record month for the dollar volume of business at Toronto, Canada's largest exchange, and much of the extra turnover was attributed to speculative activity.

On index at Toronto, golds rose 1.84 to 243.31 and base metals .15 to 120.76. Volume was 29,475,000 shares compared with 30,97,400 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 442 to 358.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, combined volume was 8,224,000 shares compared with 10,152,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 192 to 160.

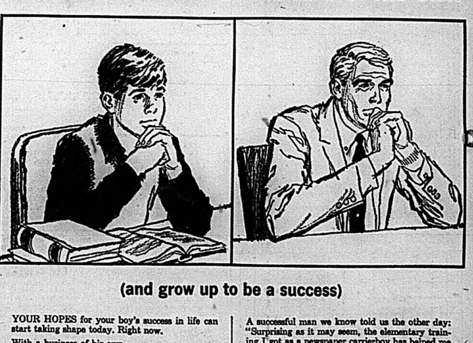
Henry Spicer, of Tweed, is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital, where he is undergoing treatment.

TAKING TO THE WILDS

EDMONTON (CP) — Len Suttens, president of the northwest region of the Canadian Youth Hostels Association, says residents of the region are responding to the call of the wilds. Membership in the Edmonton area now is 905—a 53-per-cent increase over 1967.

How your teen-age son can become an executive with a business of his own



(and grow up to be a success)

YOUR HOPES for your boy's success in life can start taking shape today. Right now.

With a business of his own.

A business in which he gains a sense of responsibility and dependability, learns to sell and to get along with people, learns the basics of business and the value of money (like any well-run business, his will show a good profit).

The business we are suggesting is a newspaper route.

Newspaper route management is the best way we know of in which a boy can apply in a practical way the lessons he learns in the classroom. This helps him to be a better student. It also gives him a headstart in the business of life.

A successful man we know told us the other day: "Surprising as it may seem, the elementary training I got as a newspaper carrierboy has helped me more than any other single thing I can name in understanding the conduct of business."

And he added, "This is why if my boy is able to qualify I want him to have a newspaper route."

The people in our circulation department will be pleased to tell you how your son can qualify—and they will help him get a route of his own in your neighborhood. They also will give him a big start toward success in life. Ask today—

Canada's Record Called 'Awful' In Fighting Depressed Areas

NIAGARA FALLS (CP) — Canada's record in attacking depressed-area poverty is "downright awful," Reuben Baetz, executive director of the Canadian Welfare Council, said today.

Speaking at the opening session of the Ontario Federation of Labor's annual education conference here, Mr. Baetz said many factors contributed to "this sorry state."

Lack of organization and planning, perhaps more than lack of money, was one. Departmental programs sometimes worked at cross purposes. There were political problems.

"What government has the guts to declare a region 'dead' —especially if it still elects one or two members of Parliament?" he asked.

Canadian citizens had to insist that human rights did, in fact, take precedence over federal or provincial rights.

"We must support new and comprehensive approaches, and smoke out and deal harshly with the bureaucrat who fights progress only to maintain his department."

Mr. Baetz also had plenty of criticism for the Hellyer study public housing. They provide, he said, "a beautiful example of how not to go about developing housing policies."

Despite some current dissatisfaction with certain aspects of public housing programs, the principle of a public or social sector in the housing program remained valid.

"No matter how successful we are in assisting the market to improve its performance, the need will remain for a stock of housing which can be allocated on social grounds, and at costs directly related to the occupant's ability to pay.

"Those of us who dared to suggest this in our so-called dialogue with the Hellyer task force were dismissed as old-fashioned reactionaries lacking in imagination. The net result of the task forces' report dealing with public housing is a dreadful disservice to the present occupants of public housing, and to the thousands who could benefit from such facilities." benefit from such facilities."

The report fostered the view that those living in public housing were curiosities and unfortunate inmates of some "sociological zoo" who, in the name of decency, had to be set free as soon as possible.

"The fact is, in spite of its disadvantages, people living in public housing units are much better off physically and socially than many thousands of Canadians living in dilapidated 'cooty traps' available to them on the private market."

In other areas, Mr. Baetz recomended that adequate income-maintenance measures be devised to protect people against "life-cycle" poverty. This type of poverty was likely to press in on people during predictable periods in their lives: Childhood, later when they had children of their own to support, and old age.

"What is required now, as a major defence against the inroads of life-cycle poverty for families with young members, is a substantial increase—double or triple—in federal family and youth allowances."

A text of Mr. Baetz' speech was released in advance of delivery.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For Feb. 16th,

Your birthday today: Your inner development is the most important program now. You will need to take time out once in a while to think about where you are. In positive terms, you are ready to meet and conquer old anxieties. Today's natives generally have a wide-range receptivity to psychic phenomena sometimes without being aware of the sources of the influences.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): The most natural and direct side of your personality is the one to exhibit this day. Friendship and emotional considerations are most important to you. Financial matters may get out of hand put them off for a better time.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Partnerships are plagued with potential misunderstanding. Concentrate on public affairs. Later in the day you see how each piece fits into such a jigsaw puzzle.

GEMINI (May 1 — June 20): The familiar Sunday customs unwind as usual and rather pleasantly so. Your arrangements and remarks should be quite clear and definitely stated to avoid the likelihood of misinterpretation. Don't skip over anybody who expects your expressions of affection to continue.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Be a little skeptical and verify your facts as you go. Eminent probabilities are for improvement in the conditions and income of yourself and mate. An old friend confides something rather exciting — it's hard to keep such a secret!

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): If you have had reasonable habits all along the line, you can relax without facing any specific problems. This is one Sunday, however, when it is best to just go along with the feminine point of view.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): The present period is auspicious for introductions among people whose interests you share. With those who are most intimately connected with you, matters under review can get to be very intricate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): A rising tide of creative expression carries you. Be aware that some of the improvisations you so easily put together now will need revision. New acquaintances today have significance later.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Everybody gets into the act with commentary, most of it wide of the mark. Pay no attention to the tales you hear now since they tend to divide old friends. Gather your own about you for a quiet evening entertainment and repast.

CAPRICRON (Dec. 22— Jan. 19): Some acquaintances show their material wealth today, and if you try spending to match them, you will hinder your own enjoyment and needs without in the least impressing anybody.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your prayers and meditation are good sources of encouragement for the sweeping changes which, by all indications, are beyond any real control for the coming half year or so.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Home affairs are emphasized. A bit of favorable comment is well received. See that others also receive compliments or even flattery to help ease the strain which, in general, prevades the atmosphere around you.

For Feb. 17th,

Your birthday today: This year everything demands expression in terms of value or must be surmounted for progress. Any commercial activity should be pressed with vigor all year. Stay with a pragmatic approach: do what pays, skip any thing that doesn't. Today's natives tend to be fascinated with risky speculation or gamblingt. This coming year will bring them many temptations for taking chances.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Don't take chances with shared resources. Determine early to establish a week of achievement based on your own ideas. Advice is tricky all week.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Impetuous decisions will not do for the coming week or so. Reject novel shortcuts. Double check facts as you go. Be especially wary that information related to your work does not filter out into the hands of the wrong people.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): The story you receive today is sadly incomplete. Wait for another account before you act. Business may create inconvenience in your home-life. Explain to loved ones as soon as you know of the problem.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Incur no debts today. No significant amount of assistance is at hand. Much confusing trivia is offered for your distraction, or entertainment. Most of it is better rejected.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Get a trusted associate to help you read between the lines on any negotiation. Be unwilling to quarrel over discrepancies between what you expect and actual offerings. Your work requires much back-tracking.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Spet. 22): Get all your facts down in writing before proceeding on any controversy or contract. The simplest routine can be misjudged. Wherever it is feasible, defer signing obligations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): If you have spilled your ideas casually, you may find others have taken them over as their own. All transactions need careful thought now. Dissension between people around you merely distracts you from true discernment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Your strength of purpose and expression may provoke jealousy today. Stay sublimely unaware of any such hints and continue in a businesslike frame of mind.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22— Dec. 21): You are not likely to be fully understood today, so that confusion may arise if you are not careful. Your health can be improved simply by positive thinking, but go to a doctor for diagnosis of any persistent symptom.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Allow for confusion today and evaluate everything yourself. Figure that at least some of what you are told may be said just for emotional reasons or may only be hearsay.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Discrepancies all around you. Errors you have made will come glaring back for all the world to see. Beware of any shrewd business practices now.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Fanciful schemes and differences of opinion are quite common today. Follow your own hunches rather than the sales talk. Tonight get in a bit of study within your field.

UN Pilot Was Unfit Says Swede

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — A high percentage of alcohol was found in the body of a pilot killed in a plane crash which took the life of United Nations Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold in Africa in 1961, a Swedish medical expert claims.

Dr. Aake Hassler, formerly attached to the Swedish air force as a specialist on the circumstances of such accidents, maintains that the crew of the plane were in no fit condition to fly and that Swedish authorities are concealing the real cause of the crash.

Hammarskjold and 15 other passengers and crew were killed in September, 1961, when a chartered Swedish DC-6 aircraft crashed near Ndola—in what was then Northern Rhodesia-near The Congo border.

An official report said the crash was caused by pilot error. Hassler claims the report does not reveal the whole truth.

In a letter to the Swedish ombudsman, he claims the crew of the plane went without sleep for 30 hours prior to the accident, and one of the pilots spent the evening before the crash in a night club.

Trudeau Twits Stanfield, Lewis on Constitutional Policies

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs unburdened themselves on constitutional reform Friday, in a one-day parliamentary follow-up to the federal-provincial constitutional conference.

At the start it looked as though it would produce more partisan heat than constitutional wisdom when Prime Minister Trudeau, Opposition Leader Stanfield and David Lewis, the NDP parliamentary leader, became embroiled in an exchange.

But it never fully developed into a free-swinging political fight.

Mr. Trudeau, after outlining an optimistic picture of the conference's achievements, touched some sensitive spots among Conservatives and New Democrats.

He asked Mr. Stanfield to clarify the "two-nations, deux-nations" doctrine expounded by the Conservatives in 1967. It was the theory, he said, advanced by Quebec Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand at the conference this week.

"We from Quebec know that in the mouths of most of those who ran for the Conservative party in Quebec it means something quite different from that which is meant by the leader of the Opposition," he said.

Having twitted Mr. Stanfield, he turned to the New Democrats suggesting they explain their party's "special status" policy, "providing, of course, they know what they mean." Mr. Bertrand, he said, also claimed special status here at the conference.

When Mr. Stanfield took the floor, he spoke more in sorrow than anger, warning Mr. Trudeau that partisan prodding on such serious subjects worries him. He advised Mr. Trudeau to strive for conciliation, not confrontation, both in Parliament and in constitutional negotiations.

Mr. Trudeau argued that great challenges like pollution, urban renewal, housing and urban transport cannot be met effectively when the constitution is silent or vague about whose responsibilities these problems are.

"There is a great, pressing need for this constitutional task to be moved forward."

Mr. Stanfield proposed that a parliamentary committee begin immediately to discuss constitutional questions, and especially that discussions take place with the Senate on the government's senate reform propositions made to the constitutional conference.

He said in reply to Mr. Trudeau's prodding that the Opposition favors a general constitutional review but it should be allowed to hold back agreement on specific matters.

Pepin Criticizes De Gaulle's Way

PARIS (Reuters) — Jean-Luc Pepin, Canadian minister of industry, trade and commerce, at a news conference Friday challenged Gen. de Gaulle's way of promoting French culture and helping Quebec.

Pepin, here for the ministerial meeting of the 22-nation Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, told reporters he deplored the French president's way of making political capital out of the problems of French-speaking communities, referred to as the "Francophonie."

The Liberal minister was telling about his recent talks with Tunisian government leaders when French relations was brought up. Pepin said there is a certain amount of rivalry between the Canadian and Quebec governments on aid policy in Africa.

"Such rivalry may be considered negative at first sight, but competition has advantages," he said.

Pepin then was asked whether there is any rivalry between France and Canada. He replied:

"I imagine the views of Gen. de Gaulle on Canada are reflected in his attitude towards African countries when Canadian interests are involved.

"For my part, every time I have the opportunity I deplore such politicalization of the problems of the 'Francophonie.' It is a politicalization of the relations between Canada and France."

Law Changed

TORONTO (CP) — A drop of about 40 per cent in the number of Canadians emigrating to the United States since 1965 was caused by a change in U.S. immigration laws Jan. 1, 1966, a spokesman for the U.S. consulate said Friday.

Under the revised law, Canadians must have prearranged employment approved by the labor department.

Conference Held

Youth Gives Davis Rough Time

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's minister of education got as rough a going-over Friday on his department's policies as he ever did from the Opposition in the legislature. His critics were representative of the so-called restless youth.

The minister, William G. Davis, had just told youth what it wanted to hear—that Ontario wants to "cast off the rigidity of fixed curricula"—but it was not enough for some teen-age delegates to a provincial conference on children and youth.

In nearly an hour of questions and answers that followed the minister's prepared luncheon address, Mr. Davis was subjected to a barrage of questions about departmental policy. Some were thoughtful and to the point but others verged upon the insulting, so much so that one high school delegate publicly apologized for another's remarks.

One youth, from Toronto but not otherwise identified, criticized the minister for emphasizing in his address the economic facts of education, that it costs more than $2,000,000 a day to operate Ontario's elementary schools.

He said: "You started by admitting that you are not an educator. On the basis of your performance so far, I agree with you.

"You don't understand human experience. All you talk about is economics."

The scene was a regional conference, first of five to be held across the country this year, on the impact of the educational environment, sponsored by the Vanier Institute of the Family and the Canadian Council on Children and Youth.

It provided an opportunity for high school and university students from many parts of Ontario to discuss educational problems with their elders and to say what they wanted changed. Friday's interlude at the luncheon was the only note of disharmony shown during three days of informal talks and seminars.

Wishart Says He Can't Stop Hate Propaganda

TORONTO (CP) Attorney-General Arthur Wishart said Friday he does not feel there is anything he can do about hate propaganda being spread by telephone in Toronto "under the present state of the law."

Mr. Wishart was commenting on a statement by Justice Minister John Turner who said in the House of Commons in Ottawa earlier Friday that action on the hate campaign was up to the Ontario attorney-general.

Mr. Wishart said in an interview that his department is studying the whole problem of hate propaganda which crops up periodically in Ontario. But under present law, slander or libel of a group or class of people is not an offence.

"If it were to be made an offence it would have to be a criminal offence and the Criminal Code is federal responsibility," he said.

UN Sees Growing Generation Conflict

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A United Nations study predicts that before the end of the 1970s the generation conflict "will assume proportions not previously imagined" and that youth will begin to predominate in world affairs.

The report, first detailed review of youth problems by the UN, was made public Friday. It will be considered next week by the UN'S 32-member commission for social development.

The report notes that many young people today are resorting to anti-social behavior because of frustration, but concludes that in general the world's youth want to participate in national development.

"What appears to be a problem may actually be development potential," it says.

The youth, defined in the study as including those between 12 and 25, already total more than 500,000,000. With the present rate of increase, the report estimates this figure will rise by 150,000,000 during the next decade.

"With a younger world population, it is not inconceivable that the world will develop faster and advance further than ever before. We have already observed that this is a new kind of population ready for change, open to new ideas, prepared to make sacrifices and take risks."

Youth's increasing demand to participate is responsible for the spreading student revolts, the study says, citing demonstrations in more than 50 countries last year.

Chinese Reds Seize 3 Hong Kong Yachts

HONG KONG (AP) — A flotilla of Hong Kong yachts was warned not to sail to Macao on a holiday cruise for the Chinese new year. Now the Communist Chinese are believed to have three of the yachts and 15 of the holidayers.

Sources at Hong Kong' Royal Yacht Club said the yachtsmen had been told the cruise "was not a good thing at this particular time."

The Portuguese colony of Macao is 40 miles across the mouth of the Pearl River estuary from Hong Kong and on an island just off the Chinese mainland.

China claims a 12-mile limit to its territorial waters, and the sea route between the two colonies thus lies in Chinese waters.

The six yachts set out Saturday, anchored for the night off an island midway between Hong Kong and Macao, and resumed the voyage Sunday. Then they became separated in thick fog. Only three of the yachts reached the Portuguese colony.

The Morasum, the Reverie and the Uai-Na-Mara did not arrive. A vessel outside the group picked up a garbled distress message from the Morasum shortly after noon Sunday, saying it was being boarded by Communist Chinese.

Chinese fishermen from Hong Kong said they saw Chinese junks capture the three yachts.

Best available information listed four Americans, three Swedes, two Britons, one Australia, one Frenchman and four Chinese aboard the three craft. Four were children.

Local yachtsmen said they were worried about a possibility the captives might be accused of espionage because all three vessels carried electronic navigational aids, depth sounders and radios.

Postmen Delay Strike Action

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The post office's new "straight-through" delivery system starts today in a climate of continued disagreement over work terms.

Members of the 10,000-strong Letter Carriers Union of Canada in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver decided against strike action at weekend meetings, but centres in southwestern Ontario voted to walk off their jobs Feb. 23 if their demands are not met.

Jack Colville, national secretary-treasurer of the union, said Sunday in Ottawa the new system will be tried while agreement is sought.

"We are not anticipating any work disruption," he said.

Two main points still are in dispute about the new system, under which carriers will not have to return to the post office at mid-day to sort mail for the afternoon delivery.

One is the question of transportation time for the carrier at lunch break. The post office has agreed to pick up carriers and take them to the post office for lunch, and to take them back to the route afterward.

But it says this must be done on the carrier's time, while the union feels the carrier should go back on duty when he leaves the post office.

The other issue is whether two five-minute wash-up periods should be included in the 41 minutes now allowed for "rest and personal needs" during the day.

Issues Dodged Says PC

TORONTO (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield says Prime Minister Trudeau is using constitutional problems as an excuse for deferring action on problems of more immediate urgency such as housing, pollution and transportation.

Accusing the federal government of inflexibility in its constitutional stance, Mr. Stanfield told the Conservative Council of Metropolitan Toronto Saturday that Ottawa is postponing action on urgent problems by saying they can only be solved with a new constitution.

He described Mr. Trudeau's attitude as "incredible for a national leader" and accused him of preaching "dangerous nonsense."

Mr. Stanfield said the prime minister's suggestion that the problems facing cities must wait for the appearance of a new constitution is unrealistic and unfair.

Turks Riot Over Visit Of Ships

ISTANBUL (Reuters) — Six U.S. Navy ships today prepared to sail from Istanbul after a week of bitter anti-American demonstrations which peaked Sunday in a bloody brawl leaving two dead and scores wounded.

Police said an estimated 20,000 persons—equally divided between left and right—took part in Sunday's battle in Taksim Square in the European centre of the Turkish city.

More than 100 persons were injured when the pro-Americans waded into the anti-Americans, waving knives, swinging spiked clubs and throwing stones.

Split Voting Urged

SALISBURY (Reuters) — Prime Minister Ian Smith Saturday night released details of a proposed new constitution racially separating the electorate and ensuring that there will never be Negro-majority rule in Rhodesia.

The new constitution would entrench the government of the territory—"in the hands of civilized Rhodesians for all time," Smith declared.

"I believe it is not only acceptable to Rhodesians, but with a clear conscience we can argue this constitution outside the borders of the country," he added.

This indicated to political observers that the white-minority leader is still confident that the constitution will look moderate enough to the British for them to be prepared to continue negotiations on Rhodesia's future. The Smith regime seized independence from Britain several years ago rather than submit to eventual black rule.

In London, British government officials withheld immediate comment.

The new blueprint constitution would provide for a multi-racial parliament—with separate electoral rolls for blacks and non-blacks—and for separate provincial parliaments for blacks and whites.

While in theory providing for eventual, though long-term racial parity in parliament, the constitution would ensure that there would never be Negro-majority rule in Rhodesia.

Niger Lumps Quebecers With Rest of Canadians

NIAMEY (CP) — The Quebec delegation to a meeting in Niger of countries entirely or partially French-speaking expressed irritation Sunday when an official list of participating nations did not clearly distinguish between Quebec and Canadian delegates.

Both governments were individually invited to the conference and after discussions it was agreed that Quebec would have a "well identified" delegation which would unite with the Canadian delegation upon arrival in this French West African country.

But sources close to the Quebec delegation said the Quebecers were wondering if the unclear listing might not be a subtle Ottawa move to give the impression that Canada was represented by a single delegation.

The list was prepared on the basis of information provided by Ottawa.

Marcel Masse, provincial minister without portfolio and head of the Quebec group, was to meet Sunday with State Secretary Gerard Pelletier, who heads the Canadian delegation, to discuss the situation.

The conference is scheduled to begin today, bringing together representatives of more than 25 countries and of numerous French-language associations to study ways to lay the foundations of a vast cultural and educational organization.

This organization would become an instrument of co-operation among the estimated 200,000,000 French-speaking people spread through some 40 countries around the world.

The Quebec government had no objection to Ottawa's presence at the conference since the subjects to be discussed do not all come under the province's jurisdiction.

Trudeau Really Needs Protection-- From Blondes, Brunettes, Redheads

QUEBEC (CP) — An inner ring of Mounties and an outer ring of city police enclosed Prime Minister Trudeau as he appeared at winter carnival events during the weekend.

He needed the protection as a sea of blondes, brunettes and redheads surged forward at every turn.

The only chants heard during the weekend were "We want Trudeau" when he was inside at one point.

An orange thrown from a cheering crowd of 12,000 whistled past the prime minister's ear Saturday afternoon as he stepped from the ice after dropping the puck for the final game of the international peewee hockey tournament at the Quebec Coliseum. The incident was almost unnoticed and went ignored.

At Saturday night's big carnival parade, watched by tens of thousands of natives and visiting revellers, Mr. Trudeau stood on an open platform to review it.

About 150 police, including detectives from Montreal's identification squad, mingled with the cheerful crowd. Some of Montreal's militant separatists were said to be in town.

However, there was no hint of the violence that turned last June's St. Jean-Baptiste Day parade in Montreal into a riotous test of nerve of the cool prime minister.

City police said their 70-man was bolstered by 1,200 to 1,500 security guards and police on loan from other municipalities for the weekend.

But most were guarding hotels and restaurants, filled to overflowing, or controlling crowds at events like the carnival parade.

Police said about 100 persons —fewer than the number for the same weekend last year—were arrested on such charges as drunkenness and vandalism.

The 15 Mounties in civilian dress detailed to guard Mr. Trudeau always were in evidence, but security was far from smothering.

On narrow and crowded rue Ste. Therese, where he saw ice sculptures, faces peered through windows and from roofs as he stood atop a "bateaumobile"—a truck with a boat-shaped body.

Mounties searched the truck before allowing Mr. Trudeau aboard, then hung on worriedly as it rolled 12 blocks with him on top.

Canadians Involved

Huge Ring to Manufacture LSD Is Smashed by Scotland Yard

LONDON (CP) — A Scotland Yard informant said today the yard believes it has smashed the manufacturing base in Britain forming part of a huge international ring to supply the hallucinatory drug LSD to users on the Pacific coast of Canada and the United States.

Two men have been detained and charged and equipment seized on raids on northwest and east London premises indicated the black-market value of the drugs involved could have been as high as $60,000,000, the informant said.

Both the RCMP and the FBI have been brought into the investigation.

This disclosure followed a report in The Sunday Telegraph that one Toronto man arrested and questioned by police in Toronto—identified as Mandel Kussner—drank from a glass and died of cyanide poisoning.

The newspaper said police had information, which Kussner denied, that he had been employed as a chemist by the Canadian defence department. The newspaper said also that documents seized here in Britain indicated LSD was being manufactured in a Canadian government laboratory.

The Scotland Yard informant said investigations here indicated that local persons were manufacturing the chemical product which was then exported to Canada and the United States for refinement into LSD. He said the volume of manufacturing here was "tremendous."

Charged with conspiring to contravene the Drugs Prevention Act are two London men: Malcolm David Sinclair, 29, a research chemist, and John Conway, 35, a company director. They are coming up for committal hearing March 3.

The conspiracy charges cover the period of Dec. 1, 1968, to Jan. 15, 1969. On Jan. 15, police raided houses in the Paddington area of west London and a laboratory in east London. The 12-man police squad seized U.S. and British currency and 18 jars. Some of these contained the LSD chemical base which on the black market might have fetched $13,000,000 when refined. The other jars contained traces of the chemical. The informant said if these jars had been filled, the black market value of the contents would have been about $47,000,000.

Months of investigation in Britain as well as other parts of Europe and in Canada and the U.S. preceded the raids, the informant said. More investigations are under way. But Scotland Yard now believes the manufacturing base in Britain has been smashed.

Asked whether he believed the Mafia was involved, the informant said: "You can forget about the Mafia." He emphasized, however, that the ring was huge and that the manufacturing base in London appeared to be the principal one for the supply of the basic material to the west coast of Canada and the U.S. He said also that further inquiries should be directed to the RCMP and the FBI.

The 22-year-old Kussner swallowed a glass of pesticide containing the potassium cyanide as police arrested him in his Toronto apartment Jan. 10. An inquest was ordered but no date was set.

The police statement at the time of the incident went no further than that Kussner had been arrested for possession of narcotics after hashish had been found in the apartment.

He was identified only as a CBC technician.

Some Adjustments Before Divers' Descent

David Teasdale, a member of the Quinte Aqua-Divers, is helped into his weight belt before diving. Extra weights were added to the belt when he found that he couldn't get enough depth and was hitting the ice. His second attempt proved more successful and he stayed down for 15 minutes in the cold waters.

Scuba Divers Insist Not Too Cold for Swim

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

To most persons, winter's snow and ice and its cold temperatures would serve as a deterrent to a swim in an Ontario quarry — but not to the Quinte Aqua-divers.

Four scuba-divers, some other members and interested spectators made their ways to a quarry just north of Harold Sunday to participate in the club's annual ice dive.

Sunny skies and temperatures in the lower 20's greeted the gathering. The members brought a pair of axes, some crowbars, a chain saw, a tent and plenty of hot coffee to aid them.

The members of the Quinte Aqua-Divers have experience in the art of ice-diving and its preparations.

Yesterday, according to member Dennis Kent, was the 10th ice dive for the club. Last year, the scuba-divers were invited to the Stirling Winter Carnival for their dive.

The year before the Bay of Quinte was the site of their dangerous antics.

Making the dive this year were Dennis Armstrong, president of the club, Dick Hayes, Bob Fort and David Teasdale.

The first chore with any ice dive is obviously the cutting of a passageway from the surface to the watery depths. For the aqua-divers yesterday's ice cutting was a compound task as the still waters of the quarry formed thicker ice than running water.

In addition to that, the chain saw malfunctioned and axes and crowbars had to be used to make the hole in the ice large enough for a diver and his equipment to descend into the waters.

Upon completion of the hole one pair of divers "suited up" and prepared to enter the 33 degree temperatures of the water.

The divers were tied together by a "buddy line" about eight feet long. Each was secured by a second line, much longer., which was their only link to the surface.

The lines allow the divers to never lose touch with the opening in the ice, their only way to safety.

The divers went under the ice for about 15 minutes in pairs.

"We like to get younger divers interested in going through the ice," said Dennis Kent.

The winter dive is not only for the purpose of adventure — indeed the thrill of ice-diving is secondary to other safety tests.

The cold temperatures of a winter swim can be compared to deep diving in the summer. As well, a cold dive serves as a test for some of the club's scuba-diving equipment such as regulators.

There is a considerable amount of danger in ice diving. A diver could lose sight of the hole and be trapped beneath the ice until his air ran out. The could could overcome him, as well.

However, with the buddy diving system — diving in pairs — and the guideline system used by the Quinte Aqua-divers dangers are kept to a minimum.

Esthetically, the dive is very satisfying to divers. Looking up through the ice gives divers a view somewhat like looking at the moon. "It's all glassy," and is hazy blue.

But, even esthetically, and scientifically, it's only for the dedicated enthusiast.

Lineup at City Hall

Tax Collection Booming

Belleville ratepayers received their interim tax bills only last week, but the tax-collection business is booming at city hall.

At mid-morning this morning there was a line-up of half a dozen people waiting to pay the first instalment of their interim taxes and department workers said they had been busy all morning.

The due date for the first instalment of the interim billing is Feb. 28. The second instalment is due April 30.

City treasurer John Grohn said that the interim billing—approximately 50 per cent of last year's 41.7 mills — will result in $2,120,958 being paid into the city coffers. Of this total $1,403,749 is residential and $717,209 commercial.

The interim billing saves the city approximately $50,000 annually in interest charges, according to the city tax collector. Through the interim billing city borrowing is kept to a minimum.

As is the case with the final tax billing, penalty is provided for late payment of interim tax instalments.

Last year this penalty was at the rate of one half per cent per month but for 1969 that late payment penalty has been doubled to one per cent per month — the same rate as for final billing of current taxes and for tax arrears.

School Budget to Be Late Because of Grant Delay

School boards throughout Ontario will be late this year in preparing their budgets, and Hastings County Board of Education will be no exception.

Although Bill 44 setting up county-wide units of administration calls for the handing down of the 1969 budget estimates by March 1, most boards are asking the minister of education for an extension.

"We are discussing an extension of the date with Toronto," admitted Hastings County board chairman James Clarke this morning.

"We have been assured by the department for some time that major revisions will be made in the provincial grant structure. However, the grant structure has yet to be announced by the minister and you can't prepare a budget without a revenue side," he said.

Traditionally, Mr. Clarke said, the department of education has used grants as a means of spurring activity in one field of education over another, or as a guide to the aspects of education it wanted emphasized during the coming year.

"We, as a board, cannot begin to plot a financial approach to equality of education in all the schools of the county, or set up a program for the year, until we know how the government wants us to allocate the money coming from Toronto in grants," Mr. Clarke asserted.

"In preparing a budget the board's prime duty is to make sure the school tax impact matches the taxpayers' ability to pay. This we can not possibly determine until we know how much money the provincial government will allocate to our county in grants," the chairman concluded.

Children Prove If Interested It's Not Hard to Stay Busy

By LINDA GELDART
(Staff Reporter)

Does a Saturday morning sometimes make you wish your children would find something really constructive to keep them occupied?

There is a solution.

Even if your offspring are not particularly artistically inclined, they can have a chance to let their imagination wander, and at the same time, be constructive about it.

Nothing to It

Sheila McMurray, 12, takes a relaxed attitude towards the class project of creating an "imaginary head." In Sheila's case, the monster she set out to make is in its final stage of completion.

This possible solution lies in the ceramic classes sponsored by the Belleville Recreation Commission. Held each Saturday, the instructions are given in a 10-week series.

The present classes will be finished about the end of March, according to Mrs. Gordon Davies.

Membership now numbers about 13 children, ranging in age from seven to 12.

Mrs. Davies explained the classes first began last summer, and the majority of participants were teenagers.

Even now, the children's ceramic classes, does not have an age limit. Anyone interested is encouraged to join. Registration for the next series of classes will begin about the middle of March.

Mrs. Davies explained that, because of the age group, there is no real theory instruction given. What she does do, is to gather the children together, and discuss with them what they want to make.

"It is a case of pulling from them what they are interested in doing", said Mrs. Davies.

One project they were given was to create anything they desired — but it had to be made completely of coils.

The results were surprising. Items like snake charmers and monsters. The impression seems to be that a child's ingenuity, and imagination knows no bounds.

Their current project is to make an imaginary head. What they came up with defies description. One youngster titled his masterpiece "Trudeau in his early years" — a political commentary?

Mrs. Davies, who also teaches ceramics courses at night school, gauged the interest and enthusiasm of the children as "great — there's always lots of noise." And besides class attendance is almost always perfect.

Quinte Arts Council Plans Charter Flight to Flint

The Quinte Arts Council is organizing a charter flight below the U.S. border to aid in the organization of local community events.

The two-day trip in March, to Flint, Mich., will study the Mott program — an organizational scheme of community resources that has made a mark across North America.

The flight leaves Canadian Forces Base, Trenton, early March 17, returning late the following day.

Between times the participants will study the program adopted by the Flint Board of Education after it was first sponsored there by philanthropist C. S. Mott 30 years ago.

The Mott plan advocates community development through use of all available facilities, emphasizing the cooperation of local government, recreation and education agencies.

Since its inception, the program has been adopted in more than 100 U.S. and Canadian communities — including Ottawa and London, Ont.

The arts council trip includes a two-day seminar on the program and an in-depth study of special interests in the field of community activities.

The Quinte Arts Council, founded in 1967, and sponsors cultural and creative activities in Hastings, Prince Edward, Northumberland and Lennox and Addington counties.

Industry Technique

Students Adopt Teach-in Plan

Since business and industry are making increasing use of the workshop and seminar method of teaching, Moira Secondary School has decided to give its senior students training in getting the most from the method.

Hence, a "teach-in" all day Tuesday at Albert College for Moira's 95 grade 13 students.

"Our second reason for the teach-in is to give the students a chance to meet stimulating minds from the work outside the classroom," said Murray Irwin, head of the English department at Moira, a teach-in organizer.

Stanley Burke, former director of public affairs for the CBC, and now identified with the CBC national news report, will be principal speaker. He will address the students in the afternoon on communication in the 20th century and lead discussion groups on the subject.

John Burke, now area consultant with the social planning council of North York and a former Anglican priest in Montreal, will speak in the morning on the world of the student and the world outside.

J. H. MacKay, principal of Albert College, has turned the college's facilities over to the Moira students while the Albert students are absent on their mid-winter break.

Included in the day's activities are luncheon and supper and recreation periods when the students will have full use of Albert's swimming pool and recreation rooms.

Assisting Mr. Irwin in arranging the teach-in are six Moira teachers, who will be on hand during the sessions to aid in discussions.

Planned Program Boost To Construction Image

Members of the Quinte Construction Association were told that the construction industry could improve its "public relations image" with a planned public relations program through a central agency such as the Ontario Federation of Construction Associations.

Guest speaker, Peter Allen, director of the Labor Relations Bureau of the Ontario Federation of Construction Associations, at a dinner meeting Thursday suggested several ways in which organization of the construction industry could be improved.

He suggested the industry have long range planning for construction manpower and promote and improve construction management.

He said that it could provide expert legal advice through a central agency, promote and support a board to deal with jurisdictional and other labor disputes and strengthen local construction associations with more representative membership.

In addition, he suggested the development of common labor relations policies, the development of multi-trades and multi-bargaining agreements, the obtaining of the services of qualified labor relations managers and the compiling of research data.

Marketing To Be Topic Of Address

Carl A. Lawrence, associate professor in the school of business at Queen's University, will be guest speaker at a meeting of the Belleville Sales and Ad Club Tuesday night.

Mr. Lawrence is a lecturer in marketing at the university.

Born in Montreal, he graduated from McGill University with a Bachelor of Science degree. He did his doctoral work at the University of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Lawrence was a member of the faculty of the Wharton Shcool of Finance and Commerce at the University of Pennsylvania.

He also has a background of business experience having worked in both sales and marketing research with Dow Chemical Company of Canada, Dominion Electrohome Industries Ltd. and Behaviour Systems Inc.

Summer Gardens Return By Way of Camera Slides

The members of the Belleville Horticultural Society toured many summer gardens recently, under the guidance of Robert Patterson and with the aid of his slides, The Four Seasons.

There were spring flowers seen blooming in Ottawa, Hamilton, and Toronto where the society had twice sponsored tours.

The parks in Winnipeg, Windsor and Montreal and the roses in our own Corby Park were enjoyed. The prize gardens were viewed again and the one weeping flowering crab tree in Belleville was a surprise to many.

A Valentine Day flower show was held at this meeting. The awards for the best fresh flower arrangements went to Mrs. Al Gardiner, Mrs. H. Smith, Mrs. R. Watson.

The best artificial flower arrangements: Mrs. R. Watson, R. Patterson, Miss Valerie Watson.

The best corsage: Mrs. R. Watson, R. Patterson, Mrs. Brook.

Youths Face Theft Charge

TRENTON — Two Trenton youths have been charged with car theft following a chase on Highway 400 near Whitby Saturday.

Charged are Peter Robinson and Lydon Thomas of no fixed address. Police say both are in their teens. A third youth, a juvenile, has also been charged.

The two older youths will appear in Trenton Magistrate's Court tomorrow to face the charge.

No Door to Door Canvass For Air Force Memorial

TRENTON — Someone's trying to make a quick buck out of Trenton's newly-proposed RCAF memorial.

Some persons living in Middleton Park have been approached by a canvasser who claims to be collecting for the RCAF memorial fund.

Major. Norman Cairns, publicity chairman for the memorial, said there is no such canvassing being carried on officially, now or in the future.

Accredited representatives from the memorial fund will accept cash donatioons, but they will not be canvassing from door to door.

The initial part of the fund-raising campaign is now underway with each member of the Canadian Forces air element receiving a notice of the appeal by mail.

They may then make their contribution to this project by a payroll deduction or by sending a cheque to the RCAF Memorial Fund Post Office Box 310, Trenton.

Scouts Going Strong

In a world in which the young are searching for fresh guidelines to cope with vastly changing circumstances and pressures, the Canadian scouting movement still exercises strong influence.

Since its inception in England in 1907, based on the ideas of Lord Baden-Powell, the scout movement has spread around the world. The Boy Scouts World Conference consists of 93 national member associations representing 15 million Scouts and leaders in more than 150 separate territories.

Scouts, in addition to setting an example of integrity and service to others, as epitomized by the Scout law, provide practical assistance in many areas of community affairs. Last year, according to national headquarters in Ottawa, they helped park and recreation employees in clearing beaches in the Sudbury area, canvassed on behalf of retarded children in Alberta, taught water safety in Sault Ste. Marie and assisted in transferring library books to a new building in Corner Brook, Newfoundland, to name just a few. In addition they gave thousands of hours of service at Man and His World in Montreal, pushing wheelchairs, leading the blind, assisting the elderly and protecting the young. This year the Canadian movement is sponsoring a scout field executive for work in the Caribbean in the next four years.

Scouting keeps up with the times, because the principles that inspired its beginnings are still valid today. No new code of morality or conduct can alter that fact. The organization is one to which every youngster should belong at some time or other during his early upbringing.

The remarkable Lady Baden-Powell, widow of the founder, and still busy at the age of 80, continues to take an interest in the world-wide activities of both scouts and girl guides. Lately she has been in Africa, typifying by her energetic presence and leadership the global nature of this fine organization.

Global Unrest

Montreal . . . Rome . . . Tokyo . . . Istanbul . . . Windsor (Ontario) . . . Madison (Wisconsin). These are among the cities witnessing the current phenomenon of student unrest.

In Detroit, elderly people walk in fear of attack only a short distance from the city centre — and in broad daylight. Their fears have been expressed increasingly of late to newspapers in the border city. In Seattle a grocer, Nick Dallas, has given up the business he has operated for 20 years because of too many robberies.

Here in Belleville we hear of increasing addiction to drugs and alcohol among the young. Dissent, moral decay . . . these are problems of the moment. Could it be that the communists are getting their way? "We will bury you," former Soviet Premier Khrushchev once said. The method? Not by military means — but by the far more subtle means of undermining the fabric of society. And how better to do it than by working through young people, in the schools and universities. This is a time when all that is best in the rising generation must be mobilized to counter these insidious forces. The watchword of the young should be the building of a better society, not to tear it down.

Arctic Adventure

A Scottish couple who some years ago took two of their children on medical research expeditions to Spitzbergen and among the jungle natives of the Amazon, are undertaking another formidable trip. Dr. Hugh Simpson, lecturer in pathology at Glasgow University, and his wife Myrtle, both 37, plan to set out for the North Pole shortly on skis from Ellesmere Island in the Canadian Arctic. They will be accompanied by Roger Tufft, 36, a teacher from Keswick, who will carry out meteorological studies. Mrs. Simpson, who described the earlier expedition in a book called "Home is a Tent," will maintain radio contact with the Canadian base at Resolute Bay. If successful, the expedition will achieve two firsts: the first crossing of the Arctic ice-cap, a distance of some 500 miles, without the aid of dogs or mechanical sleds, and the first time a woman has made the trek. The party will take their equipment on three sleds, dropping off two en route as the scheduled 50-day journey proceeds. There will be plenty of material here for another book by Mrs. Simpson, whose previous account of her experiences and of her husband's medical research in two widely diversified regions made very good reading.

PC Member's Suggestion

Political 'Interns' Could Do Research for MPs

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — Since hospitals benefit from the services of interns, why shouldn't the House of Commons? asks Alfred D. Hales (PC—Wellington).

For more than three years now, the tall Guelph agriculturis has been asking this question. While he has been getting an encouraging response, so far there has been little concrete action. This could change soon.

Buried in the heavy list of private members' motions on the Commons order paper is one from Mr. Hales which asks the government to consider establishing a form of internship program for the Commons.

The motion says that young political scientists, law school members and journalists would be brought to Ottawa for six- or nine-month periods to work as full-time assistants to MPs.

Twice before, this has appeared on the Commons order paper—in 1966 and 1967—and each time it was buried in praise. Once it was "talked off" the order paper when the allotted debating time expired without a vote, and on the other occasion it died on a committee agenda when Parliament was dissolved.

But this hasn't dimmed the enthusiasm of Mr. Hales. He now is busy working with the House leaders of all the parties trying to get agreement to have his motion referred to the committee on rules and procedures where his intern concept could be given a complete airing.

"It's encouraging," he says.

"It's impossible for an MP to do a thorough job without some help.

"How can we ever overcome the bureaucratic landslide when civil servants work on new legislation for months and then we are expected to find all the loopholes in a short debate?

"If we just had someone to do basic research on these things. . . ."

This is how Mr. Hales, chairman of the public accounts committee, hit upon his idea of interns.

"What I have in mind is having graduate students coming to Ottawa for six to nine months, or perhaps for a full session, and being attached to an MP. Perhaps the intern would select the MP who would give him the most work and experience.

"He would start with a brief orientation period, interview key people in the legislative process, visit various departments, and perhaps spend some time in the press gallery. If it was a law student, he could spend this time in the legal department.

"Then he would settle down to work with his MP, researching legislation, helping to write speeches, drafting bills, and helping with the general administration work.

"Just think how much better equipped he would be at the end of his internship."

Mr. Hales says he would like to see the program started on a modest scale—with perhaps 10 interns.

Already, he says, one established foundation has indicated it would finance such a program for a three-year experimental period. After this the government could help with the salaries, which he said would be on the basis of $5,000 to $10,000 a year.

"Perhaps many of these interns would want to become MPs themselves—although I suspect they would find that it's not the bed of roses they thought."

The Canadian Political Science Association is known to be enthusiastic about the plan, and many university teachers are supporting it.

A similar program operates in the United States Congress.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Mad Trapper known as Albert Johnson was shot dead by RCMP 37 years ago today—in 1932—after a two-month manhunt. He was reported by Indians for interfering with their traps and shot at police when they visited his cabin at Rat River, N.W.T. After a siege, he escaped in 45-below weather and travelled to the Yukon on foot, killing Const. Millen en route. He was tracked on foot and by air and wounded a soldier before being shot. His real name and history were never known.

1919—Sir Wilfrid Laurier died at Ottawa.

1955—Britain announced it would make H-bombs.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1944—house-to-house fighting continued at Cassino, Italy; American planes bombed behind German lines south of Rome in the greatest force yet in the Mediterranean theatre; the United States war department disclosed the sinking of an Allied ship in European waters with the loss of 1,000 U.S. soldiers.

Frobisher Bay Development

Toronto Star Syndicate

The Canadian government acknowledges private enterprise may be a better administrator than Ottawa bureaucracy.

Frobisher Bay on Baffin Island is the government's eastern arctic administrative centre and is to become a modern, livable community. A consortium of three firms from Edmonton — Solar Construction, Lockerbie-Hole (Western) Limited and Batoni-Humford — will join Ottawa in a town development project.

The government has had previous experience with Arctic development. It shouldered the burden of creating a new town at Inuvik on the shore of the Arctic Ocean in the Northwest Territories. Modern Inuvik came into being in the 1950's and the problems coping with weather, distances from supply sources and isolation taxed Ottawa's know-how beyond its capacity. Presumably, private industries used to the north's special problems can do a better job.

Under the Frobisher Bay contract, the consortium will build a six-storey apartment block, a series of row houses, a hotel, shopping and business facilities. The contractors will own and operate the development, which could cost up to $20 million. They will get back their development money — and a profit — by renting the space to the government and private citizens, including the Eskimo population. After 20 years from the completion date, the apartments, row housing and office areas will revert to the Canadian government for the sum of $1.00.

The idea was conceived to ensure the Eskimos, first citizens of the Arctic, will benefit before other considerations. At present the Eskimos tend to live by themselves — either from choice or because they're discriminated against by the whites. Jean Chretien, Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, has said in so many words the Eskimos will be integrated with the white population if that is the way the natives want it.

Eskimos will be employed on the construction of the complex and to maintain the buildings when they're completed by the summer of 1971. Small as it is, Frobisher Bay is an important weather and exploration outpost and the biggest Eskimo settlement in Canada.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 17, 1949

The "innards" of a newspaper and its various departments were inspected yesterday by the staff of Zellers Ltd. The young ladies were taken on a tour of the various departments by Jack Bond of the advertising department. They were shown teletypes, linotypes and presses while "in action".

Teachers and instructors of the Ontario School for the Deaf paid signal honor recently to Dr. Harry Amoss, superintendent of professional schools, on his retirement from active duty. Dr. Amoss was presented with a fine painting of a Bay of Quinte scene from the brush of Manley Macdonald. The presentation address was read by W. J. Morrison, superintendent of the OSD who paid tribute to the work of Dr. Amoss during his tenure of office.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, leader of the Liberal party in Canada for many years, died at his residence in Ottawa at 2:50 this afternoon. Death was due to paralysis, the first attack of which was experienced yesterday. Sir Wilfred was born at St. Lin, Que. on Nov. 20, 1841. He was elected leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons in 1887. On the defeat of the Tupper Ministry at the election of 1896, he was called to form a government by Lord Aberdeen, the Governor - General. He was sworn in a member of the Privy Council on July 11, 1896, and formed his ministry on July 13, 1896.

Crime Rate Soars

Fear Grips U.S. Cities

Detroit News

Rarely does a day pass that we fail to get a letter from an old man or woman expressing fear of walking on the streets of this city.

That fear is not ill-founded, as the daily crime report reveals. Thugs attack citizens in broad daylight on main streets a short distance from the heart of the business district.

The streets are unsafe.

Back in 1941, Franklin Roosevelt in his annual message to Congress stated that he looked forward to a world founded on four essential freedoms. The first three of these freedoms, were freedom of speech, freedom to worship God and freedom from want. The fourth:

Freedom from fear.

Since 1941 the United States has fought a major world war and several lesser but nevertheless bloody wars in various parts of the globe to protect freedom from fear.

How ironic that we are losing this freedom in our own streets.

European Power Politics

Britain and West Germany in Joint Ventures

By HAROLD MORRISON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

In his apparent attempt to get into Europe by the back door if not the front, Prime Minister Wilson appears to have won a point as a result of his current approaches to West Germany.

He and West German Chancellor Kurt Kiesinger have jointly declared they must work towards a united Europe and that a united Europe is inconceivably without Britain.

That by itself is merely airing a generality with which President de Gaulle of France cannot quarrel since he himself has stated that one day Britain may be ready to join the six-country European Common Market though he cannot predict when that day will come.

But Wilson's trip to Bonn was not merely for the purpose of shaping generalities. Britain has launched a determined policy to engage members of the Common Market in a number of joint operations. These may tend to draw members closer to Britain and possibly away from the domineering influence of France which has constantly opposed British attempts to join the Common Market.

One such project involves joint foreign policy discussions with a meeting in London which the French government has openly stated it will not attend. Britain wants to discuss a joint policy on the Middle East. France has launched its own idea of Big Four talks and thinks it is presumptuous of Britain to grab the limelight.

There is no doubt that de Gaulle is watching Britain's manoeuvres with close attention, particularly British-West German relations. West Germany and Britain are launching joint operations in a number of industrial fields, including a new gas centrifuge to produce enriched uranium, a project that has enraged the Russians who have accused the two countries of trying to establish a military-political axis.

Growth of common interests between Britain and West Germany, particularly their common determination to continue and strengthen the North Atlantic Alliance, might in time challenge de Gaulle's self-assured political dominance of Europe. But de Gaulle has cards of his own to play.

He shortly will hold talks with President Nixon and it is reported that Nixon is so anxious to improve French-American relations that he might concede a few points to de Gaulle's, perhaps opening a new kind of special relationship between the two countries.

Failing that, de Gaulle could revive his old threat to forge a new kind of special relationship with the Soviet Union, a matter which has deeply troubled the West Germans. This perhaps was one reason why West German leaders have carefully avoided pressing too hard against de Gaulle's wishes.

Montreal Federalists Take Lead

Million Supporters Sought for New Pro Canada Association

MONTREAL (CP) — A new federalist organization aimed at making "all Canadians fully accepted and truly equal citizens in all parts of our country" was launched Sunday night.

Leaders of the national organization, to be known as the Pro Canada Association, say they hope to recruit 1,000,000 supporters "who believe in a united country."

Organized by a group of business and civic leaders, the association will attempt to establish chapters in every province prior to Dec. 31, 1969, when it will hold its first national convention.

Announcing the kick-off of the Canada-wide recruiting campaign, President Art E. Seguin, mayor of suburban Pointe Claire and Liberal member of the Quebec national assembly for Robert Baldwin, said the association should not be tagged as an "anti-separatist" body.

"Pro Canada has positive and long-range objectives for the preservation and betterment of Canada as the homeland of all Canadians, regardless of ethnic origin, language or religion.

"In this context, we will of course oppose the ideas and activities of all who want to break up and destroy our country."

Contacts with prospective organizers of the non-partisan organization have been established in several Quebec cities and large centres across Canada.

A major drive for cross-Canada membership will be made this June when hundreds of civic representatives gather in Ottawa for the annual convention of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities.

At that time, Mayor Seguin said, he will make a concerted effort to enlist the support of mayors and aldermen across Canada.

The bilingual association hopes to fight rising separatism in Quebec and in any other part of Canada where it may arise. It would contribute "to the development and strengthening of true Canadian national awareness and pride."

To achieve its aims, the association plans to:

—Carry out fact-finding studies and research into Canada's achievements and problems of importance to Canadian understanding and progress;

—Promote action on national, regional and local levels for better communications and understanding between Canadiens;

—Work for the implementation of constitutional, economic and educational reforms necessary to make all Canadians equal across the country;

—Effectively use all available means of communication to achieve the broadest diffusion of its goals;

—Support all institutions, organizations and individuals whose ideas are in agreement with the association's objectives.

Membership in the association is open to all citizens under 18 years and annual fees have been set at $5. Citizens under 18 years will be allowed to enrol if they are full-time students at a recognized college or university.

Judy Declines Bid To Oppose Nixon

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal Paul Cosgrove said Sunday a closed provincial meeting of the party considered replacing Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon.

One report said the former secretary of state, Judy LaMarsh, has been approached to contest the leadership at the provincial convention in Hamilton March 28-29.

Mr. Cosgrove, president of the Scarborough East Federal Liberal association and chairman of the meeting, said after the meeting that Miss LaMarsh could lead Ontario Liberals to victory in 1971 "with her hands tied behind her back."

She was reported to have been sent a letter a week ago by 17 Scarborough Liberals asking her to consider running against Mr. Nixon.

More than 50 Liberals were reported at the closed meeting to have criticized Mr. Nixon's backing the party's entry into municipal politics.

Mr. Cosgrove said Mr. Nixon was not invited to the meeting because "you don't invite the man whose shoes you are trying to fill to take the meeting away from you."

Miss LaMarsh said today in an interview from Niagara Falls that contesting the leadership was the thing furtherest from her mind and that she had not answered the letter from the Scarborough Liberals.

"I think it's a very flattering suggestion, but my present feeling is that I have made all the contribution I am expected to."

Alan Martin, president of the Scarborough Centre provincial Liberal association, said "only someone with a national image can take on (Premier John) Robarts."

Miss LaMarsh has that image, he said.

"Miss LaMarsh is only one alternative," said Mr. Martin. "But nobody's come up with anything else."

Tyendinaga Reserve

TYENDINAGA RESERVE — Mohawk L.O.L. last month installed its officers for 1969. Bennett Brant, Master of the lodge for three years, asked to be relieved of office, and Austin ("Ski") Brant was installed as the new Master. Deputy Master is Vernon Claus. Francis John is chaplain and Melville Hill is marshal.

The lodge members of Pine Lodge have accepted an invitation to head the parade in Morrisburg on July 12, 1969.

South Hastings County Chapter of the Orange Association met in the Guild Hall of the Mohawk Community Centre late last week, and elected Bennett Brant as its new county Master. Deputy County Master elected is Bernard Fox of Point Anne. Following the installation of the new officers by Brother Len Jones of Trenton, the 44 county members who attended sat down to a corn soup supper prepared by the men of the host lodge.

Barricaded French Worker Kills Himself and Children

BORDEAUX, France (AP) — A French construction foreman who held two of his children prisoners for 16 days under police siege killed himself today and fatally wounded the children as the police moved in to take him.

Andre Fourquet turned his hunting rifle on his two children and himself as police launched an all-out assault on the one-storey house, hidden deep in a wood.

His 11-year-old son, Francis, was died in the house and Fourquet died while being taken to hospital. His 13-year-old daughter, Aline, died late this morning.

Fourquet barricaded himself in the farmhouse Feb. 1, demanding that police bring him his estranged wife so that he could kill her.

He told a reporter who managed to spend a few minutes in the house Sunday: "I want my wife to come back. I want to liquidate her. If she is a real mother she will return."

Pointing to his rifle, he added: "I will kill her with that."

Fourquet said he had not eaten for four days and that the children had consumed nothing but milk.

Three armored cars manned by gendarmes closed in on the house in nearby Cestas this morning. When the lead armored car was about 80 yards from the house, three shots were heard.

There was no reply to calls of "Give up, Fourquet" over a loudspeaker. Grenades broke open the shutters of the house, and police found Fourquet with a bullet in his head, his son dead and daughter gravely wounded.

Fourquet, 38, barricaded himself in with his three children to defy a judge's order awarding his wife custody of the children. An elder daughter, Chantal, 14, escaped in the middle of one night when she pretended to go to the bathroom.

Fourquet had threatened to kill himself and the children if the police used force against him. Although he killed one policeman with a rifle shot early in the siege, repeated attempts were made to induce the man to surrender so that the children would not be harmed.

Fourquet allowed a doctor inside to treat Aline for illness of an undisclosed nature. He admitted the gendarme commander several times and talked with him. After each of these sessions, he said he wanted a little more time to think it over, and officials got the impression he would surrender soon.

Several reporters also were admitted for interviews.

Sunday, a gendarme officer said Fourquet "has been acting like a film star, and now the time for cinema is over."

The armored cars were sent for.

Biafra Decides Time Ripe To Seek Backing from U.S.

UMUAHIA (AP) — After getting a measure of support from France, Biafra is going after the diplomatic jackpot—backing from the United States.

A sharp increase in private and government relief aid from the United States for refugees and visits by U.S. congressmen have given the Biafrans the idea that the time is ripe for wooing Washington.

The Biafrans were pleased by the visit of the first official U.S. congressional delegation to go to both sides in the Nigerian civil war. The delegation, headed by Representatives Charles C. Diggs Jr. (Dem. Mich.), left Saturday night after a two-day stay.

Earlier Senator Charles E. Goodell (Rep. N.Y.) visited both Lagos and Biafra. He said he would report to President Nixon and to State Secretary William Rogers on his return.

The avowed aim of both visits was to study ways of relieving famine. But the Biafrans are confident the congressmen will report on the political and military situation as well.

For the American visitors, Lt.-Col. Odumegwu Ojukwu and Biafra's other leaders had one main theme—they regard relief as "a palliative at best," and say the U.S. should re-evaluate its entire policy toward Nigeria and Biafra.

The Biafrans have been vague and at times contradictory in saying what they want from Washington.

Ojukwu has said the U.S. has "a great potential for peace" in the region and can be a mediator if it acts quickly. But outright support would please most Biafrans more.

Only a few months ago, the Biafrans were condemning the United States almost as strongly as they do Britain, because American recoilless rifles were captured from the Nigerians.

Now the Biafran leaders say they are "prepared to believe" that American arms for Nigeria was never a matter of U.S. policy.

Britain has supplied arms to the federal government in great quantity. The Biafrans do not seem to expect important support from diplomatic quarters other than the U.S. at the present time. They say they have "given up" on the British government, and that there is no hope of the African nations settling the war because "outside powers"—Britain, the Soviet Union and the U.S.—bear the responsibility for the conflict.

The Biafrans say they are immensely grateful to President de Gaulle for describing Biafra as a "reality" and giving them aid. But they say this support has caused other problems.

"Now the British government presents itself to its people as the protector of British interests in Nigeria against the French," said one official.

The Biafrans say they realize Washington is in a ticklish situation, with both the Soviet Union and Britain supporting the Nigerian federation from which Biafra proclaimed its independence in July, 1967.

But Biafran military men speak openly of their hope of getting arms from the U.S. Government leaders say withdrawal of U.S. backing for British policy would be enough.

Kingsley Martin Dies After Vigorous Life

CAIRO (Reuters) — Kingsley Martin, 71, former editor of the influential London magazine The New Statesman, died in hospital here Sunday night.

Martin suffered a stroke shortly after arriving here five days ago as the guest of the Indian ambassador to Egypt, Apa B. Pant.

Martin was one of the great crusading editors of this century.

For 30 years—from 1930 to 1960, he was editor of The New Statesman, which he moulded in his own image as an uncompromising moralist and firm opponent of colonialism.

Under his direction The New Statesman's influence extended throughout the British Empire and Commonwealth. It was considered essential reading for leaders of the independence struggles in British dependent territories in Asia and Africa.

Martin was the son of Rev. Basil Martin, a Unitarian minister, who was a pacifist and a Socialist.

Martin made clear in his first volume of autobiography, Father Figures, published in 1966, that he greatly admired his father and was strongly influenced by his ideals.

After service with an ambulance unit in The First World War, he studied at Cambridge and Princeton universities.

He was a political science lecturer at the London School of Economics from 1923 until 1927 when he joined the editorial staff of the Manchester Guardian.

He left the liberal Guardian to edit The New Statesman, which was started in 1913 by the famous Socialist reformers Sidney and Beatrice Webb with the backing of George Bernard Shaw.

When Martin took it over from the first editor, Clifford Sharp, it had just incorporated its liberal rival, The Nation. He transformed it into the entertaining and stimulating conscience of Britain's non-conformist left.

He was a lifelong supporter of the Indian independence struggle and a close friend of the late Indian prime minister, Jawaharlal Nehru.

Classes in Modern Jazz Dancing Held at Local Recreation Centre

By LINDA GELDART

Mention the word "jazz" to most people, and what you get are half-formed images of smoke-filled cellar clubs where everybody "grooves" on the sounds till the very early hours.

Then, it logically follows, that trying to transform this kind of impression, and sound into dance, could be a bit difficult.

It is, however, easier than it sounds.

There are at present, classes of modern jazz dancing currently being taught in the Belleville area.

One such class has a membership of six, taking in both the teenage and adult age groups.

Classes usually run from September through May, and, normally on Saturday mornings.

During a typical class, there is an exercise period of about 15 minutes, the rest of the time is spent in learning actual jazz steps.

A jazz routine is developed, working towardas a recital which is held about the first of May. Here is where the hard work, exercising and dedication are put to the test.

Most members of the class have had previous training in jazz classes. The main object, however, is for the teacher and students to get to know one another, so a rapport can develop, equalling better results.

All of the individuals involved in this particular class were described as being "greatly enthused." "They work very hard, and they are the best group one could ever hope to teach," their teacher commented.

Art of Teaching Speech Topic at Chapter Meet

The regular meeting of Alpha Lambda Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi was held at the home of Mrs. A. Hudson, Feb. 12 with Mrs. R. Burrows as co-hostess.

A ritual of jewels was held for Mrs. F. Varney, Mrs. G. Allin, Mrs. B. Carter, Mrs. G. Stephanson and Mrs. F. Kamphuis. A hearty welcome to the new members was given.

Delta Alpha Chapter in Trenton held their annual Valentine's dance at Batawa, Feb. 7 which several members attended.

Mrs. C. Young was thanked for her hospitality after the bowling party.

Mrs. John Morrow introduced Mrs. A. Hudson who spoke on the subject "Tools for the Art of Life" from the booklet "Beauty". Mrs. Hudson explained the art of teaching speech to hard of hearing children and children who have not been taught a chance to speak properly. Tapes were used to show the different levels attained in learning how to speak.

One of her pupils, who is totally deaf, attended the meeting to show the progress he has achieved in just ten months. The program was most educational as it gave all a better understanding of the problems these children go through to learn how to speak and understand being spoken to.

Mrs. D. Green thanked Mrs. Hudson for presenting such a program.

Home and School News

KING GEORGE HOME AND SCHOOL

The February meeting of the King George Home and School Association was held recently in the school auditorium.

A short business meeting was held during which the president, Mrs. H. Cavalier, expressed the importance of the co-operation of every member when approached by the nominating committee regarding officers for the coming year.

Room count was held with the winning banners going to Mrs. Ladoucier, Miss Casey, and Mr. Marson. The meeting was turned over to the principal, Leo McQuaid, who introduced the teachers who were taking part in the evening's program.

An interesting demonstration was carried out by students from grades one to eight, giving the parents an insight into the school's physical education curriculum.

The members were impressed with the co-ordination and imagination stressed by the students in the lower grades and the development of these skills and team effort at the upper level.

Fred Wooster thanked the teachers and students who participated in the presentation.

The meeting concluded and refreshments were served.

The March meeting will be a euchre party held in the school auditorium on March 10, 1969.

CLUB 4-H NOTES

SIDNEY SOUTH I

The second meeting of the Sidney South I 4-H was held on Feb. 5 at the home of Mrs. J. Best. The roll call was "The Learning Stitches article I have chosen to make and why."

The members chose "Denim Daisies" as the name for the club.

Mrs. J. Best demonstrated "How to Make a Design" and Mrs. D. Douglas discussed "How to Enlarge a Design."

The members also learned the first basic stitch, "The Blanket Stitch". They made rows of this stitch in different lengths and attached them to a sample page and afterwards cut out their place mats or table runners.

Next meeting of the Denim Daisies will be held Feb. 12 at the home of Mrs. D. Douglas.

CHURCH GROUPS

TYENDINAGA A.C.W.

TYENDINAGA — The monthly meeting of the ACW of the Tyendinaga parish was postponed due to the condition of the roads, and last Thursday the meeting was held at the rectory.

A fund was set up with which to purchase a new organ for All Saints Church, to be a memorial to Mrs. Susan Claus. Mrs. Claus, who died a few weeks ago, was a lifelong member of that church, and a tireless worker in the parish guild. The A.C.W. donated $200 to the memorial fund.

At the conclusion of the formal meeting, a Valentine party was enjoyed, with each receiving a valentine, and Mrs. Leslie Claus winning the draw for the special one, a heart-shaped box of chocolates.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. F. F. Downing.

Jumpers Versatile Additions to Wardrobe

NEW YORK (CP) — Jumpers are versatile additions to any wardrobe and this spring have the added interest of being second in fashion importance, following the top popularity of pants costumes.

Jumpers can be part of the ensemble of pants, jumper and blouse. Anne Klein, for example, shows a black-and-white check wool jumper with pants and a white crepe ascot shirt. Davidow adds pants to a jumper dress, both in white web-weave fabric. And for late spring there's a white linen jumper coat worn with spice-color pants.

Indeed the jumper-style coat is proving itself most popular, although not yet ousting the important coat dress. Jerry Silverman introduces this sleeveless-style jumper coat in jersey or in double knit, to be worn over a long-sleeved printed silk dress.

But jumpers also stand alone this season as a dress for every time of day.

You could go to the supermarket in Kimberly's geranium knit jumper with a wide midriff belt and its own companion white sweater or later in the season in Wragge's brown cotton jumper with low patch pockets, worn with a white blouse.

You could go to the office in Junior Sophisticates' grey-flannel jumper dress with braid frog closure or to the office and on to an informal party in Pauline Trigere's grey jumper dress with its black patent belt and one big button near the neckline. Or you could go to a cocktail party in Teal Traina's navy jumper in the new Qiana nylon crepe-backed satin.

Jumpers have long been popular for children but came into adult favor just after the First World War when they were a sort of sleeveless over-dress, hanging loosely from the shoulders and always with a tasselled sash. By 1922 they were short and appeared in serge, rep or silk crepe.

Four years later came the jumper suit, decorated with bindings, pipings or embroidery. Then the jumper advanced to the costume stage, with a short version over a skirt and completed by a coat.

In the early 1920s woollen jumpers were in fashion, sometimes worn with a cardigan. They gained in popularity in spite of the wool shortage until about 1946 when twin sweater sets took over and the jumper faded from the scene until 1954.

Revived, they began to rival the blouse-and-skirt look. They have continued to be in style ever since but lost much of their importance during the late 1950s and early 1960s.

In the spring of 1963 the jumper look appeared in coats and suits. Then gradually they gave way to the coat dress. But this spring jumpers are again influencing the whole fashion look.

Geoffrey Beene is probably the designer putting the most stress on jumpers this season. He shows them frequently with trousers that are slim to flare at the bottom. He especially likes jumpers for resort and at-home wear.

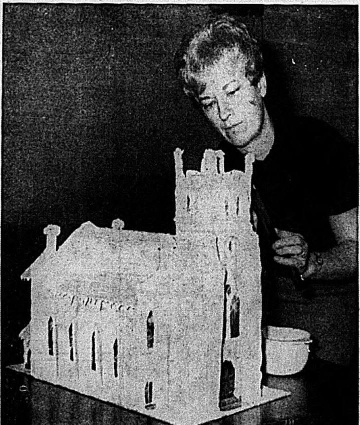
His jumpers include a red jumper jacket in jersey with navy pants and a white silk blouse, colors that seem to be tops in most collections. He continues the color scheme in a smock jumper of navy wool crepe with a white silk blouse and red cravat. A black-and-white tweed jumper dress, high-waisted, has a scooped neckline. It's worn with a braid-trimmed bolero.

Many of the late-day jumpers feature blouses in organdy or other see-through fabrics. Suzy Perette has a wide ribbed white pique jumper with black-and-white embroidered dots on organdy for its blouse. Mam'selle fills in the low square-cut neckline of a jumper with crisp bubbling sleeves and a soft neckline tie.

In Canada jumpers are expected to be important, too.

Miss Sun Valley of Toronto believes they will be the leading style, the majority worn with a blouse. This firm is doing jumpers with a fitted torso and low pleated skirt, in linens, voiles and cottons, the blouses usually in the same fabric but contrast colors.

Montrealer John Warden, in his label collection for Hudson Cloak of Toronto, is featuring a white dress under a checked jumper with big squashy buttons. He also likes a jumper worn over an ascot-tied blouse, topped by an open-collared jacket.



Sweet Centrepiece

How to have your church and eat it too was demonstrated by Mrs. William Pape as she put the finishing touches on an icing model of St. Thomas' Church. Mrs. Pape made the model to surmount the birthday cake served at a reception Sunday in the parish hall, marking the visit of Right Reverend K. C. Evans, Bishop of Ontario, for the church's sesquicentennial celebrations.

Curling Club Members Vote on New Rink

TWEED — In regard to the erecting of the curling rink, separate from the present Community Centre, with an estimated cost of $75,000, the vote was held Sunday and Monday evenings, at the Tweed Community Centre, with the scrutineers being: Mrs. Helen Porch, Mrs. Beth Baldwin and Mr. Kenneth Thompson, the vote (everyone who was a member of the club, voted with the exception of three members) and a 77 per cent vote for yes was obtained. Since the committee have already visited curling clubs at Belleville, Picton, Pembroke and Cobden as well as Winchester, the members and committee know just about where they are at, in every plan which has been well-thought out.

The new four-sheet curling rink is to be built or erected immediately south-east of the present Community Centre.

Previous to the balloting, a letter containing a complete outline of the proposed plans along with the ballot, was sent to each and every member of the club, so they were not voting in the dark as-it-were.

CLUB 4-H NOTES

The third meeting of the Albury Juniorettes was held at the home of Mrs. Doug Peck, with 16 members present.

The committee for Achievement Day was chosen. Members discussed the uses of the blanket stitch, and how to enlarge design. Demonstration of the feather stitch followed the discussions.

Group work included working the feather stitch into varicus samples. The next meeting is planned for Feb. 18, at the home of Miss Linda Peck.

University Women to Hear Talk on Consumer Affairs

MRS. UNA ABRAHAMSON

A talk on Consumer Affairs in Canada will be given at the University Women's Club meeting to be held this Thursday evening by Mrs. Una Abrahamson editor of Consumer Affairs with Chatelaine Magazine.

Mrs. Abrahamson was born and educated in England and married Roy A. Abrahamson (Advertising Manager, Bank of Nova Scotia). Her experience includes working for General Foods as editor-publicist with the responsibility of developing consumer leaflets and books for students and teachers. She was test kitchen manager, Chatelaine Institute for a number of years.

The speaker's interests include antique and book collecting, painting and the theatre. She has written a book "God Bless Our Home," dealing with home life in 19th-century Canada. For the research involved she received a Centennial grant, one of 13 women so honored.

Memberships include: The Women's Canadian Historical Society, North York Historical Society, Niagara Historical Society, Unitarian Service Committee, Elizabeth Fry Society, the Canadian Women's Press Club and the Toronto Home Economics Association.

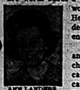
Couple Feel Trapped By Money, Success



ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I started out together, poor but ambitious. After 20 ytars of hard work we are worth about a quarter of a million dollars. But Sam still works as if he had to earn next month's rent. He keeps expanding and getting into more deals when he should be taking life easy and enjoying what we have built.

I always worked in the business with Sam and raised a family, too. It was hard when the children were small but I didn't resent it because he needed me. Now I do resent it because we shouldn't have to work this hard. We've already made it. Sam and I haven't taken a vacation in ten years. Our success has made us slaves to the dollar.

My in-laws keep begging Sam to play some golf or buy a boat but he insists he enjoys his work the way some people enjoy a hobby.

I envy the modest families who have one car, a small house, and have to save all year to take a trip, tourist class. We are trapped by money and success. I feel so frustrated I want to cry. Any recommendations? — RICH BUT POOR.

DEAR RICH BUT POOR: Welcome to the Club. The only line missing from your letter is — "The kids never saw their father when they were growing up."

Your husband is a compulsive worker and there is no known cure for it. But this can be both good and bad. It's good that Sam enjoys his work so thoroughly that he can't pull himself away from it. But it's bad because he is cheating himself and you, too. Please show him the letter which appears below. It might help open his eyes.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I never thought I would write to you but I find now I must. If I can prevent just one person from making the mistake I made it will be well worth the trouble it took to put this letter together. I am not a very good writer.

My wife and I were married 45 years. We both worked hard and made more money than we could ever spend. She begged me to take her on a trip to Europe and other parts of the world we had only read about, but I was always "too busy." We missed weddings and Bar Mitzvahs and other happy family occasions because I couldn't leave the business.

When I reached my 62nd birthday, my wife pleaded with me to retire at least part time. But I wasn't sure anyone could run the company and I stayed on.

She tried again two years ago, but I couldn't see it.

Well, eight weeks ago I buried my wonderful wife and now I suddenly have plenty of time on my hands. The business doesn't seem important at all. When I'm not there things go along just fine. Even better. I realize too late that I made a terrible mistake. Now the money will be enjoyed by our children when it was really my beloved wife who should have had the pleasure from it. — REGRETS.

Kitchen Tested Recipies

All-time Favorite Pancakes

By MARY MOORE

If confession is good for the soul my soul is about to be improved for I goofed. I nearly forgot that Shrove (Pancake) Tuesday was tomorrow and promised to give you here today a recipe for a Chocolate Souffle. Shrove Tuesday is such an appropriate day for soul shrivening.

Do not worry. The Chocolate Souffle recipe will be given tomorrow but today's space has to be devoted to pancakes for those who are going to serve them tomorrow. Since I always expect a lot I hope your little people will be the flapjack flippers.

The recipe is very simple but has held its place at the top of the hit list for over 8 years.

ALL-TIME FAVORITE PANCAKES

1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
3½ teaspoons baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
1 egg, beaten
1¾ cups milk
3 tablespoons melted butter or shortening

Sift flour once, measure, then sift again with baking powder, salt and sugar. Combine egg, milk, butter or shortening and add to dry ingredients. Stir until smooth. Drop by tablespoonfuls (or ¼-cup measure) onto hot griddle. Cook on one side until puffed and full of bubbles. Turn and cook on other side.

For the little people and the bigger ones with small appetites in your family make "dollar" pancakes — little ones about 2" in diameter. For fun you can even let the little children make momentous decisions choosing different sizes. To Marianne's and Margaret's children this selecting is the highlight of Pancake Tuesday.

If you do not have any maple syrup on hand to pour, over your pancakes use corn syrup. OR —

ORANGE BROWN SUGAR SAUCE

Stir together in saucepan ¾ cup light brown sugar, ¼ cup butter or margarine and ½ cup orange juice. Stir over heat only until butter is melted and sugar is dissolved. Remove from heat and serve from pitcher or sauceboat.

Dinner Menu

Meat Loaf with Sliced Cheese Topping; Baked Stuffed Sweet Potatoes; Brussels Sprouts; Crisp Celery, Carrot and Turnip Sticks; Lady Baltimore Cream Cake; Tea.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

The Feb. meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Women's Missionary Society was held in the Sunday School hall.

The president, Miss Luella Burnside welcomed the members and conducted the business period. Reports were given by the various secretaries and notes of appreciation read. Miss Burnside announced that the World Day of Prayer will be held in the Salvation Army Citadel, Victoria Ave., on March 7 and urged all members to attend.

The program was under the leadership of Miss Freida Matthews assisted by Mrs. S. Hay and Mrs. H. Yorke.

Refreshments were served by the group in charge.

Successful Living

Capable Widow Unable to Find Employment

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Until four years ago I was kept busy raising my family; travelling with my husband. The days were just too short. Suddenly my husband passed away. Now, at 50, I am alone, and refuse to believe there is nothing I can do.

Have you tried to find employment lately only to be told, "We want someone more recently employed, one who is more up to date"? When I quit work in 1943 I was assistant bank manager. Courtesy and diplomacy played an important part in my success.

But what can I do besides banking, you may ask? Keeping pace with growing children, becoming an expert seamstress, taking an active part in P.T.A., making a home where my husband could bring a guest at the dinner hour and be sure I was never caught short — I still found time to keep up with world events.

I do not intend to be a burden to anyone while I am still able to do something myself. You see many persons employed today who are over 50 years. — Not Too Sure.

Dear Not Too Sure: What's wrong with updating yourself? Even the Thirties are doing it these days, and we hear of Over-Eighties who take courses in using an electric typewriter, and find jobs.

Life is change; meet life head-on with some wholesale renovation. Appearance counts: look in your mirror and dream up a new hairdo, perhaps including concealment of the tattle-tale grey with a tint. Be sure your lipstick is the kind the girls are using.

If your figure has slipped a little give it a lift. Treat yourself to two new dresses, new style, reasonably new length.

Then off to a counsellor at Canada Manpower to select the kind of updating course which will prepare you for the work waiting for what you have to give.

• • •

Dear Doris: I am going on a train trip shortly and would appreciate any information you could give me on the subject of tipping on trains and at the station. — Tripping and Tipping.

Dear T. and T.: In dining car you tip between 10 and 15 percent of the bill. The sleeping car porter receives around 50 cents per day per person.

If he goes out of his way for you to mail a letter or make a purchase along the way, he should get extra.

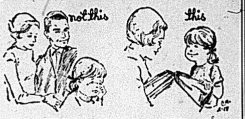
Red caps who carry bags from taxi or ticket wicket to train usually expect 25 cents per bag — but this varies. The thing to do is ask.

Confidential to Older Than My Years: Perhaps you have always dated older fellows, but the calendar — and your physical growth — say you are only 16. Other things come before marriage, like your nursing ambition.

It is always easier to give in to the emotions of the moment; but you show real maturity when you can hold onto yourself and work towards a long-term goal. Better open up the whole subject with John. You both need to know where you are going.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "We had so much stuff to move that I got rid of a lot of the broken toys before we moved. Jenny is fussing because we didn't bring that old doll without any arms."

Father: "I'll get her a new doll tomorrow."

Mother: "Will you help me pack your toys and things?" You can take your doll and your blanket with you in the car and we'll put everything everything else in this big bag. You can put things away in your new room as soon as the moving van arrives."

When you're weeding out for a move, don't be tempted to discard such items as a cherished, battered doll or the security blanket. Familiar possessions will make a move less disturbing to a small child.

Deck Is Stacked Against Boomer

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Bernie Geoffrion was scheduled to return to New York Rangers around St. Valentine's Day but fate—which has been dealing them off the bottom to The Boomer for years —may be stacking the deck all over again.

Geoffrion, who had coached the Rangers into first place in the Eastern Division of the National Hockey League early this season, collapsed Jan. 17 after watching his team skid to the bottom.

His condition was diagnosed as insufficient sugar content in the blood, complicated by flu, the previous removal of most of his stomach because of ulcers, and the pressures of coaching.

Geoffrion drew a three-week rest.

Then the Rangers—with general manager Emile Francis working the bench—won eight of nine games and climbed back to third place.

One of the oldest adages in sport is that you don't break up a winning combination; so it may not be easy for Geoffrion to move back in.

The only thing Geoffrion ever seriously wanted to do was to play in the NHL as long as possible, then become a coach.

Born in Montreal 37 years ago, he learned his hockey in his home town, played junior with Montreal Nationals, then moved directly to the Canadiens in the 1950-51 season.

He packed 175 pounds on a five-foot-nine frame and his vicious shot from the right wing earned him the name Boom-Boom. His 14-year career brought him 393 goals and when he quit after the 1963-64 season, only Gordie Howe, Maurice Richard, Jean Beliveau and Bobby Hull had done better than that.

"I thought I'd have a chance at coaching at Montreal because every year Toe Blake was talking about retiring," he said.

Blake held on, however, and Geoffrion was given Quebec Aces—Montreal's affiliate in the AHL—to coach, bringing them home in front two years in a row.

The Boomer, one of the most popular players ever to play for the Canadiens, was told to take another job if he got an offer.

"They never gave me a reason, so I decided to try to make a comeback as a player," he said at the time.

He signed with the Rangers in 1966 and was the team leader on and off the ice.

Last summer he was named coach and Francis stepped out to concentrate on his other duties.

By that time Blake had stepped out as Montreal coach to move into the club's executive suite.

Geoffrion had become a popular figure in New York, and Montreal had become "just another nice place to visit."

The Boomer may be ready to return by St. Valentine's Day—but will the Rangers be ready to put him back behind the bench?

Ice Show Now Has Become Television Spectacular

NEW YORK (AP) — The televised ice show—safe, soothing family entertainment—used to be simply a performance caught by a camera.

But NBC's Sunday night Ice Capades was turned into a television show by the use of imagination and camera work and thus beemoe one of the handsomest programs of the season.

The basic ingredients, of course, were still there—the skating chorus line, the graceful soloists, the novelty act, the baggy pants comedian. But the sparkling color, in sets and costumes, and the use of light and shadow as well as the use of the non-skating guest stars turned the hour into a gay treat for eye and ear.

One skating production number spoofed the secret agent theme. Another used Nancy Sinatra to model fur fashions while she sang and the skaters whirled around. Louis Nye integrated his comedy routines into the production numbers that followed.

Earlier NBC presented Children's Letters to God, a half-hour special that sprang from a published collection. All sorts of devices were used to illustrate the letters—cartoons, film showing children at play or at school. As one letter—"Dear God, Do you have to eat everything? I hate liver'—was read. the screen showed an unhappy youngster confronted with a plate of health food.

Children's voices were used to read the letters, and cameras eavesdropped on one group drawing a huge mural showing the creation of man. The youngsters' comments and the drawings were both fascinating.

NBC's afternoon Experiment in Television was a frank, bitter drama about the illegitimate son of a black U.S. soldier and a white German girl, who had grown up in Munich.

The story centred on a visit by the boy's American uncle—his father was dead—who found the young man rebellious and unhappy. The American Negro decided to stay in Germany and teach. But he ran into discrimination against skin color so sharp and distasteful that he decided to return to the United States, taking the boy with him.

Recommended tonight: The Bob Hope Show, NBC, 9-10 EST, with Bing Crosby, the Supremes and Martha Raye; Jack Benny's Birthday Show, NBC, 10-11 with Lucille Ball, Dan Blocker and Lawrence Welk.

Movie Column

Ingrid Bergman to Make Comedy

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Her beauty undiminished at 53, Ingrid Bergman is here for her first Hollywood movie in 20 years.

"The last picture was Joan of Arc, and that was a pleasant memory," she recalls.

The two-time Academy Award winner (Gaslight, in 1944, Anastasia, 1956) has returned to Columbia Pictures, where she made Adam Had Four Sons 29 years ago. This time her vehicle is a comedy, The Cactus Flower.

Some observers think it's odd casting for Miss Bergman to be playing the role created by Lauren Bacall in the Broadway version. But she remarked that she almost did the play on the London stage; only the illness of her daughter prevented her.

"And the movie script is somewhat changed from the play," she added. "Our script writer, Mr. I. A. L. Diamond, went back to the French play from which Cactus Flower came. So it is half French and half Abe Burrows."

Burrows wrote the Broadway version.

What about her accent?

"Oh, it is explained in the picture that I am from Sweden," she said, adding with a smile: "In all my pictures here they had to put in some line in the script explaining that I was from the old country. All except For Whom the Bell Tolls. Then it didn't matter because there were so many accents. But none of them Spanish."

Although she has not done a film in Hollywood for two decades, Miss Bergman appeared at the Music Centre last year in the Eugene O'Neill play, More Stately Mansions.

The physical aspects of the town have changed immensely, she commented. But the studios remain the same.

"That's one thing that never seems to change," she said. "You go into a television studio and see the most modern equipment. But in the movie studios they still use the same ponderous cameras, the big lights. They are making films the same way they did 40 years ago.

"One thing is different, happily so. We have three weeks of rehearsal on Cactus Flower. That is something I never had here before.

"When I made Gaslight, I was introduced to Charles Boyer and was told 'Now you will step off the train and kiss him.' And we had only just met!"

Drivers Gamble Lives At Monaco Grand Prix

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

On Sunday, May 18, the good burghers of Monaco will sit at their doorsills and give ear to the crackle of high-performance machinery.

The tang of burning castor oil will caress their nostrils. The roar of a nicely executed downshift will engulf them.

For this is the Grand Prix of Monaco, and this is the way it has been for years. Many of the world's great drivers gambled their lives in some of the world's great cars through the narrow streets of the town built around a casino.

And this is the way it might have been in Toronto. Of course, instead of a casino in the background, the backdrop would have been the roller-coaster, bingo houses and peanut machines of the Canadian National Exhibition.

Instead of narrow, cobbled lanes, the roads to carry the big cars would be the six-lane traffic arteries—closed for the occasion—which normally carry traffic toward Hamilton or, in season, the family to the crush of the CNE.

From these roads, the plan was for the cars to swing onto the curving arteries of the CNE grounds with one stretch booming right through the centre of the playing field used in the fall by Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference.

But it was not to be. Some area residents protested, opposing the scheme on the grounds of traffic congestion and noise, and the proposal was strangled in red tape.

A Toronto bylaw was proposed to permit Lake Shore Boulevard to be closed from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. for practice on the Thursday and Friday before each of the two racing meets scheduled for this summer.

Organizers said their lawyers had advised that provincial approval of the bylaw would be necessary to prevent the possibility of "protracted legal proceedings and possible injunctions."

The province said such approval was not necessary.

The organizers then gave up, asking that third reading of the proposed enabling bylaw not be given, adding they "might rightly be accused of acting in bad faith were we to invite citizens of Metropolitan Toronto to participate in the financing of a venture which . . . might be successfully attacked in the courts."

So the view from the doorsills of the good burghers of Toronto will remain as it has always been in that area—sunset over a polluted lake; and the odors will be those familiar ones of corn-on-the-cob and fish and chips on a summer evening.

And Toronto can return to its other pressing problem—where to place the second-hand statue of Edward VII donated by a public-spirited citizen.

See How They Run To Open Thursday

Finishing touches are now being put to the Belleville Theatre Guild's latest production of its current season—See How They Run.

An uproarious British farce, it will be presented at Centennial Secondary School for three nights, starting Thursday, under the direction of Richard Howard, the Guild's resident artistic director.

The play's title is as descriptive of its effect on audiences as of the onstage action.

So swift is its pace, so involved its situations, audiences traditionally have been left exhausted from laughter as though they had been engaged in the foot race.

In a hilarious tumble of events the plot throws together such characters as an escaped prisoner, an American actress, a spinster who never touches a drop, a sedate bishop, and an army sergeant — all galloping in and out the doors of an English vicarage.

The play's impact comes in the speed with which the variously contrasting characters seek to avoid each other — a pace that reaches its peak only with the final curtain.

The cast of the current productions includes such well-known Guild players as Lois Summerville and Peter Kirtcher, along with a group of newer actors and actresses — including June Lawton, Margery and Richard Midlane Bob Lawton and Bill Butcher.

Habs Pull Even

Ruel's Brigade Bump Beantowners

By SCOTT BUTTON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Gump Worsley is flying again and so are his Montreal Canadien team-mates.

The 39-year-old goaltender, idle for more than a month earlier this season because of bad nerves end an aversino to airplane flight, was at his best Sunday night.

Worsley, who has flown without incident since rejoining the team, gained his third shutout of the season as the Canadiens blanked Pittsburgh Penguins 4-0.

The victory moved the Canadiens into a first-place tie with Boston Bruins in the Eastern Division and stretched their unbeaten streak to seven games.

In other games Sunday, Chicago Black Hawks trounced Boston 5-1, Gordie Howe scored three goals to lead Detroit Red Wings to a 6-3 triumph against Los Angeles Kings, New York Rangers downed Toronto Maple Leafs 4-2, Philadelphia Flyers edged Oakland Seals 3-2 and Glenn Hall helped establish a shutout record as St. Louis Blues blanked Minnesota North Stars 6-0.

Saturday, Montreal took Boston 3-1, Toronto downed New York 6-2, Minnesota crushed Detroit 6-2, Chicago defeated Philadelphia 3-0, St. Louis topped Los Angeles 4-1 and Oakland and Pittsburgh played to a 4-4 tie.

A crowd of 5,882 at Pittsburgh saw Worsley make 3 saves in recording the 38th shutout of his NHL career.

Ralph Backstrom scored two goals for the Canadiens while single goals came from Dick Duff and Yvan Cournoyer. It was Cournoyer's 34th goal of the season, tops on the club.

The Black Hawks, in last place in the Eastern Division, won their second straight in a desperate attempt to squeeze into the playoffs.

Scoring for Chicago were Doug Mohns, Bobby Hull, Jim Pappin, Howie Young and Andre Boudrias. Fred Stanfield connected for the Bruins.

The Bruins, outshot 22-6 in the first period, fell behind 2-0 and never threatened to catch up.

A Chicago gathering of 16,666 saw centre Phil Esposito of Boston, the NHL's leading scorer, held scoreless for the second consecutive game.

The Black Hawks outshot Boston 51-25 to move within one point of fifth-place Toronto. The Bruins still have two games in hand on the Canadiens.

Hall's shutout before 15,906 at St. Louis was his eighth of the season and the 81st of his career. His eight shutouts combined with five by Jacques Plante gives the Blues 13 for the season, tying the team and individual record set by Harry Lumley of Toronto in 1953-54 and matched by Terry Sawchuk and Dave Garthraun of Detroit the same season.

Hall also was credited with an assist on a third-period goal by Terry Crisp when he set up the Blues' forward with a long pass while referee Tom Smith was calling a delayed penalty against Minnesota.

Other St. Louis goals went to Larry Keenan, with two, Ab McDonald, Red Berenson and Jim Roberts as the Blues moved 23 points ahead of runner-up Oakland in the Western Division.

GORDIE HOWE

Gets 18th 'Hat'

It was the second three-goal performance for Howe this season and the 18th of his career. The 40-year-old right winger has 33 goals this season.

Howe's first goal came at 17:05 of the second period and evened the score at 3-3. He scored twice in the final period and Garry Unger once.

Unger and recently-acquired Wayne Connelly picked up first-period goals for Detroit while Los Angeles tallies went to Bill Flett, with two, and Real Lemieux.

A crowd of 13,553 at Detroit saw Roy Edwards replace Roger Crozier in the Red Wings' goal at the start of the final period and make 13 saves, many of them sensational.

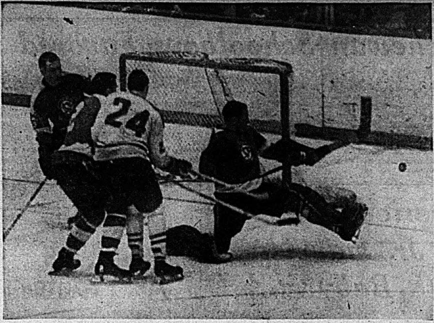
Vic Hadfield and Larry Jeffrey scored in the first period for the Rangers before 17,250 at New York. Jean Ratelle and Dave Balon tallied in the final period for New York, which ended a four-game winless streak.

Toronto goals were scored by Jim Dorey and Floyd Smith.

It was the 23rd goal of the season for Hadfield, the Rangers' top scorer, and the first for Jeffrey, a penalty-killer most of the season. Balon's goal was in an empty net in the final minute.

Defenceman Larry Hale scored two goals for Philadelphia, which broke a nine game winless streak and moved four points ahead of Minnesota in the battle for the fourth and final playoff position in the Western Division.

Andre Lacroix gained the other Philadelphia goal while Ted Hampson and Earl Ingarfield replied for Oakland before 11,104 at Philadelphia.



Penguins Get Plenty Of Hab Visits

Mo-Hawks Finish With a Bang Despite Losing Race for Playoffs

(CP-Staff) — Belleville's Mo-Hawks had the hockey horses — they just didn't get them into the OHA Senior A race soon enough.

The local seniors travelled to Woodstock Sunday, knowing they had lost out in their bid for the eight-team loop's last playoff spot, and won their final game by a convincing 7-3 margin over the last-place "A's".

Kingston put the Mo-Hawks out of their misery with a 6-3 Saturday night home win over Barrie Flyers, who had little to prove after being nudged out of the race for first place by Galt.

In their last nine games the Mo-Hawks collected six wins and a tie, but the late-season success was not enough to balance off a dismal first-half performance.

Lorne O'Donnell led the locals to their 7-3 Woodstock win yesterday, pumping in four goals. Al Ferguson, with a goal and three assists, and George Godson's four helpers made it a banner 12-point day for the recently-formed line.

Playing-coach Davey Jones and John "Shaker" Baker rounded out the Belleville scoring, with Tommy Wilson, Bob Tomchick, and Mac Westgate replying for the A's before 613 fans.

Six teams officially became contenders for Canada's Allan Cup title and will start playoffs later this week as the eight-team OHA senior series drew its 39-game regular schedule to a close.

Woodstock A's, who have one game left Tuesday against Canada's Ottawa-based National team, and Belleville Mo-Hawks were eliminated.

Kingston Aces settled their scrap with Belleville for the sixth and final playoff position Saturday by downing runner-up Barrie Flyers 6-3 before a crowd of 1,274 at Kingston.

Galt Hornets, who held a seven-point edge over Barrie in first place, finish the season with a pair of wins over the fourth-place Oakville Oaks—7-2 at Galt Saturday and 9-4 in Sunday's return game.

Hornets and Oaks drew each other as first-round playoff opponents in a best-of-seven series, with the winner gaining a bye to the finals.

In two other Sunday games, third-place Terriers outscored Collingwood Kings 10-7 at Orillia and Belleville tripped Woodstock 7-3 at Woodstock.

Barrie will play Collingwood and Orillia meets Kingston in best-of-five quarter-final rounds.

Six players shared the scoring Saturday for Kingston, Eddie Long, Charlie Convery, Bob Clayton, John Mercer, defenceman Garfield Ball and Syl Apps Jr.

Dave Ferguson, Jon Weeks and Corby Adams replied for the Flyers.

Ted Talks Big Money

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Star reports that Ted Williams, one of the first $100,000 baseball players, is about to become the first $1,000,000 manager.

The Star says the Washington Senators owner, Bob Short, spelled out the details that lawyers and accountants for both parties are preparing for signatures, by Tuesday if possible.

This is the way it lines up, says Morris Siegal, Star sports writer:

1. A salary of $80,000 a year over a long term—a minimum of five years—according to Short.

2. An option for Williams to buy 10 per cent of the Senators' stock. This would be worth $900,000, based on Short's 100 per cent acquisition of the team for $9,000,000.

Siegal reports Short pointed out that Williams, 50, will continue his $100,000-a-year job as a consultant for Sears Roebuck.

No Claimers ?

CHARLESTOWN, W. VA. (AP) — One lucky, but unidentified, horse race fan placed a $2 bet Saturday night at the Charles Town Raceway and won $28,012.60.

Saturday night's winner had to correctly name, in order of finish, the first two horses in the fifth and seventh races.

Two long shots in the fifth race were the key, Belmong Tommy and Social Salonga, paid $5.80 and $11.80 respectively.

The winning ticket has not been turned in to collect the winnings.

Sudden-death Loss

Trenton Legion Foursome Edged for Title in Playoff

NORTH BAY (CP) — Harvey Chappel's Georgetown rink edged Ron Merriam of Trenton 6-5 in a sudden-death playoff Sunday to win the Royal Canadian Legion provincial curling championship.

The victory advanced Chappel to the Canadian championship starting in Truro, N.S., March 12.

With the score tied 5-5 after eight ends, Chappel blanked the ninth and held the final shot coming home in the 10th. A draw shot to the four-foot circle gave him the victory.

Other members of the winning rink are Doug Ellis, third; Dunc Moneypenny, second; and Pat Chamberlain, lead.

After the ninth draw earlier in the day, Chappel and Merriam edged up with 6-2 non-lost records.

Del Hickling of Highland Creek and Murray MacGregor of Guelph finished the tournament with 5-3 records. Rudy Steski of North Bay, last year's Canadian champion, and Gus Goring of Gravenhurst tied for fifth place with 4-4 records.

Gord MacDonald of Kirkland Lake followed them with a 3-5 record, Mike Fraser of Forest was 2-6 and Bill McIntosh of Pembroke was last with 1-7.

DOES YOUR CAR HAVE CROOKED WHEELS?

According to a recent study, 70 percent of cars on the road have, 25 percent have worn ball joints and a much larger percentage have some worn chassis parts that should be replaced.

In the language of the auto mechanics, crooked wheels become known as caster, camber and toe-in faults — names which fail to give many motorists the faintest idea of what is wrong with their cars. The same holds true for other parts of your car's front end: king pins, bushings and wheel balance on which your riding comfort and safety depend.

Wheel balance is making sure that the weight balance is equal at a given distance from the hub anywhere on the wheel circumference. King pins and bushings are the sockets that hinge the moving arms of the assembly at the front wheels. Steering is the complete linkage of steering mechanism parts.

Caster is the correct setting of the wheels on the hubs to avoid friction. Camber refers to a slant of the wheels outward at the top when the car is unoccupied. When the car is loaded, the weight brings a properly cambered wheel vertical. Toe-in is a degree of angle that brings the front of the tires closer together than the back when they are moving forward.

Incorrect setting in any or all three of these controls will result in excessive tire wear, steering difficulty and safety control.

Striking a curb or a pot hole can cause even a recently-aligned front end to be knocked out of alignment. Frequent inspections will repay you in safety and economy.

Saskatchewan Schoolboys Favored to Regain Rink Honors

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP) — Saskatchewan rinks, which have dominated the Canadian schoolboy curling championship since 1949, rate top position from summaries of past records and highlights of previous tournaments.

Bob Miller of Shellbrook, Sask., hopes to add to the list of nine titles in the 23rd annual competition which begins today.

Eleven rinks, including defending champion Ontario and a Northern Ontario foursome from Fort William, will take part in the five-day round-robin tournament.

Saskatchewan's domination started in 1949 when a Humboldt rink skipped by Jack Thompson took the title at Edmonton.

The province has captured eight other titles and has been the only representatives to claim two undefeated champions, in 1952 when the late Gary Thode of Saskatoon won nine straight in a 10-rink tournament and in 1963 when Mike Lukowich of Speers had a 10-0 record.

The 1952 Saskatoon foursome recorded the only eight-under in the history of the championship.

Alberta has won five titles and Ontario three.

If western rinks, with 17 wins in 22 tournaments, can be considered the strongest, Saskatchewan faces a tough test in the first three draws of the 1969 event.

Miller meets Doug Ryan of St. John's Nfld., in today's first draw, then takes on Ontario skip George Cox of Renfrew in the second, and battles Manitoba skip Bill Henry of Winnipeg in the third round Tuesday.

Ontario, skipped last year by Bill Hope of Trenton, topped Saskatchewan 10-3 in a playoff at Port Arthur, and Manitoba placed third with a 7-3 record. Ontario finished with a 9-2 record and Saskatchewan was 8-3 for second place.

Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Ontario each picked up a bye in Thursday's play, the key to the competition because of the three scheduled draws.

Cox meets John Brady of Bridgewater, N.S., in the opening round, and plays Miller in the afternoon, then Klaude Brouillette of Pointe Claire, Que., and Ron Lehotovaara of Fort William in Tuesday's action.

The rinks arrived here Saturday and took part in a variety of activities Sunday. After practice sessions and opening ceremonies today, the rinks get down to business at the North Battleford Granite Curling club.

The first draw (Northern Ontario has the bye):

Third-period Spree Keeps Jr. Hawks Level With Baby Habs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

St. Catharines scored four third-period goals in the space of three minutes and 49 seconds Sunday night to thrash Peterborough Petes 6-3 and enabling the Black Hawks to keep pace with Montreal Junior Canadiens in the race for first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

The Canadiens struck for three powerp-lay goals in the first period before a crowd of 15,262 at the Montreal Forum en route to a 3-1 win over Niagara Falls.

Montreal and St. Catharines now have 63 points each, but the Canadiens have three games in hand as the two clubs head into the final three weeks of the schedule.

Meanwhile, Ottawa 67s kept a playoff spot alive with their fourth straight win, 8-4, over London Knights. Toronto Marlboros beat last-place Kitchener Rangers 5-2 and Hamilton Red Wings dumped Oshawa Generals 4-1.

Peterborough jumped to a 3-1 lead on goals by Rick MacLeish, Jim Jones and Ken Richardson before the Black Hawks came to life.

Peterborough jumped to a 3-1 lead on goals by Rick MacLeish, Jim Jones and Ken Richardson before the Black Hawks came to life.

Al McDonough, with two goals, defenceman Dick Redmond, Brian McKenzie, Dennis Giannini and Don O'Donoghue scored for the Black Hawks.

Gilbert Perreault, Robert Guindon and Jean-Pierre Bordeleau gave Montreal a 3-0 lead that lasted until 18:22 of the second period when Phil Roberto of Niagara Falls beat goaltender Ted Tucker.

Niagara Falls coach Paul Emms got involved in a fist-fight with a Montreal fan in the final period, delaying the game for about five minutes. Emms and the Flyers needed police escort Jan. 12 at the Forum when they staged a donnybrook with fans behind the Niagara Falls bench.

Pierre Jarry scored two goals for Ottawa as the 67s won their fourth game in five starts against the Knights. Bill Clement, Peter Gaw, Jean and Denis Potvin, Barry Graham and Murray Wilson scored the other Ottawa goals.

Bob Roselle, Neil Nicholson, Brian Chinnick and Dan Maloney replied for the Knights.

Dale Tallon, Frank Hamill, Mike Murphy, Tom Jonston and John French scored for the Marlboros, who moved into sixth place, one point ahead of London.

Dave Cressman and Brian Glenwright got goals for Kitchener which has only eight wins and five ties in 48 games.

Hamilton's win over Oshawa may prove costly. Defenceman Gary Geldart was taken to hospital with a suspected concussion following a first-period collision with Bob Kelly of the Generals.

B. C. Games Dull

Debbie's Peak Meet's High Point

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 15-year-old girl jumping backwards, higher than any girl of her age in the world, put some zip Saturday night into an otherwise dull Achilles indoor track and field games.

Debbie Brill of Langley, B.C., jumped 5-9½ for a Canadian native indoor record, one of a dozen marks set, but most of the 6,062 spectators already had left after disappointing showings.

World records are not kept in age classes, but Miss Brill was 1½ inches ahead of the previous standard for 15-year-olds. She passed the Canadian mark of 5-9 set in 1964 by Dianne Gerace of Trail, B.C.

The meet's big draw, Olympic long jumper Bob Beamon of El Paso, Tex., did not compete. He said he was bothered by a hamstring muscle suffered at a track meet in Toronto Friday.

Olympic 200-metres champion Tommie Smith of San Jose, Calif., ran an effortless 300-metre race and was nipped by Jim Kemp of the United States Army. Both were timed in 36 seconds flat, well off the world mark of 33 9 held by Russian Boris Savchuk.

Bill Gaines of San Jose, three-time U.S. indoor sprint champion established a Canadian open mark in the men's 50 metres in 5.5 seconds, a tenth off his world record.

Stephanie Bertle of Vancouver won the women's 50 metres in 6.3, beating the old Canadian open mark of 6.6, set in 1933 by T. Norton of Toronto and matched in 1960 by Eleanor Haslam of Saskatoon.

Gerry Tiche, another Canadian out of Whitworth College, won the men's 3,000 metres in 8:19.4, a Canadian record. The old mark was 8:24.4 set by Dave Bailey of Toronto in 1968.

The touted men's mile was unimpressive. Ray Haswell of Edmonton won in 4:04.4, with Dave Wighton of Vancouver second in 4:05.1.

Montreal Ski Miss Leading Points Parade

BROMONT, Que. (CP) — Diane Culver, with two victories in the Bromont Cup slalom ski competition during the weekend, has taken the lead in the national points race for the Pontiac Cup.

Miss Culver of Montreal won Saturday's two-run special slalom and the two-run giant slalom Sunday and has 85 points, 35 ahead of Sue Graves of Ottawa.

In the men's division, Mike Culver of Montreal retains his lead with 50 points.

But Neil Baker of Montreal, by virtue of a win in the special slalom Saturday and a second-place finish in the giant slalom Sunday moved into second place with 45 points.

Jim Hunter of the Canadian national B team was runner up in the men's over-all standings and Henry Moser of the Northern Ontario region was third.

Wendy Laughton, southern Ontario zone, finished fifth in the giant slalom behind Miss Culver with a time of 2:22.88.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League traded right-winger Wayne Connelly to Detroit Red Wings Saturday night for right-winger Danny Lawson. The North Stars will receive a player to be named later to complete the deal. It was Minnesota's second trade in two days. The North Stars dealt centre Andre Boudrias and defenceman Mike McMahon to Chicago Black Hawks Friday night for forward Bill Orban and defenceman Tom Reid.

Top 106 Tourney Rivals

QUEBEC (CP) — Princeville, Que., established a few milestones Saturday by winning the grand championship of the 10th annual international peewee tournament.

Princeville reaped the top honor from among 107 teams by defeating Grand'Mere, Que., 3-0 in the nationally-televised final as 15,000 fans crammed the Quebec Coliseum.

The victory marked the first time the championship was won by a Quebec entry and by a Class C team, representing a community with a population of 7,000 or less.

The nine previous titles had been taken by Ontario squads.

Gaetan Boucher sparked the victory with two unassisted goals—his 23rd and 24th in seven tournament games. Earlier Saturday, he scored all six goals in Princeville's 6-2 semi-final win over Pointe Claire, a Montreal suburb team.

Denis Paquet got Princeville's other goal and netminder Rejean Fortier turned aside 17 shots to register the shutout over the Class B Grand'Mere club.

Grand'Mere advanced to the championship by pulling the upset of the tournament in the semi-final playoffs with a 2-0 verdict over class AA Toronto Young Nationals.

In two exhibition games before the final contest, Caughnawaga, Que., trimmed Quebec Indians in the annual Indian exhibition final and Quebec Beavers won the Progression League Trophy with a 4-2 victory over Boston in an annual Canada-United States exhibition clash.

BANNER DAY FOR ROOKIES — Each of the three individual awards for Belleville's Junior B Morrison Realtors went to rookies in the Sunday presentations. From left, winger John McConnell with the Bill Cook Memorial Award for sportsmanship and ability; goalie Paul Hopkins with the Art Culloden - Bill Foster Memorial Trophy (donated by Bobby Hull) as most valuable player; and centre Brian Coughlin with the "Bucky" Ethier Trophy, donated by the Ethier family to the junior rookie-of-the-year.

Morrisons Miss Pair of Chances To Be 'Spoilers' in Junior 'B' Action

STAFF — The Belleville Morrisons missed two opportunities to upset the playoff picture in the six team Eastern Ontario Junior "B" Hockey League over the weekend, when they suffered an 18-2 shellacking in Oshawa Saturday, and a 4-1 home ice loss to the third place Kingston Frontenacs Sunday.

A pair of power play goals by Scott Nicholson, the first one near the midway mark of the second period, and the second near the midway mark of the final period gave Kingston a 3-1 lead in a defensive game which saw Kingston outshoot the Morrisons 30-19.

Nigel Lester opened the scoring for Kingston at 1.37 of the first period, but Belleville got that one back at 11.50 when winger John McConnell, the club's leading scorer, took a pass from Dalton Lambert and beat Kingston netminder Clyde Harris.

Kingston then sewed up the game with Nicholson's pair of power play goals, and added a final marker from the stick of Ron Baker with 17 seconds remaining in the game to disappoint the largest crowd of the season.

The crowd of over 1100 turned out to see a doubleheader which started with the Police - Firemen exhibition tilt to raise money to assist the local junior club.

The day was a financial success for the Morrisons, who have been eliminated from the playoffs, and round out their schedule with a pair of games next weekend.

The Morrisons can still throw a monkey wrench into the playoff plans of their two opponents next weekend though.

Friday night the locals travel to Trenton to tangle with the Golden Hawks, who are tied with Cobourg for the fourth and last playoff spot, while Sunday the Morrisons journey to Peterborough to try and upset the Don Byes' first place visions.

Firemen-Police Benefit Features 'Hugging' Penalties

STAFF — The dessert came before the main course for arena-goers Sunday afternoon, as the city's police and fire departments staged their annual antics-on-ice as a prelude to the Kingston-Belleville junior game.

Today, receipts are being tallied of the proceeds of ticket sales which go towards reducing the perennial Junior "B" deficit, this year in the $2,000 range.

An estimated 1,000 turned out to see the underdog Firemen slapstick their way to a 4-2 win over the men in blue.

Wally Istead's two goals paved the way for the Smokies win, with rookie import Maurice Switzer and "Blond Bob" Lloyd contributing singles. Istead caused a minor incident at the game's outset by protesting the pronunciation of his name over the public address system. (It varies from "Bumstead" to "Olmstead.")

For the Bobbies, both goals came from the stick of former Belleville Mo-Hawk Bob McAlpine, who played 61 minutes of the hour-long contest.

The policemen's "Roundhouse Ralph" Blatchford and Fred "Soapy" Smith of the redmen staged a last - period "brawl that drew each combatant "hugging minors.

Only quick intervention by CN policeman Bill Royea prevented a further eruption in the penalty box.

Each member of the firemen's hockey brigade found a subpoena awaiting him in the dressing room following the farcical fixture.

Two Shutouts Win Tourney For Novices

Netminder Bruce Hamilton scored a pair of shutouts Saturday as Towers Food City captured the Prescott Invitational Novice Hockey Tournament with a 3-0 win over Cornwall and a 2-0 whitewashing of Gatineau Point.

Bobby Thompson's outstanding defensive play won him a hockey stick in the win over Cornwall, while Tony Meagher with a pair of goals and Bobby Crawford with a singleton accounted for the Food City scoring.

Visitors Dominate Tournament

Orillia Captures Hoop Crown

STAFF — The calibre of play at Saturday's fourth annual Belleville Collegiate Midget Basketball Tournament was surprisingly high, but unfortunately it was the visiting teams which played the best basketball.

The undefeated squad from Orillia Collegiate showed why it was so highly rated when it swept aside four opponents to capture the championship in the 16-team tournament.

Orillia defeated Oshawa Central 30-21 in the first round, Cobourg West 47-18 in the second round, Anderson Collegiate of Whitby 61-35 in the championship semi-final, and Donovan Collegiate of Oshawa 49-34 in the championship game.

Frank Curtis, a 6'2" centre, rebounded well and scored 12 points in the championship game, while Orillia's two guards, Steve Church and Bob Smith contributed 11 points apiece.

Centennial Secondary School of Belleville reached the consolation semi-final, but were trounced 56-15 by Oshawa Central, who captured the consolation title with a 38-19 win over Cobourg East.

Centennial entered the consolation round, after a 57-32 defeat at the hands of Quinte Secondary School in the opening round, and dumped Trenton 38-14 before losing out to the powerful Oshawa Central squad.

Quinte suffered a 50-38 loss to Anderson Collegiate of Whitby in the second round, while Moira defeated Norwood 38-28 in the first round, but were eliminated with a 43-35 second round loss to Donovan of Oshawa.

Nicholson Catholic College of Belleville nipped Cobourg East 42-41 in the first round and BCI 27-23 in the second round, but dropped a 40-26 decision to Donovan and suffered elimination in the championship semi-final.

Orillia's title win ended a three year reign by Belleville schools. Host BCI won the title the first two years, while Centennial captured the championship in last year's tournament.

Late Basket Sparks Napanee to Overtime Win

STAFF — Henry Dornekamp's clutch basket with just ten seconds remaining in regulation time Friday night forced the first overtime game of the year in a Class "AA" high school senior contest between Napanee and Quinte.

Dornekamp's basket tied the score at 44-44, and gave the Golden Hawks the momentum to score a 56-50 overtime win, which enabled them to take over sole possession of second place in the seven-team league.

A 25-point night by Bob Cook paced the Napanee squad, while Jim Stewart threw in 15 points for the winners and Henry Dornekamp contributed nine points.

nighthuz uci

Leo Baker with 15 points, John Mywaart with 12 and Eric Emerson with ten were the high scorers for the fourth place Saints.

Quinte hoopsters had little trouble in avenging the senior loss though, as they scored easy wins in the other two games. The junior Saints triumphed by a score of 64-32, and the midgets defeated Napanee 49-31.

The third-place junior Saints grabbed an 11-7 first-quarter lead and were never headed as Stan Brooks threw in 17 points. Easton netted 12 and Kirkham added eight. Dave Finlay's 13 points and Rob Madden's nine point effort were tops for Napanee.

The league-leading BCI seniors resumed their winning ways Friday night with a 63 39 victory over the Trenton Tigers during the Collegians three-game sweep of visiting Trenton teams.

BCI's second place juniors moved two points closer to the league-leading Moira Trojans with a 69-33 win over the Tigers, while the Collegian midgets stayed atop the seven-team league with a 64-31 win, their seventh in a row.

Ken Richardson's 21 points led the senior Collegians back on the winning trail after a mid-week loss to Quinte, which was the first defeat of the season for the defending Bay of Quinte champions.

Brent Gallupe and David Wright, who pair up at the forward spots for the junior Collegians, sparked the win over Trenton with 18 and 17 points, respectively.

Minors Win Two from Trenton

STAFF — A pair of Belleville minor hockey all-star teams provided local hockey fans with something to cheer about Sunday as they trounced Trenton in the first round of the Ontario playdowns.

Belleville Western Tire juveniles defeated Trenton 8-5 to capture their best two out of three series in two straight games, while Smith Fuels peewees, the defending Ontario champions, opened their similar series with a 10-2 drubbing of their Trenton counterparts.

Reid Mallory and Bob Mulvihill fired a pair of goals each to pace the Western Tire attack, while single goals came from the sticks of Bob Beecher, Cal Wilson, Garnet Hopkins and John Hill.

Steve Kirby and Ricky Culkin scored three goals each for the Smith Fuels squad, while Roger Chapman, Scott James and Mike and Peter Crawford tallied single goals for the winners.

Bantams Clean House In Winning Cornwall Title

CORNWALL (Special) — Belleville's Kinsmen Bantams came home from a weekend invitational tournament here with just about everything but the kitchen sink.

First off, the Kinsmen took the "A" class championship in the 24-team tourney, downing Camp Borden 5-4, Ottawa Warriors 6-0, Oshawa 3-2, and thrashing Brampton 10-3 in the final.

Then Danny Lupenette, who scored seven goals — (at least once in each of the four Belleville games) — was awarded the tournament's most valuable player trophy. Lupenette who counted a pair of goals and five assists in the 10-3 championship game — was selected as first star in three of the four games, and as second star in the other.

A team award for sportsmanlike play also had to be lugged home by the Kinsmen, and Bob Ricketts carted off the tourney's top coaching trophy.

DANNY LUPENETTE
Bantam Standout

The only thing the bantams couldn't apparently win — by virtue of being outnumbered — was the pony door prize.

But they did, indirectly.

Defenceman Wally Dainard's mother, Mrs June Dainard, had her ticket drawn for the four-legged booty.

Scoring for the Kinsmen in their first game against Camp Borden were Lupenette (2), John Mulvihill, Dave Smith, and Andy Ricketts. Ricketts, Mark Coates, Lupenette, Smith, Goegan, and Mulvihill contributed goals against Ottawa, with Bruce Clark recording the 6-0 shutout.

A pair by Lupenette and Dave Smith's single were enough to get the Kinsmen by Oshawa 3-2 in the semi final.

Saving all his scoring for one game, Russ Harrington popped in four goals to pave the way for the Kinsmen 10-3 championship win over Brampton. Lupenette, with two, Mulvihill, Smith Cousins, and Coates rounded out the scoring.

SURPRISE! THE BIRDIE IS WATCHING YOU

What was the world really like in the early centuries? We have to depend upon the artists of long ago for pictures of what life in general and people were like. The first cameras became popular in the 19th century, and people have been saying "Cheese" by the millions ever since.

If someone just gifted you with a new camera, don't throw your old one in the closet. — Someone is reading The Intelligencer Want Ads today with a good used camera in mind. Help him and you.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were mixed in moderate mid-morning trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today.

The industrial index slipped .04 to 193.00. However, gains in all sections outnumbered losses by more than two to one.

Levy Industries rose 1 to 36¼. National Containers ¾ to 14¼. James United Steel ¾ to 15¼ and Shully's Industries ¾ to 21¼.

Among the most active traders, Dylex Diversified was up 2 to 39¾ and Van Ness 47½ cents to 5⅝.

On the downside, Domtar and Imperial Tobacco lost ¼ each to 13¾ and 13⅝.

Trading was delayed in First National Uranium Mines to match orders. The company said it is acquiring Lucaya Construction Co. Ltd. of Freeport, Bahamas.

The stock closed Friday at $2.45, up 15 cents.

There was also a trading delay to match order in McAdam Mining, which closed Friday at $1.70, up 47 cents.

Price Co. picked up ⅛ to 15¾. The company reported a decline in annual earnings.

Among western oils, Banff gained ¼ to 14⅛, Charter Oil ¼ to 14¼ and National Pete 15 cents to $8.95. Spooner lost 10 cents to $6.70.

Ranger was up ¼ to 12 after reporting higher annual earnings.

On index, golds advanced 1.28 to 244.59, base metals .14 to 120.90 and western oils .48 to 245.13. Volume by 11 a.m. was 1,106,000 shares compared with 1,440,000 at the same time Friday.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

Parent-child Relationships Today Can Cause Anxiety

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Tranquilizers! Sold and dispensed by the hundreds of thousands. This has been called the Age of Anxiety. Why? Is it all due to fear of the bomb? Due to trying to live up to the Joneses? To fear of illness? To illness itself?

According to a letter recently received, there is another reason: the poor relationship between parent and child.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: There are so many kinds of parents and children in this world. Some with, and many without, thoughtfulness for each other.

I am 52 and can now clearly see the picture. While my mother lived I did all the small attentive things regularly. Not out of a sense of duty, but out of love. In those days it was not necessary for any of us to take sedatives or tranquilizers to get through the maturing year.

Now things are different. I have married children away from home and two very near the grown-up stage. I have given them all the loving care and advantages possible. Nevertheless I have been on sedatives and sleeping pills for several years to be able to keep going. Why? Because of the lack of respect and heartbreak that I am enduring. Only material things and the social whirl are predominant in the minds of our children.

If in need, they come to Mom and Pop. Otherwise, they do not follow the precepts of their rearing, and we are the last thought in their minds. There seems to be a need for an awakening of respect and love and care that was natural in past generations.

We do not want to live our children's lives for them, nor take away their social lives but so many of us have been so crushed and left out almost to the point of complete despondency, we sometimes wonder why we ever had these children. I feel sure it has driven many parents to drink and tranquilizers and caused their premature death because of such lack of sympathy, care and respect. — Mrs. F.

I have often noted that tension is the cause of many of our ailments; or at least aggravates those we already have. One of modern day's obstacles is the continual race against the hands of the clock. We get into trouble when we try to crush 28 hours into a 24-hour day.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I hope my experience with migraine headache will help a few of your many readers. During the first 10 years of my marriage I had migraine headaches quite often, and suddenly I realized why. Whenever I got a migraine headache it was on a day when I got involved in too many things. I probably washed clothes in the morning, had a doctor's appointment at 1:00 p.m., then rushed back to take the clothes down, dashed to the market, fixed dinner and tried to be ready for a club meeting by 7:30 p.m. On a day like that I was lucky if I made it to the club meeting because the tension I was under from rushing, rushing, rushing usually produced a migraine.

Actually, what at last cured me was learning to slow down. I no longer get involved in fighting the clock all day. I never let myself get "pressed for time." Believe me, this treatment is better than medicine.

Comment: Amen.

Student Mayors Honored

The five local high school students who during the past month have taken turns serving as "Mayor of the Week" will be presented with mementoes in recognition of their interest.

At this afternoon's city council meeting Mayor J. Russell Scott will present cuff links to the three boys and broaches to the two girls. The cuff links and broaches carry the city crest.

During the period in which each student served as "Mayor of the Week," they attended all council meetings, and accompanied Mayor Scott as he carried out his daily civic duties.

SPRINGBROOK UCW

Mrs. G. McFaul convener of christian education was in charge of the program assisted by Mrs. Sam Downer and Mrs. H. Haslett who played the accompaniment for the hymns, when Springbrook UCW held its regular meeting in the church hall.

Mrs. Joe Thompson was in charge of the mission study based on China. She showed a film and gave a most informative talk, after which a discussion took place dealing with the similarities and contrasts of China today. Mrs. William, UCW president, expressed thanks to the committee.

Reports were given by the secretary, the treasurer and the visiting committee chairman.

The president also spoke briefly on the annual meeting in Picton which she had attended and reminded the members of the World Day of Prayer on March 7.

Hostesses Mrs. O. Barton and Mrs. D. Fleming served lunch and a social time was enjoyed.

North Bay Is Playing Host To 'Best Trappers in World'

NORTH BAY (CP) — Want to learn how to skin an otter, catch a marten, or boil a pot of tea in the middle of a snowshoe race?

Come to the Ontario Trappers Association's annual convention which opened here Saturday. More than 300 trappers are attending the sessions, giving demonstrations of trapping and skinning. In between, they attend meetings and banquets.

To the association president, Lloyd Cook of Barrie, the convention is becoming more of a success each year.

"We've got the best trappers and the best fur auction anywhere in the world," said Mr. Cook who along with other association executives wears a mink bow tie.

Fur buyers from all over the world come to North Bay for the auctions and Mr. Cook says even countries from behind the Iron Curtain are interested.

"The association expects to sell more than $2,250,000 worth of pelts this year," he said in an interview.

Alex Shieff, manager of the association's fur sales, said the figure 10 years ago was $375,000. "There's no doubt that we are becoming the fur trade centre of Canada, if not the world."

The convention started Saturday with an unusual snowshoe race. Contestants ran 90 yards, skinned a muskrat, boiled a pot of tea, then ran back.

Beaver are returning up to $55 a pelt and averaging about $21. Otter average $40, mink $18, marten $6, red fox $15, lynx $28 and muskrat about $1.

Windsor University Chaplain Calls Procedure Not Normal

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A United Church chaplain and lecturer Sunday charged University of Windsor administration with distorting the truth about the dismissal of Dr. William Kelly, a theology lecturer.

Dr. Vernon E. McEachern told a student meeting called to discuss student occupation of part of the university's administration block—which began six days ago—that an administration news release reporting the details of Dr. Kelly's dismissal "distorted the truth and calls into question the integrity of the administration."

It was Dr. Kelly's release that prompted the occupation of the university's theology and classics departments and part of the psychology department last Tuesday by 55 students.

Dr. McEachern said the news release gave the impression normal university procedure was followed in releasing Dr. Kelly. In fact, he said, Rev. Eugene Malley, head of the theology department, made the decision and other members of the faculty were afraid to disagree.

Another professor, Rev. John Lee of the sociology department, told the meeting of about 60 students a department head is a "benevolent dictator" with veto power over the whole department.

He said the occupying students' demand for a voice in decision-making amounts to removing full power from department heads.

Several students spoke against the occupation, saying it was damaging the university's image and hindering fund-raising.

Saturday, the demonstrators received a visit of sympathy from Canada's youngest MP.

Lorne Nystrom, 22, New Democratic member for Yorkton-Melville, toured the occupied area before a speaking engagement.

He said he sympathuzed with

He said he sympathized with representation and found them acting in an orderly and democratic way.

"The thing to be learned here is when the regular channels of democracy have failed there is no alternative but to take other action."

In a referendum Wednesday, students will be asked to support the demands for equal representation on campus decision-making bodies; open decision-making meetings; the reinstatement of Dr. Kelly, if he wishes to remain and an amnesty for the demonstrators.

Strictly Personal

New Quality About Youth

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

What is distinctively "new" about the new generation is not simply its youth, or the mere fact that it is later in time, as a car is "new" if it is this year's model compared with last year's or the year before.

There is a qualitative difference in young people, not just a temporal difference. And this quality can best be described, in Maslow's term, as "self-actualizing."

If you cannot understand this, then you cannot understand what young people are thinking and feeling and desiring and groping toward. "Self-actualizing" means becoming who you are. It is the highest and final step in human development, and it has become possible for many people only in recent times.

The human personality has certain basic biological needs that must be satisfied — hungers that must be fed, fears that must be allayed, physical demands that must be gratified.

After this, there are certain social and emotional demands made on, and by, the personality — for learning, for status of some kind, for group identification, for survival and support as a social being. These earliest and "lower" needs must be at least adequately met before the individual can concern himself with other levels of being.

"Self-actualization" is what the person wants to become with himself, not as a biological creature or as a unit in the mechanism of his society, but in the very core of his personal existence — so that his particular life has point and purpose and gives expression to values that are more than biologically or culturally determined.

In most societies of the past, there has been little chance to do this, or even to think about it very much; the struggle for mere physical existence was so intense and protracted that the individual organism fought all its lifetime for mere survival and equilibrium. Its higher, and distinctive, needs were necessarily subordinated to its primitive demands for life, for a kind of liberty, for a measure of security.

It is no accident that the most questioning and dissident youths today come from whose "future" within the framework of conventional society seems most assured. They do not want to fit into a mould, do not want to accept the values of their metier, do not want to become like their parents or their parents' friends.

They are asking that our affluent society provide more than a plenitude of material goods; that it open new vistas for the realizing of individual potentialities, not in the economic realm, but in the realm of moral values, sensory experiences, creative expression. Their tactics are childish, but their ends mature.

Today Bent Car Frames Can Be Safely Mended

A reader writes:

"My husband owns a '67 Ford pick-up truck and in a recent front end collision the frame was badly bent. Naturally, the body men want this job and assure us that the frame can be straightened and reinforced so that it is better than new. We have our doubts about this and your unbiased opinion would help us decide whether to repair the truck or take a cash settlement which would cost us quite a bit in depreciation. This vehicle carries an eleven foot camper which weighs about 2300 pounds, hence the concern as to whether this frame can be straightened properly". Mrs. G. F.

We sometimes hear it said that once a frame has been badly bent it is impossible to restore it to the original specifications and as a result the vehicle cannot be aligned properly. This may have been true many years ago, but with today's modern equipment and providing the technician using it is well trained, conscientious and willing to guarantee his work, a frame must be badly mutilated before it is beyond repair. If a reputable frame specialist has examined the damaged frame and recommends straightening and reinforcing it, I would be guided by his advice.

During my thirty years in the garage business I saw hundreds of frames successfully repaird. However, frame straightening is highly specialized and, if not done properly, among other things the steering can pull left or right, the tire treads may wear rapidly, or the vehicle can appear to be moving sideways (Sometimes referred to as dog-tracking) as it moves along the roadway.

But collision is not necessarily the only way in which a frame can become damaged. Some years ago while checking out a used car I discovered dozens of minute cracks in the frame that had been roughly welded and camouflaged with black paint. Apparently the car had been driven in the country at excessively high speeds for thousands of miles on washboard gravel roads and the millions of cycles of vibrations eventually took their toll. After a few weeks of driving the cracks spread to such a degree that repairs were impossible and the car wound up in the wreckers.

A reader writes:

"I drive a 1964 Chevrolet six cylinder which I have owned since new. About 18 months after I bought it, it was necessary to replace the radiator pressure cap. About two years later it failed again and now I am told that another one is needed. I watched each time they were tested and they definitely would not hold pressure. I'm tired of spending money on these devices but when I refused to replace the last defective cap the mechanic said a faulty cap would damage the engine. I have been driving for forty years and prior to the late thirties the cars seemed to get along fine without pressure caps. Do pressure caps really serve a useful purpose, or are they just another gadget to spend money on?"

Most new cars today are equipped with a sixteen pound pressure cap, but few motorists are aware of the important role played by the radiator pressure cap. It's true that years ago cars were not filled with pressure caps, but modern pressurized cooling systems are far more efficient and called upon to work much harder. Today's engines are most powerful and travel at higher speeds. Modern design has tended to make the radiator smaller and as a result it must cool faster.

Every pound increase in pressure that the cooling fluid is under increases the boiling point by about 3 degrees. Therefore, with a sixteen pound pressure cap, the coolant will not boil until it reaches something like 260 degrees F. instead of the normal 212 degrees when not under pressure. While few of us are aware of it, frequently in hot weather when bogged down in heavy traffic our engines are operating away above the normal boiling point at atmospheric pressure. Under heavy load at high speed the exhaust valves can actually turn cherry red and this heat is dissipated through the valve seats in the head or block. If not under pressure the coolant can turn to steam in this area, resulting in extreme temperatures that can crack a valve seat. The pressure cap should be tested twice a year or whenever there is evidence of overheating. Special equipment is needed to make this test and a defective cap should be replaced immediately.

NOTE: Letters [illegible] readers with hard to pin-point car problems are most welcome, but please include: year and model, number of cylinders, mileage, standard or automatic transmission, power equipment, brief outline of previous repairs and a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For February 18

Your birthday today: It is time to gather your forces for changes, but not time yet to start using them. Much planning is necessary first, many clarifications. Romantic interests tend to be more successful than business. Today's natives usually are both practical and thoughtful, and many famous for charm.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Correspondence comes alive with good news. Associates come up with surprises and much more fortunate ideas. The day should be busy and profitable, but quit early for extra rest.

TAURUS (Apr. 20— May 20): Versatility shows in you today as you pursue your regular career. Short trips turn out much better than you might have expected from yesterday's impediments.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Press reasonable negotiations for settlements. Creative methods pay off, likewise dealings with distant people or long-range movements. Don't be surprised if you have to talk the family out of (temporary) resistance.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): News from distances is sketchy and therefore may be disconcerting. Instead of allowing yourself to be upset, get busy with what is close at hand. Everything turns out for the best.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): There 's a subtle undercurrent concerning legal affairs while you carry on with charm and jovial hospitality. Plan a surprise for your loved ones this evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Your temper is the least helpful factor today. This puts you pretty much in charge of what happens; you don't have to display it indiscriminately. An odd turn of circumstance does pop up, so be prepared with an alternative course.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Today you act on impulse and disrupt all regular plans. If you happened to be on a thoroughly wrong course of action originally, this may get you back on the right track.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Secret work proceeds at a furious pace while you preserve a money matters are better settled promptly now, without further haggling.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Help arrives from unexpected sources, from people you had thought of as authorities rather than fellow workers. Act at once on any special information that comes for your personal advantage.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Everybody around you is all full of vigor and ready to use it. Get things organized promptly and let them help you. Brief travels, negotiations seem simple, but avoid shortcuts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your new plans override habits based on your former situation, so that some homebodies may become confused momentarily. Novel ideas fill life today.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Your energies are readily available for full use. Where you must decide quickly or move promptly, let your intuition select the simplest course.

Labor Complains More Attention Paid to Prices Than Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress today accused the government of pursuing policies designed to moderate prices rather than maintain full employment and urged a commitment to comprehensive economic planning.

The 1,600,000-member organization made the point in its annual submission to the government on problems facing the country.

The 8,750-word brief took its hardest swipe at the economic situation. But it also prodded, cajoled and recommended in the areas of housing, social legislation, bilingualism and biculturalism, human rights, international affairs, natural resources and broadcasting.

Labor legislation came in for only a passing reference, mainly because the report of the federal commission on labor relations has not been released. The brief said there "appears to be some hesitancy" in releasing the report and urged its publication.

On the economy, the CLC said:

"It is our belief that the most essential ingredient in the development of meaningful policies is a commitment on the part of government to the need for comprehensive economic planning."

The 1968 economic performance was paradoxical—while the growth rate fell below the level recommended by the Economic Council of Canada, there were signs of strength such as the doubling of the commodity trade surplus.

Economic developments prompting most concern were prices and unemployment. Prices rose by 4.1 per cent in 1968 and unemployment reached 4.9 per cent of the labor force with some 373,000 jobless.

Certain government decisions served to aggravate the situation. The two-per-cent tax increase would have a deflationary impact and cancellation of the winter works program would lead to worsening of seasonal unemployment.

"It thus forces us to the conclusion that your government has shown a far greater predilection of pursuing policies designed to moderate prices than it has for those designed first to achieve and then maintain full employment."

New economic initiatives were needed to eliminate poverty, encourage regional growth and develop the North. ". . . an all-out attack on the problem of poverty in Canada is overdue."

Other major points made by the CLC:

Housing — The recently-released federal housing report offered some "completely inappropriate recommendations and a few of them offered immediate aid in the most urgent areas.

"The most surprising and objectionable is that no new, large public-housing projects should be undertaken until the federal government has completed a thorough research project. . . ."

Social Legislation—A thorough review of the social security system is needed to determine its adequacy; possibly a royal commission should conduct it.

The government, far from moving toward expanded and improved social legislation, "seems actually bent on halting any further developments."

Bilingualism and Biculturalism—the CLC supports the proposed bill to make English and French the official languages within the federal administration and courts but "we seek assurance that it will be fairly administered."

International Affairs—There is a fear that Canada has acted "too slowly and given too little." Canadians could wield a special type of influence in various parts of the world. Arms sales to the U.S. for use in Vietnam should cease and external aid contributions should be increased to one per cent of the gross national product.

Welfare Programs Antiquated

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Welfare programs are antiquated and have little effect on the reduction of poverty in Canada, an educational conference of the Ontario Federation of Labor was told Sunday.

Dr. Wilson Head, a director of the Metropolitan Social Planning Council said the welfare field is a haphazard collection of unrelated, unco-ordinated and disjointed voluntary and public programs.

The poor are casualties of the highly-competitive, economic and social system in which they cannot meet the demands for effective social functioning. Their welfare payments provide only funds enough to keep body and soul together.

Dr. Head said that a redistribution of Canada's wealth and productive capacity could assure a decent standard of living for all and permit a scrapping of the welfare system.

U of T Students Pick Own Subjects

TORONTO (CP) — The University of Toronto senate has approved a program that will give arts and science students at the university freedom to choose any course they want providing they take at least five a year.

About 4,000 students now in first year and about 4,500 expected to enrol in September will be affected this year while similar changes for third and fourth years will be introduced in 1970, a spokesman said.

The plan means students can take 20 unrelated subjects during a four-year program although the senate expects students will concentrate on their favorite subject.

Entrance requirements remain the same but students will receive a bachelor of arts degree after three years.

Students with a 70-per-cent third-year average will qualify for a fourth year and an advanced degree.

The Senate abolished a two-year pre-medical course, replacing it with a medical college admission test.

Students may write the test after two years in an undergraduate arts and science course provided they have studied physics, biology or zoology and chemistry.

Indians Moving Toward Militancy

TORONTO (CP) — The drive of Canada's minority Indian population for equal rights with the white population is developing into a militant movement, the Canadian conference of social work students was told Sunday.

Fred Kelly of Kenora, Ont., said:

"The Indian is given no rights now. We are demanding our rights; we're not asking for them. We want to control our own destiny."

Mr. Kelly, with his brother Peter and Wilfred Peltier of Toronto's Rochdale College, spoke during a panel discussion on minorities. The panel attracted an audience of more than 150, one of the largest to attend a single discussion session during the three-day conference.

He said the Indians also were moving towards a form of coalition with other minority groups such as the Negroes to develop a "uniformity of cause."

Terming those Indian leaders who urge a go-slow policy in effecting social change "Uncle Tomahawks," Mr. Kelly said there was not yet a co-ordinated leadership in the movement but it was on the way.

He said Indians demand establishment in Toronto of an Indian school for social change and scrapping of the federal Indian affairs branch. He would replace the branch with a Crown corporation staffed by Indians.

He said the church has "done more damage to the Indian community than any other single group." He did not elaborate.

Warrants For Spying Advocated

TORONTO (CP) — Electronic spying by police should be controlled in the same way that the right of civil search is limited through court warrants, Toronto Conservatives were told Saturday.

Stanley M. Beck, a law professor at Osgoode Hall, said electronic eavesdropping by private organizations also should be controlled by making the use of such equipment a crime.

He told a seminar meeting of the Metropolitan Toronto Progressive Conservative council:

"Control the use of electronic devices by police and make the use by anyone else a crime and police will control their use by private individuals."

He said the federal government should change the Criminal Code so that a senior police official would have to get a warrant for electronic search by application to a provincial attorney-general.

A HOME OF YOUR OWN - by ROLLINS

FINISHING THE INTERIOR ...

As we rejoin Charlie and Ethel, Charlie is filling his friend Sid in on all the details about his Rollins 'Self Help' home. Sid really liked the financial end of it — No Down Payment, Convenient Terms and Payments lower than most rental payments. Now he wanted to know what was involved in finishing the interior.

Well, this was the part Charlie really liked to talk about. He and Ethel were proud of the work they did on the interior of their house. Rollins supplied them with the best in materials, making the job that much easier. The staff at Rollins really helped in making sure they had everything they needed so there wasn't a lot of running back for more materials.

A HELPING HAND ...

Then the work started. Charlie and Ethel took their time and tried to do everything right the first time to avoid any extra expenses. Not being professionals they naturally ran up against a few problems. This is where Rollins really provided a "Helping Hand". On their staff are experts in every facet of the building business and they were always there to give sound advice. As a result Charlie discovered that it wasn't really very difficult after all —

This Bellevillian has a novel way to travel. When George Zachariah wants to take a short cut along the Bay of Quinte, he merely bicycles along the shoreline. It can save as much as 10 minutes on a trip to Bayside, he claims.

Montreal Court Closed to Public

MONTREAL (CP) — Tight security measures were in force for the opening today of preliminary hearings of Sir George Williams University students and sympathizers involved in a spree last week that caused an estimated $2,000,000 damage to the university.

The public was denied entrance to the municipal court where hearings were to be held for the 90 adults charged with conspiracy to commit arson and destroy property.

Seven others, juveniles under 18 years of age, are scheduled to appear in social welfare court Wednesday for hearings on similar charges.

Reporters were warned to show their credentials to one of three police officers on duty at the building's main entrance. No photographers were allowed on the premises. Tape recorders were banned.

With the exception of one woman, who became ill and was released temporarily, all those arrested remained in detention until today's appearance in court. They were denied bail at arraignment.

The Montreal police department's 150-man riot squad was ordered to guard the courthouse against possible demonstrations.

The university administration announced Monday that students arrested in last week's rampage have been suspended from all classes until the outcome of their hearings is known.

A joint student-faculty statement says that the university "faces attack from self-proclaimed revolutionaries, as well as proponents of reaction, both of whom would destroy this university and its values."

The university's Engineering Students' Association also called for the immediate expulsion of "students found guilty of the charges levied against them."

Winter Park Beautification

Winter's frost can be used for park beautification as well as summer flowers. Proof of this is the above frozen fountain at Colborne, 30 miles west of Belleville. The park fountain is left running during the winter and the ever growing ice castle is floodlighted to provide a day and night park attraction.

Biafran Wounded Flown to Europe

COTONOU, Dahomey (Reuters) — Forty-seven severely wounded Biafrans, including 37 soldiers, were flown here today by the International Red Cross from the Uli airstrip in Biafra.

They later left aboard a Rd Cross DC-7 for a European destination. Many lost limbs or suffered facial injuries. They will receive orthopedic treatment and plastic surgery in hospitals in Switzerland, France, Italy, Denmark and Norway.

Dr. Sjouke Bakker, a Dutch doctor who accompanied them from Uli, said there were about 50 badly injured patients waiting to be flown out of Biafra as soon as European hospitals could take them.

He told reporters federal Nigerian planes often bombed hospitals in Biafra and doctors were overwhelmed with work.

Three Red Cross supply flights had to turn back Monday night without landing at the Uli airstrip, because the unloading area was being bombed from the air.

TORONTO (CP) — The captain of a Canadian aircraft flying supplies into Biafra charged Monday that a Nigerian gunboat fired at his plane when it was over international waters, 20 miles off the coast of West Africa.

Capt. J. S. Patterson of Montreal told a news conference that the Canairelief Super Constellation aircraft was not damaged during the attack, but received bomb shrapnel damage in an air attack on the Uli landing strip in Biafra Feb. 9.

Capt Patterson and his crew are in Canada while their aircraft is being repaired in France. He said he and his seven crew members would return to the island of Sao Tome this week to resume relief flights.

Berlin Autobahn Traffic Slowed

BERLIN (AP) — East German border guards halted traffic through West Berlin's main entrance to the autobahn for two hours today, then began letting cars through again, West Berlin police reported.

There was a possibility that snow conditions were responsific through the Babelsberg checkpoint, West Berlin's main entrance to the express highway to West Germany. —

Deseronto Men Fined, Shot at Dog

Fines of $100 were imposed on two Deseronto men charged yesterday with wounding a dog by gunfire.

The fines were imposed on Allen Wayne Brant, 19, and Ronald Laverne Claus, 18, when they appeared before provincial judge George Runciman in Belleville.

Provincial police testified the two had shot a dog in the neck and leg with .22-calibre rifles as they crossed a farmer's land near Deseronto.

De Gaulle Boycotts Meeting

LONDON (AP) — President de Gaulle's boycott of the Western European Union threw a new storm over the Continent today, less than a week before President Nixon's visit.

In the latest manoeuvre of de Gaulle's little cold war with Britain, France withdrew Monday from the council of the WEU, the seven-nation organization that provides the only forum in which Britain and the six nations of the Common Market can discuss co-operation. The council meets twice a month.

Some commentators regarded the confrontation between France and Britain as a deliberate building for the U.S. president's visit.

For France, it underlines de Gaulle's determination to lead Western Europe, to show Nixon that Western Europe cannot move without Paris, and to warn Nixon not to push for Britain's entry into the Common Market.

For Britain, it demonstrates that Britain enjoys the support of France's five Common Market allies.

Britain Rejects Smith Plan

LONDON (CP) — A British government minister Monday rejected the constitution proposed by rebel Premier Ian Smith for Rhodesia, announced in Salisbury last week.

Maurice Foley, under secretary for commonwealth affairs, told a questioner in the House of Commons:

"No constitution that may be introduced in Rhodesia in present circumstances will be legally valid."

Foley said the government is awaiting an official text of the proposed constitution but advance reports showed it was "wholly inconsistent" with the conditions laid down by Britain for granting independence to Rhodesia.

Sealab Lifted Due Death

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A $10,000,000 U.S. Navy program to train men for undersea living has been suspended while doctors try to learn why an aquanaut had a fatal heart seizure 610 feet down on Monday.

Sealab III, the leaking underwater dwelling unit which Berry L. Cannon, 33, was attempting to repair when stricken, was ordered hauled up from the ocean floor near San Clemente Island.

A delay of weeks seemed likely for the trouble-plagued project, which called for five nine-man teams to spend 12 days each living and working at the bottom of the sea.

The other eight members of Cannon's team began a six-day period of decompression, a gradual process in which their body tissues become accustomed again to surface pressures.

Davis Won't Interfere In University Disputes

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Universities should take care of their own reconstructing and not have it imposed on them by outsiders, Ontario Education Minister William Davis told a University of Windsor audience Monday.

Mr. Davis said his speech had been prepared long before student occupation last Tuesday of a section of the University of Windsor's administration block.

Before his speech he met with a number of student bodies and spent 10 minutes touring the occupied area.

In his speech to 300 teachers and students, Mr. Davis foresaw universities working more closely with government but stressed "governments must safeguard against the interference which would prevent universities fulfilling their true roles."

Lipstick Note in Restroom Frees Woman Held Fortnight

BONIFAY ,Fla. (AP) — A lipstick-scribbled note in a restaurant restroom, police said Monday, led them to a diabetic mother of five who told them she left a series of similar messages in three states in an effort to escape an ex-convict she said abducted her Feb. 5.

Deputy Sheriff James Bolton of Oklahoma County read one of the notes:

"I have been kidnapped, please help me."

Below the mirror on a roller towel, Bolton said, was the message: "Call this number collect. Ask for Mr. DeLoach and tell him his wife is okay. She's being taken to Orlando."

The plea was found in a roadside restaurant at Crestview, 35 miles west of here.

Acting on a tip from police in Crestview, Deputy Willard Sealey, in Holmes County, stopped a car in Bonfay at 4 a.m. He found Marjorie DeLoach and her companion.

The man, identified as Robert Samuel Martin of Atlanta, was jailed as a Georgia parole violator.

Mrs. DeLoach, 35, an attractive brunette, appeared to be in a state of shock, said Holmes County Sheriff Harvey Belser.

"Mrs. DeLoach told us she had been forced to accompany Martin last Feb. 5th and held prisoner ever since," said Belser. "She said the only time he let her out of his sight was to let her go to the restroom."

The sheriff said the woman told him she had left the lipstick messages in restaurant restrooms all over North Florida, Georgia and Louisiana as the pair stayed almost constantly on the go.

However, the sheriff said, Martin told authorities at the jail the woman accompanied him voluntarily.

In Atlanta, police said a missing persons report was filed on Mrs. DeLoach in early February by her husband after the woman's car was found abandoned outside a hospital with her shoes and coat inside.

Six Die From Fumes

CRETE, Neb. (AP) — Leaking anhydrous ammonia fumes from a wrecked railway tank car spread through a section of this southeast Nebraska town early today. At least six persons died from breathing the deadly fumes.

Gov. Norbert Tiemann said the state patrol confirmed six deaths. A department of agriculture inspector said he found 10 dead. Many persons were overcome as they slept in their homes.

Quebec Delegation Head Defends Singer's 'Quebec Libre'

NIAMEY, Niger (CP) — Separatist singer Pauline Julien's right to shout "Vive le Quebec Libre"—Long Live Free Quebec—Monday while Canada's representative was addressing an international meeting of French-speaking countries has been defended by the leader of the Quebec delegation.

, Marcel Masse, provincial minister without portfolio, told reporters after the incident that the Montreal singer had shouted "an idea shared by part of our people."

He said Miss Julien had expressed "an idea directly opposed to Prime Minister Trudeau's ideas, adding that "democracy gives them both the right to speak out.

The slogan was the same one that caused an international furore when shouted by President de Gaulle from the balcony of Montreal City Hall during a visit to the 1967 world exhibition. The Canadian government criticized the French president for shouting the separatist slogan and he left for home in a huff without making a planned visit to Ottawa.

Miss Julien, here at the invitation of the Niger government and due to entertain delegates at a reception tonight, shouted the slogan while State Secretary Gerard Pelletier was addressing the meeting. There was no immediate reaction from the Canadian representative or from the 200 delegates in the meeting hall.

"You sing much better than you can shout, and you should stick to what you can do best," Mr. Pelletier later told Miss Julien as their paths crossed on leaving the meeting.

Miss Julien retorted: "It was a shame for you to speak the way that you did. You speak of culture while your government tries to assimilate Quebecers."

She added that her action had not been premeditated and that she was simply angry at the Quebec delegation for not even "flinching" at Mr. Pelletier's words.

"I should have shouted better," said Miss Julien.

The four-day meeting has brought together representatives of about 25 French-speaking countries. The meeting hopes to establish a world-wide agency for cultural and educational co-operation that would embrace about 200,000,000 French-speaking persons in 40 countries.

Bylaw Needed

Council Again Endorses Sunday Fair

It's "in again" for Sunday fairs at Belleville!

Yesterday city council by a 6-5 recorded vote approved an amended motion authorizing Sunday fairs when necessary — but there still could be discussion before the covering by-law is passed.

The by-law will come before council at its next meeting and will allow only limited operation of the fair midway.

The by-law will allow the Belleville Agricultural Society to conduct the Belleville Fair on Sundays when required due to previous dates being rained out, including all normal every day fair operations and midway operations permitted under provincial law.

Ruled out will be horse race betting, gambling games such as crown and anchor, games of skill and bingo.

During the past two months the Sunday fair question has been before city council on several occasions.

Council previously approved Sunday fairs but a storm of protest from local religious organizations saw the matter again being considered. Then it was learned the councils motion for approval was illegal without a covering bylaw.

Two weeks ago Alderman Kenneth Soden brought in a notice of motion calling for Sunday fair approval including every day fair events and midway operations such as games of skill, bingos "etc."

But yesterday in another half hour debate, the motion again ran into a snag when there was opposition to any form of gambling.

Alderman Soden said that under provincial regulations, horse race betting and crown and anchor games were ruled out on Sunday. But those in opposition to Sunday fairs wanted games of skill and bingo also ruled out.

Alderman Gerald Joyce said he would be happy to go along with Sunday fairs but would object to anything which would help Paddy Conklins' midway hustlers.

He moved an amendment ruling out games of skill and bingos.

Approving the amended motion to allow Sunday fairs were Mayor Scott and Aldermen Ellis, Joyce, Keegan, Russell, and Soden. Opposing were Aldermen Boyle, David, Jeffrey, Orr, and Williams.

Early Spring?

By the calendar it's still winter. But it might as well be spring as far as this Trenton lass is concerned. However, current warm weather spell at least put spring in her step as she walked abroad yesterday, clad in shorts, giving a hint of better days ahead.

Harbor Future Bright Mayor Tells Council

An encouraging future for Belleville harbor as a world shipping point is forseen by Mayor J. Russell Scott.

At yesterday's council meeting Mayor Scott said the whole concept of harbor facilities was under review by the federal government and that recent innovations in water transportation such as the hovercraft and increased use of barges could easily see vastly increased use for the Belleville harbor.

With such craft the 14 foot water depth in the Telegraph Narrows east of Belleville would no longer present a drawback to shipping, and Belleville and the Bay of Quinte could easily become a world port.

Already consideration is being given to enlarging the local harbor, it was stated.

"This is the best piece of news concerning our harbor that we have heard in a long time," he said.

Trent Authority Plans Due Tonight

TRENTON — The Lower Trent Valley Regional Conservation Authority will unveil its plans for this year at its annual meeting tonight.

William Lawson, secretary-treasurer of the authority, said today the meeting will be held in the agriculture building in Brighton tonight at 8 p.m.

"We will be discussing what we have accomplished and what we plan for the future," said Mr. Lawson.

He added that the public is invited to attend.

It is probable that the subject of Domtar and its role in pollution of the Trent will come under discussion.

In a recent report, the authority praised Domtar for the effort it was taking to curb pollution. In doing so, the report contrasted with beliefs of many as to pollution caused by the plant.

Among those who questioned the report was Trenton councillor E. M. Parker, who expressed surprise at the report during the town's last council meeting.

Councillor Parker said at the time he found it hard to believe everything in the report, as it seemed to "extoll the virtues of Domtar's water pollution control program."

Tax Bill Payments

City tax collector John J. Grohn today drew attention to an error in the printing of the interim tax bills which last week went out to city property owners.

The amounts of the interim billing were correct but the times during which taxes could be paid at city hall were incorrectly listed.

The correct times should have read 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday to Friday, during Eastern Standard Time, and 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. during Daylight Saving Time.

Taxes may also be paid by mail addressed to the Tax Collector, City Hall, Belleville.

March 4 Meeting

Highways OK and Bridge Starts

The Ontario Municipal Board has given approval for construction this year of the long proposed Dundas Street bridge over the Moira and, with department of highways okay of plans, tenders could be called by the end of March.

Council last night gave third and final reading to the bylaw authorizing construction of the bridge.

Today city engineer Wilbur Purcell said a contract review meeting with the department of highways was scheduled for March 4 at which time bridge plans will be reviewed by department experts.

If no changes are recommended for the bridge plans, tenders could be called by the end of March.

Plans are to construct the Dundas Street bridge only this year with reconstruction of Dundas Street east between the river and Holden Street to be carried out in 1970.

This means the new Dundas Street bridge will remain unused until some time in 1970 when bridge approaches will be constructed and Dundas Street is rebuilt.

Also yesterday council approved a traffic and light committee recommendation calling for budget consideration of an item for $28,000 for the installation of four sets of traffic lights.

Committee chairman Ald. Arthur Keegan said lights were being considered for Dundas Street at the Belleville General Hospital entrance; at Victoria and Church, at Cannifton Road and College and at College and Sidney Streets.

No action will be taken on the suggestion two weeks ago of Ald. Kenneth Soden that directional signs between the Dundas Street Hill and the new CPR overpass be erected to divert eastbound traffic down the Devil's Elbow Hill and north on Coleman Street.

Alderman Soden felt that such a diversion would reduce traffic congestion along Highland Ave.

The opinion of the traffic committee was that since it was anticipated Dundas Street at the CPR overpass would be reconstructed within a year, the installation of the additional signs was not warranted.

Ald. Paul Russell spelled out the decision of the committee not to instal temporary traffic lights at the Dundas Street intersection with the railway overpass.

He said that a traffic survey taken even during rush hour period showed the maximum wait for cars emerging from the overpass onto Dundas Street was two minutes — not 30 minutes as had been claimed by some users.

Council Supports Airport Proposal

Belleville city council yesterday gave its stamp of approval to the Prince Edward-Hastings Liberal Association brief proposing construction of an airport south of Picton capable of handling supersonic jets.

But approval of the brief was conditional. The city doesn't feel the proposed airport complex should include a gamlbing casino.

Council approved the brief submitted to federal authorities in Ottawa some weeks ago — with deletion of the reference to the gambling casino.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said the Liberal Association brief was deserving of some consideration by council.

"It is most important that the powers that be in Ottawa know we are interested," he said.

Alderman Douglas Boyle said the airport brief was very imaginative in scope.

"It's a forward looking appraisal and such an airport would be a singular "boom" for this area — and I don't mean a sonic boom."

Alderman Donald Williams, however, questioned the noise effect which such a supersonic airport might have on Belleville.

He noted that residents of the Malton area were already complaining about the noise of jet planes in the Toronto area.

Daylight Saving Starts April 27

The city of Belleville will go on daylight saving time on Sunday, April 27 it was decided yesterday by city council.

Council passed the annual daylight saving time bylaw which will see the city going by "fast" time from 2 a.m. April 27 until Sunday Oct. 26.

Also at last night's council meeting, Mayor J. Russell Scott was directed to proclaim the week of March 2-8 as education week.

Earlier in the meeting, Everett Fairman, chairman of the local education week committee, headed a delegation to council asking for the proclamation.

And Murray Workman, spokesman for a two man committee from the Quinte Kiwanis Club, asked council for a grant of $1,000 to assist his club in carrying out its swimming instruction program.

Mr. Workman said that approximately 600 persons — 540 of them children — took weekly swimming instruction in their classes. Approximately 75 per cent of the young swimmers were from the city, he said.

The service club request for the $1,000 grant was referred to council budget discussions.

Alderman Asks Publicity Plan For Urban Renewal Scheme

A call for more public relations to advise Belleville residents on details of the proposed downtwon urban renewal scheme was heard at city council yesterday.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey referred to recent news items which she said seemed to cast some doubt on whether the city's urban renewal scheme would go ahead but said so far there was no indication that projects the size of Belleville's would not be allowed to continue.

She quoted local member of parliament Lee Grills and Allen Brass, town planner with Procter, Redfern, Bousfield and Bacon who are doing the city's urban renewal study, as saying the project would be allowed to continue.

Some weeks ago the Federal government said the urban renewal scheme were under review although previous commitments would be honored and any studies under way would be completed.

Alderman Jeffrey said council had taken a major step in ordering the urban renewal study and there was great need for continued enthusiasm. The central core of the city must be preserved, she said.

Merchants thmselves were not responsible for the present downtown blight, she maintained. Rather absentee landlords who cared little about appearances were to blame.

Mayor J. Russell Scott and City Manager J. R. Reynolds said all recommended procedures involving the urban renewal study were being followed.

They said there was no point in going ahead with a public relations program until "we know what we are presenting."

Mayor Scott said that until the planners' report was received and any new government policy on urban renewal was announced, little could be done.

A preliminary report from Procter, Redfern, Bousfield and Bacon is expected shortly but the final report will not be until August.

Under the existing urban renewal policy, the federal government pays 50 percent of the cost of approved schemes with the province and municipality splitting the remainder.

CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to sincerely thank our neighbors and friends who so kindly came to our assistance after our recent fire. A special thanks to the Bayside Lower School. Sincerely, The Carroll Family.

We would like to express our thanks to our families, relatives, friends and neighbors, Dr. Hosein, Dr. Peter Scott and also nurses on first and second south and Intensive Care Unit, Belleville General Hospital for kindness and care extended during Henrys illness.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Roushorn.

I wish to express my thanks[illegible] friends, neighbors, relatives a[illegible] fellow workers for their visits, cards, letters, books, flowers and gifts while I was a patient in Belleville General Hospital. Many thanks to the nursing staff on first floor south for the excellent care I received. Sincere thanks to Dr. Douglas, Dr. Hartt, Dr. Manderville and Dr. Peter Scott. Thank you also to Dr. Jack Empson for being available if needed.—Allan Gray.

I wish to thank all my friends, neighbors and relatives for their gifts and remembrances and for making my stay in hospital more pleasant. A special thanks to Dr. Greene and Dr. Empson, to Nurses and Staff and to Reverend Hobbs. —Eve Walsh.

IN MEMORIAM

BAPTISTE—In loving memory of our dear brother, Peter James, who passed away suddenly Feb. 16, 1968.

No one knows our heartaches,
Only those who have lost can tell
Of the grief we bear in silence
For the one we loved so well.
He would not wish for sorrow,
He would not wish for tears,
But just to be remembered
Throughout the years.

—Sadly missed by Duane and Levi.

WILSON—In loving memory of a dear father who passed away five years ago today.

Five years have passed since that sad day,
God called the one we loved away,
Forget him—no we never will,
As years pass by we love him still.

—Always remembered by son John and daughter-in-law Joan of Sarnia.

WILSON—In fond and loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Stanley Harry Wilson, who passed away Feb. 18, 1964.

—Ever remembered by wife Anne and family.

MURRAY—In loving memory of a dear Dad, John Patrick who passed away Feb. 18, 1947.

Twenty-two years have passed since that sad day,
When the one we loved was called away,
God took him home—it was His will,
Within my heart he liveth still.

—Always remembereed by daughter Marguerite, son-in-law Ernest.

Surveyors at Work on Proposed UIC Site

Key Personnel Meet Here

UIC Decision Expected This Week

This could be the week that decides Belleville's biggest economic boost in decades.

The Treasury Board meets Thursday — a session being watched hopefully for any decision to relocate Unemployment Insurance Commission regional headquarters to Belleville.

Last night, J. Lester Stevens, regional UIC director and the man heading the relocation project, said he expected a decision "momentarily."

But he was reluctant to divulge what he thought that decision might be — an attitude of official caution characterizing the entire scheme since it was first confirmed late last year.

However, if the Treasury Board acts Thursday the move will be perfectly timed.

Mr. Stevens and 15 key personnel in his regional administration from around Ontario are in Belleville for the rest of the week for managerial discussions and seminars.

Today, the area UIC managers are scheduled to take a tour of the city. Thursday, the three commissioners who administer the UIC nationally are due at the conference.

The event is part of a pattern: orientation of personnel thinking to Belleville, despite the fact official sanction of the move still hangs fire.

The cautionary note was even carried over into a small reception for the UIC administrators attended by municipal spokesmen last night at the Hotel Quinte.

Again, Mr. Stevens emphasized — this time before Mayor Russell Scott and industrial commission chairman Jerry Joyce — that the entire plan was still subject to Treasury Board sanction.

Mr. Stevens did admit, however, that tenders for a leased building to house the UIC in Belleville were within estimates and that the winning tender was "much lower" than his own original cost draft.

A Don Mills firm, Olympia and York Construction Ltd., submitted the lowest lease bid for a 300-man office block — $234,600 over 15 years or $225,500 over 20 years.

Urgency is added the situation by the sophistication of the UIC operation.

Installation of computers is planned and must be installed by late summer, said Mr. Stevens last night.

The Belleville office also will be a training centre for UIC and civil service administrators.

For the city, it could mean a population boost of about 250 — with 50 new jobs automatically created for local workers.

There are not as many personal staff complications as were first feared when the move from Toronto was revealed, claims Mr. Stevens.

"We've a much higher percentage of people indicating they want to transfer to Belleville than we originally anticipated," he said last night.

In fact, the services of two key men were secured because of the move out of Toronto and the choice of Belleville, he added.

Meantime, absence of final federal government sanction hasn't apparently prevented progress on the project.

A six-acre land bloc in east Belleville along Dundas street East is now being surveyed.

Yesterday, a team from the offices of Belleville surveyor Walter Watson moved onto the property to begin a topographic survey for Olympia and York Construction.

Topographic surveys are a ncessary preliminary to construction.

The proposed site — adjacent to the Belleville Plaza — is about 1,000 feet by 326 feet and extends from Dundas to East Bridge Street.

Scott Incident:

Not Politics Says Mead Johnson

The Mead Johnson — Dr. Russell Scott controversy took an unusual twist yesterday after the company president stated renewal of Dr. Scott's services as plant physician did not hinge around his position as mayor.

In a repudiation of vice-president M. L. Smith's letter that Dr. Scott's contract would not be renewed because of his activity in municipal politics, John Rosseel, Mead Johnson Canada Ltd., president and chief executive officer said yesterday his company encouraged its personnel to engage in governmental affairs.

It brought an instant rejoinder from Mayor Scott: "I knew they would have to backtrack. But, if that is their position, the obvious question then is why was my contract not renewed?"

Mr. Rosseel stated the company position yesterday in letters to news media in Belleville and Toronto. However, Dr. Scott said the reason given by Mr. Smith "still stands as far as I'm concerned. The statement has not been retracted to me and it still stands until I receive a retraction.

"Mr. Smith's letter spelled it out clearly. They said it, I didn't," said the mayor.

The long simmering dispute had its beginning last December when Mead Johnson here informed Dr. Scott his contract as plant physician would not be renewed. It gave as the reason his involvement in municipal politics.

The matter was brought into the public domain when a labor council member questioned the propriety of the firm's move a week ago.

In his statement yesterday, Mr. Rosseel denied that Dr. Scott was fired as plant physician.

"His agreement was not renewed when it ran out at the end of the year and our decision had nothing to do with politics or his competence as a doctor."

Rosseel said that it was "unfortunate" that Mr. Smith, a vice-president of the company, had used politics as the reason in his letter of Dec. 6 to Dr. Scott.

"It was unfortunate because it implies that we do not like our employees to engage in politics, and, in fact, it is company policy — very clearly spelled out in our manual for many years — that we encourage employees to participate actively in governmental affairs and many of them do."

Rosseel said that the relevant part of the manual reads as follows:

"The company encourages employees to take an active part as individuals in governmental affairs, community service or political activity of their choice at the federal, provincial and local levels, and to contribute their services and support."

He said, "It woud be presumptuous for the company to impose rules of conduct in its employees as far as their political activities are concerned and it would be absurd for us to attempt such an imposition on a professional man who was retained as a consultant and not hired as a salaried employee.

"I repeat, the wording of Mr. Smith's letter was unfortunate and it was not in accord with established company policy."

Rosseel said that he is sending all employees a letter that states company policy towards political activity so that there can be no possible confusion or concern on the part of the employees.

Mr. Smith, vice-president of administration and treasurer at the Mead Johnson plant here said yesterday he had no further statement to make on the matter.

Conservation Authority

Legion Backs Menzies in Fight

TRENTON — Members of Trenton Legion last night voiced support for William Menzies in his attempt to gain a seat on the Lower Trent Valley Conservation Authority.

Mr. Menzies' appointment was recommended to the provincial government last September but was replaced by Stirling Reeve Donald Rogers when the appointments were made on Feb. 6.

The provincial government appoints three members to the Trent Valley Authority which came into being last July. The authority includes representatives from 16 townships and the town of Trenton.

Mr. Menzies said last night: "I feel a member of the Legion should sit on the Conservation Authority. After all we spearheaded the campaign to have such a body."

Mr. Menzies headed a Legion committee which has worked for several years toward the formation of the authority.

"We've worked 4½ years in building this body and we should have representation," he said.

At a meeting of the authority last September Mr. Menzies, Paul Heissier and Peter MacGilen were recommended as provincial appointees to the board. Both Mr. Heissier and Mr. MacGilen were appointed by the order and council which was handed down on Feb. 6.

At last night's meeting Legion members agreed to send a letter to Premier John Robarts informing him of their objection to the appointment of Reeve Rogers who is also the warden of Hastings County.

Mr. Menzies also says he would be the only union member and labor representative on the board. "Much of the tax money being spent by the authority will be coming from the pay cheques of the working people and they should have a voice on the board," he claimed.

He told Legion members the replacement of his name was a "slap in the face to the Legion."

Mr. Menzies plans to petition other Legion branches to gain support for a change in the appointment.

Kin-20 Club to Open Youth Drop In Centre

The Kinsmen Club last night supported a move by the Kin-20 organization to open a "drop in" centre for teenagers in Belleville.

Members voted to back the operation of such a centre to the extent of $1,300.

Kin-20, a teenage group formed in Belleville about a year ago, plans to open the centre in the old Intelligencer building opposite city hall on Front St.

At last night's meeting, Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said he supported the project but that adequate supervision should be provided at least for the first few months.

"You can expect problems but they can be overcome," he said.

Supervision at the centre will be provided by Kinsmen members.

Kin-20 president Steve Ling said today the new centre called "By Word of Mouth" should be open in six to eight weeks. Club members will decorate the premises prior to the opening.

Ald. Robin Jeffrey and Paul Russell also attended the meeting and voiced support for the project. "We need new ideas in our city and I only hope this one works out," Ald. Jeffrey said.

Chief Crosbie warned the members of both groups that they had a difficult time ahead. "But we are behind you all the way," he said.

The new centre will be open between the hours of four and six o'clock on weekdays with extended hours of operation on the weekends.

The centre will attempt to give teenagers a place to meet for discussion. Various forms of entertainment will be included in the program.

The centre will operate on a membership basis and it is expected it will operate on a break-even basis.

As well as supervision by Kinsmen, Kin-20 members are attempting to get several teachers and clergymen to drop-in and talk with the teenagers.

"It will be a meeting place for the youth in our community, Mr. Ling said.

"The need exists for such a centre and we feel it will be supported by the teenagers."

Although the Kinsmen are supporting the project financially, the operation of the centre will remain with the Kin-20 members.

Four Snowmobilers Plan Picton to Bancroft Trip

Four Marmora-area men are going on safari, but wild game need not worry. It's a 100 mile snowmobile safari.

The four men, members of the Marmora and District Snowmobile Club, will journey from Picton to Bancroft this weekend.

The group will consist of Jack Fraser, leader and navigator, Roy Snider, assistant navigator and camp cook, Ted Booter and Bill McCaw, mechanic.

The object of the safari, according to Mr. Fraser, is to prove that both men and machine can endure a trek from the southern portion of Prince Edward County to North Hastings County by snowmobile.

The group is scheduled to leave Picton at nine a.m. Friday, Feb 21 and is expected to arrive in Bancroft Sunday afternoon.

The snowmobile party will be completely self-sufficient, carrying their own food and camping equipment. The men will sleep under canvas Friday and Saturday nights

Since this is the first attempt at such a long distance run in the area, the actually running time is unknown.

The group will also be carrying mail in the form of a message from Picton mayor, H. J. McFarland for delivery to reeve Jack Brown in Bancroft.

Enroute assistance will be provided by snowmobile clubs at Belleville, Stirling, Marmora and Coe Hill.

Skating Party Set for Saturday

Although Belleville won't be having a winter carnival the Chamber of Commerce will be sponsoring a skating party this Saturday at Zwick's Island cove.

The party will be a costume affair and will begin at eight p.m. and finish at 11 p.m.

There will be prizes for the best costumes and frozen toes will be warmed by a bonfire adjacent to the cove rink.

Music will be provided by a band which will be suppleted by recorded music.

Another highlight of the festivity will be a snowmobile torchlight parade with approximately 40 snowmobiles involved, courtesy of the Quinte mented by recorded music.

The skating party is actually a forerunner of the proposed winter carnival for next year. Plans for the carnival will officially begin in June. Admission this weekend is free.

The carnival would feature all winter sports and activities such as skating, hockey and ice sculpture and would possibly run for a week.

ARTHUR McLAUGHLIN

Mail Service

Now that Saturday mail has been eliminated on all but certain rural routes, Postmaster-General Eric Kierans might divert his thoughts from such extra-curricular issues as defence (Canada's role in NATO for example) and concentrate on the overall improvement of postal services.

Why, for instance, should first-class mail from Toronto to Hamilton (practically next door) take two days? Complaining of this in a letter to The Hamilton Spectator, D. Strachan brings to light another extraordinary fact concerning surface mail from overseas. British mail arriving in Canada by ocean liner via New York in 1911 took only one week. Today, with fast liner traffic (as formerly provided by vessels like The Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth) on the wane, it takes four to five weeks.

Air mail also has its anomalies. One can get a letter from New Zealand, for instance, in three to four days. In the opposite direction, starting in Belleville, it takes six days.

Meanwhile, the United States (probably the most complex system in the world) is having its problems. A Washington report says the government's effort to speed mail deliveries with night flights by small aircraft has resulted in a fatal accident rate almost twice as high as the national average. In little more than a year, nine small planes have crashed, killing 13 persons.

Flying in bad weather has been blamed for two-thirds of the accidents. At the same time a Federal Aviation Administration official admits the capability of pilots engaged in the night flights is "spotty." And this, despite the fact they must be certified for instrument flying. In the circumstances, it sounds as if a switch to daytime delivery might be in order.

Why the Gloom?

George G. Greene in his Random Ramblings column in The Ottawa Journal puts his finger on a modern malaise — the aura of melancholy and doom that characterizes the countenances of people in the streets of our cities.

His words are worth quoting at some length because they are so true of people aged from 12 to 90. Only the smaller children exhibit any glimmer of happiness in being alive. Only the smaller kiddies follow the dictum of Thomas Carlyle that one should live every day as if it were your last. And incidentally, a television program the other day on heart attacks showed just how easily a man can meet his end. Seeing it, was to appreciate the gift of life and the marvels of modern surgery that in many cases restore heart victims to health and a good measure of strength.

Anyway here is what Mr. Greene wrote — and realize again how good it is to be alive: "I wish people didn't look so damned sad in Ottawa; or maybe it is boredom, fed up-with-it-ness, disinterest, worry — yes, it could be worry and I don't say it is confined to Ottawa. Yet one gets the idea that life isn't worth a tot to a lot of folks one meets on the streets, in the buses and, yes, yes, in the offices. Life after all, is life and that is something.

"When one sees a casket being carried into a church for a funeral service that is the time to feel grateful that one is alive, still in good health, able to work or to play. But too many seem to be carrying boulders on their shoulders. A Monday morning in Ottawa is really something: so many long faces and eyes that see just enough to keep going; few smiles, fewer "Good Mornings."

If that is a true image of Ottawa, it is not that much different in Toronto, Montreal or Belleville. It is an image we might all try to correct — with a smile, or a friendly greeting.

Violent Deeds

Violence seems to know no bounds these days. We are all familiar with student unrest all over the world, but here in Canada it is not only students who are displaying the ugly side of human nature. There was that bank holdup in Quebec last Friday in which efficient police work turned the tables on four bandits but unhappily resulted in the death of a credit manager doing business in the bank. And there was another, equally sordid occurrence in Montreal's suburban St. Lambert: a 32-year-old man, who said he had no enemies, had acid thrown in his face by a man who called at his home. The man and his five-year-old son standing beside him both suffered severe damage to their eyes. It is a sick society that experiences these kind of incidents, and the sad part of it is that overall, they seem to be on the increase.

Ottawa Offbeat

Wall-to-wall Waste Reaches Epidemic Proportions

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — On office furniture, supplies and equipment, the federal government currently is spending precisely $29,215,730 — up a couple of million or so from last year.

The figures, official come from the treasury board estimates.

Setting some kind of an example — if not exactly one of economy — Treasury Board President C. M. "Bud" Drury, when he was industries minister, shot all of $900,000 in refurnishing only part of his department.

But of all the $29,000,000 that is being spent to make the government and its staff cozily comfortable, none of it has brought the rich - rugged, deep leather-padded, tastefully draped elegance that the Senate purchased for something this side of $70,000.

The senators spent it on one of their committee rooms. A small one, as parliamentary committee rooms come. About the size of an average public school classroom.

They have carpeted it in deep-pile wall-to-wall broadloom in eye catching "Senate red," furnished it with natural oak desks and broad-beamed, wide-winged fawn-leather, arm-chairs on rolling ball-type castors — just the thing for a quiet snooze while discussion drones on (but please no snoring.)

It is a decorator's dream.

The scarlet wall-to-wall carpeting runs up, floor-to-ceiling, one entire side of the room to background a huge white metal Canadian coat of arms.

The ceiling is beamed. The place so finely wired for sound that even the faintest whispering of the most timid witness comes through strong. And of course, every oak desk in front of every swivelled leather chair is electronically geared for bilingual performances.

Mind you, this is not a new committee room. It is merely an old — and entirely adequate — committee room done over.

The Senate, ever since the Centre Block opened back in 1921, had managed its committee hearings, to everyone's apparent satisfaction, in the room as it was.

But everyone else on Parliament Hill was getting new rugs and desks and drapes and the whole expensive lot, so the Senate probably thought it was only keeping in step.

The senators have been learning fast.

Just the other day in the Senate barber shop — yep, they have to have their own, duplicating the Commons shop— there was much mirth about the senator who discovered, after a visitor had left that a tiny hole had been burned in his rug probably by a dropped cigarette ash.

He had his secretary call the Senate works office, to ask if the hole might be repaired, figuring on a small patch job that might take only a few minutes and as many dollars.

But he ended up with a whole new wall-to-wall rug, new desk, new chairs, new chesterfield, new everything.

And all he wanted, they all laughed, was just that tiny hole fixed.

Ah well, c'est la guerre on poverty.

The Senate, though, has not been entirely unmindful of Finance Minister Benson's call for economy.

Not without heart-breaking cries of self - sacrifice above and beyond the call of senatorial duty, they have cut off their free—courtesy of the taxpayer —morning newspapers delivered to every Senate door and their barber shop.

They have even cancelled a couple of dozen magazines which draped one wall of an inset in their reading room.

Just a dandy place for a bar— and something that looked suspiciously like one was begun, until it got around that the Senate was going wet.

The Press Gallery bar (entirely unofficial but well patronized by parliamentarians) was not good enough for them. Neither was the "boozeteria" over in the West Block where the parched parliamentarian may go or send a messenger to replenish the office bar-that-looks-like - a - water-cooler.

Caught with their finger in the cookie jar, the senators denied left, right and centre that they had ever thought of such a naughty thing as a bar. And there the space that was to have been a bar stands empty and forlorn.

Bars long have bugged the honorable senators.

Well remembered is one of the Senate speakers, a prohibitionist, whose first official act when taking office was to fire the Press Gallery's chief page who kept bar on the side.

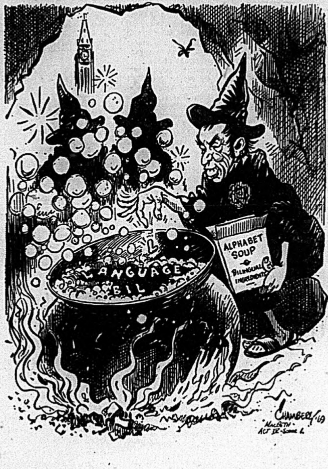
Mr. Speaker was visited at his home by a delegation comprising some senators, MPs, senior civil servants and newsmen with a petition to reinstate the chief page cum-barman.

Impossible, snorted the speaker, the man had been selling liquor actually.

Impossible, that was, until he was asked if the fellow out front mowing his lawn was not a public works gardener from Parliament Hill . . . and did not some of his chairs and that leather sofa over there look exactly like those in Senate and Commons offices?

Indignantly he denied it — but the sacked chief page was back next day in the Press Gallery and behind his parliamentary bar.

"Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire, burn; and, caldron, bubble."



The Law on 'Conflict of Interest'

Brockville Recorder and Times

Conflict of interest in municipal affairs is a continuing matter of concern, to the extent that the provincial government has promised to revise the municipal act at this session of the legislature to make it tougher for politicians doing private business with the city to attain or retain office. It is legislation that is needed.

While the provincial government is assuming this attitude, some municipal councillors are lobbying for a softer approach to the subject of conflict of interest. These people want the act amended to make it possible to stay in office when there is conflict of interest, providing it is declared at the appropriate time.

As the act now stands a councillor cannot be ousted from office for conflict of interest unless a private citizen takes him to court and the court orders the man out.

The law should be strengthened, not weakened. A mayor or councillor could declare his or her interest and not participate in debates or vote on a contract of purchases, but it would not prevent the development of cliques of businessmen - politicians who would vote for each other's contracts by prearrangement.

There have been arguments, pro and con, on this matter of an elected official doing business with a city or township or county, and no matter how above-board it may be, questions are posed. In many rural areas a strict enforcement of the suggested new law would work a hardship but it is a hardship that can be endured.

With the move towards regional government gaining momentum, it is important that the rules guiding the new councils should be such that there isn't any area that presents the unscrupulous person or persons an advantage.

Surface Mail from U.K. Was Faster Half-a-Century Ago

Letter to the
Hamilton Spectator

I read with interest Mrs. Doris Montgomery's letter in your issue of Feb. 6 under the heading "Sixty Years of Post Office Progress." There is, of course, no good reason why letters mailed to her in Hamilton on Sat., Feb. 1, should not have been delivered to her on Mon. Feb. 3.

Last week three items of first-class mail, stamped Feb. 3 in Toronto, were not delivered to me until Wed. Feb. 5. I am not alone in thinking that first-class mail from Toronto should not take two days for delivery in Hamilton. There is something wrong in that and it is not being put right because I have had this matter up before with our Post Office. Steady pressure from the readers of your paper is necessary if we are to get action.

Now that surface mail from Great Britain is taking four and five weeks for delivery in Canada it will be of interest to your readers to know that when I spent the winter of 1911-12 in the City of Quebec, my employees would find, in their post office box on a Friday evening, letters mailed in Great Britain, the previous Friday.

At that time mail to and from Canada could be routed "Via New York". Later that privilege was withdrawn and mail was then sent only by liners using Canadian ports. Now that the number of such liners is so few and so slow, it would seem desirable to make arrangements for Canadian surface mail to Great Britain to be accorded anew the privilege of being sent "Via New York."

Reading and Imagery Are Vital in Child's Upbringing

Cobourg Sentinel-Star

An inspirational line of poetry can warm the heart on the coldest day of the year. A soldier on the front line of war needs more than a ration of rum to help him face a trail of death and destruction before him. So it is with all men and all women everywhere, whatever the salient problem may be, something from inside one is needed to face whatever is to come tomorrow.

The teacher reminded the editor:

"If you could see, as we do at school, some of the results of reading to the five-year-old at home you would consider it important enough to keep a regular schedule. For the fives, the knowledge and understanding which comes from a wide selection of prose and poetry seems almost unlimited in scope. It means an edge in confidence and poise which they need so much at this time."

A parent who has been a constant reader will learn that the listening child will express his or her thoughts clearly with an amazing vocabulary of apt words.

From the experiences of the read stories in the home, the child gains new worlds, new imagery, far, far removed from the horror stories in the crass multi-color of television.

Great men can rise from the mother's knee; great thoughts can come from a home; a world in turn is blessed by the parents of today who are conscious of their responsibility. This [illegible] the cardinal hope for tomorrow.

Vietnam Peace Talks Remain Deadlocked

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon's bargaining team has assumed control at the Vietnam peace talks in Paris. The rearguard posted by former president Johnson for the transition left Thursday.

But nothing seems changed except the American faces.

There is intransigence at the four-sided table, the same intensified American and South Vietnamese military campaign in the countryside, a steady flow of American casualties, further efforts to strengthen the Southern regime and talk—but only talk—about when the first American troops may be withdrawn.

"I don't expect much to come out of these public meetings," chief negotiator Henry Cabot Lodge said Thursday after another six hours and 10 minutes of non-movement in Paris.

If there is going to be progress in private, as implied by Lodge, it is being well concealed.

But the edginess now is in South Vietnam with the Vietnamese new year—or Tet—due to begin tonight.

The Americans and their allies are determined not to be caught napping as they were a year ago by a Communist offensive that turned the war around.

The Viet Cong insurgents and their North Vietnamese allies erupted across the country with so much damage to the American public support for the war that President Johnson decided to halt the military buildup and actively seek a way out.

Now, saturation, high-altitude bombing by big B-52 aircraft, a weapon that has demoralized the other side badly, is being poured into the perimeter of the capital of Saigon.

Johnson took much of the heat out of American war protest by levelling off American forces, halting the bombing of the North and succeeding in getting the North, South and the Viet Cong at the same peace table.

The issue now is how much longer Nixon can continue the pattern he inherited from Johnson.

American dead since the peace talks were launched May 13 of last year now total 8,611 and 31,562 American troops have died since Jan. 1, 1961. Another 199,689 have been wounded.

Private contacts have been instrumental in getting the peace talks as far as they are today. But after four fruitless sessions of the four-sided format, and nearly a month after President Nixon's hand took the helm, there is no sign of anything that spells further progress.

PM Names Priorities

Labor Presses for Expanded Role by Ottawa in Disputes

OTTAWA (CP) — Organized labor and the federal cabinet stepped into the ring together twice Monday but the punching was light and both sides ended up smiling.

The occasion was the annual presentation of briefs by the 1,600,000-member Canadian Labor Congress and the Canadian Labor Railway Executives Association, which represents some 120,000 railway workers.

CLC President Donald MacDonald won at least partial agreement from Prime Minister Trudeau on the need for a government commitment to "comprehensive economic planning."

But Mr. Trudeau ticked off the areas of housing, medical care insurance and offshore mineral rights—all raised by the CLC—as those in which the provinces now have some jurisdiction. For this reason, he called for constitutional reform before launching any over-all planning.

The railway executives won a larger degree of support, mainly from Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey and Transport Minister Paul Hellyer.

At one point after association chairman Charles Smith had completed his presentation, A. R. Gibbons, the executive secretary, said to Mr. Mackasey: "We're not at odds at all, Mr. Minister."

The association was pressing for an expanded mediation role in labor disputes by the federal government. Mr. Mackasey announced he has already "obtained permission" to increase his department's mediation services.

Mr. Mackasey was also able to placate the CLC on its demand for early publication of the report of the study group on labor-management relations in Canada.

The report would be available in "the not-too-distant future" and the present delay was in getting the document translated and printed.

To the congress's call for tax reform, particularly along the lines recommended by the Carter taxation commission, Finance Minister Edgar Benson said he will table a white paper this June outlining proposed tax changes. The CLC and other groups may then appear before a parliamentary committee to make their cases.

The sharpest disagreement came over housing.

The CLC said the recent housing study recommendation that all major public housing projects be held back pending a thorough investigation was objectionable.

Mr. Hellyer said this proposal does not affect small projects which make up the bulk of public housing in Canada. Meanwhile, research into such projects could ascertain their social and sociological significance and lead to improvements.

Mr. MacDonald said this isn't good enough. Too many Canadians were living in slum conditions and the government should take a second look at any delays in building big projects.

He also was not satisfied with Manpower Minister Allan MacEachen's suggestion that there was something encouraging about the December-January unemployment figures.

Mr. MacDonald said he is "not at all impressed" by the figures, particularly for regions such as the Atlantic provinces where unemployment hit 7.2 per cent of the labor force in 1968.

To the CLC's proposal for a complete revamping of the social security system in Canada, Health Minister John Munro said many studies now are under way in the field. He doubted the expense of a royal commission could be justified.

The CLC's 8,750-word brief expressed strong concern over price and unemployment increases in 1968. Certain government decisions had aggravated the situation.

On bilingualism and biculturalism, the CLC supported the government proposed bill to make English and French official languages in areas under federal jurisdiction. But it said the legislation must be fairly administered.

Mr. Mackasey agreed with railway labor executives that "legislation is needed" to make the recommendations of the Freedman report a reality. Mr. Justice Samuel Freedman recommended in 1965 that employees be given a say in technological changes affecting their jobs.

To another association proposal that unemployment insurance be reviewed, the minister said this is being done. The whole concept was under study.

Mr. Hellyer said he has ordered the Canadian transport commission to investigate the cause of railway accidents, both as they affect employees and the public.

High School Guides Changing

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario secondary schools will be urged to give students more say in what they study and how they study it, Jack McCarthy, deputy education minister, said Monday.

Mr. McCarthy said in an interview new guidelines are being prepared by the education department as a result of an intensive study.

The guidelines will not be imposed on schools, he said, but they will urge:

—Promotion by subject rather than grade—students would never be forced to repeat subjects they passed, no matter how many others they fail.

—An individual timetable for each student drawn up with the aid of computers. After consulting with teachers and counsellors, students would take classes, laboratories and free study periods suited to their learning needs.

—A cumulative credit system in which the number of credits a student earns during a year or in his school career would be the basis for granting a diploma, rather than the number of grades he had passed.

Betting Service Is Legal

OTTAWA (CP) — An off-track betting service offered by two Welland men passed its last legal hurdle Monday in the Supreme Court of Canada.

Without giving reasons, the high court said it would not hear a Crown appeal against lower court decisions which found that the service did not break any of the provisions of the Criminal Code.

Ontario Giving Consideration To Province Rent Control

TORONTO (CP) — Legislation to control rents is planned by the Ontario government during the current sitting of the legislature, Premier John Robarts said Monday night.

The premier said in an interview the legislation would be part of a bill which "will go into all aspects of landlord-tenant relationships."

He declined to give details.

A. B. Lawrence, Progressive Conservative member for Carleton East, said in an earlier interview he intends to go ahead with a bill he is sponsoring to give the city of Ottawa power to create its own rent-control policy.

He said legislation contemplated by Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough will not be effective enough to please Ottawa's demands.

"My understanding is that the government plans to rely on conciliation and publicity," Mr. Lawrence said. "I do not believe that will be as effective. I have never believed in publicity as a means of solving a dispute."

Mr. McKeough was not available for comment.

Both Mr. McKeough's and the attorney-general's departments have been studying a law-reform commission's proposal that the government introduce legislation to set up municipal rent review offices and boards to mediate in landlord-tenant disputes.

Mr. Lawrence said if his bill gets through it would give Ottawa the power to create a rental review board that would arbitrate all landlord-tenant disagreements, including those involving rents. He recommended that failure to comply with an arbitration ruling be punishable by a fine of up to $1,000 or up to two years imprisonment, or both.

Indian Education 'Provinces' Job'

TORONTO (CP) — A conservative back-bencher introduced a resolution in the legislature Monday calling on the federal government to get out of the field of Indian education in the province.

Leo Bernier (PC—Kenora) said that "the task is simply impossible to be realized across Canada by the federal government."

"Each province has its peculiarities, specific natural resources, industries. The education of these people has to be geared to the specific facets of each province."

Mr. Bernier said that programs by two levels of government to help Indians often are duplicated.

"Much more could be done with the transfer of more obligations and of course federal money to the province. We in Ontario could provide much more extensive service and greater assistance . . . at less cost," he said.

He blamed a lack of co-operation between federal and provincial governments on civil servants. Ministers who have led the Indian affairs department "have bargained in the best of faith but there appears to be no co-operation from senior civil servants whose prime objective seems to be to build personal empires."

Mr. Bernier suggested an Indian advisory committee be based on Indian membership but include members of the legislature.

Resolutions are debated in a special hour each week but do not come to a vote in the legislature.

In other legislature business Monday:

—Mac Makarchuk (NDP—Brantford) said that Brantford welfare administrators have sent people seeking welfare to find jobs at plants where strikes are in progress. On another occasion, he said a girl applying for welfare was told to "go and become a prostitute if she wanted money." He suggested the province put municipal welfare administrators "under some type of professional scrutiny."

—The report of a two-year study on development of the Niagara escarpment is being presented to the government in sections. Premier Robarts said no decision will be made on what parts will be made public until it has been considered by a cabinet committee. The study examines the development of the escarpment, running from Niagara Falls to the Bruce Peninsula, and recommends a planning program for its future.

Power Struggle in Hospitals Said Not to Patient's Benefit

QUEBEC (CP) — Canadian hospitals, hospital administrators, doctors and nurses took a severe verbal battering at the opening session of a conference on hospital-medal staff relations Monday.

Dr. E. W. Barootes of Regina accused organizations sponsoring the conference of being "selfishly engaged in a power struggle for control of hospital affairs."

The conference—an apparent attempt from within the hospital community to untangle the complex and costly problems of hospital care—is the second in two years.

It is sponsored by the Canadian Medical Association, the Canadian Hospital Association and the Canadian Nurses Association.

"I get the impression," said Dr. Barootes, "that each group is convinced they're the true leaders in the hospital field, that they suffer the others only in a subordinate role, that instead of respecting you resent and suspect the motivations of the others."

His criticisms of hospital administration included these observations:

—"A survey done of all directives and orders issued from all hospital branches shows that nine out of 10 have nothing to do with patient care but are chiefly designed for the comfort and convenience of the hospital workers."

—"In 20 years, administrative space in hospitals has multiplied tenfold and patient space shrunken to far less than 50 per cent of the hospital area. Soon we will meet that sublimely administered hospital which has no room left for that unnecessary evil, the patient."

—"Good hospital administrators are rare and too often administrators acquire their position by default or as a result of proven failure in some other chosen field, including medicine.' "

Hospitals were portrayed as bastions of bureaucracy where attempts were made to control sickness on a 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. work schedule.

"The most acute illness, the worst accidents and the most tragic catastrophies frequently occur off-schedule in the evenings, nights, holidays and weekends when hospitals are least geared to handle them, when the most novice and junior staff are available."

Dr. Barootes said a taxpayer could justifiably become upset by the "inordinate length of documentary inquisition, often up to 100 questions, before he can receive a simple service."

He also said private lobbies of doctors can develop in larger hospitals and bring pressure on hospital administrators and government agencies.

"Over-all, their results can be beneficial, but too often they unfavorably distort the orderly allocation of resources to meet community needs, or results in special favor. . . ."

Some hospital beds were occupied "for the comfort and welfare of the physician as much as for the well-being of the patient," because hospital care could be "cheaper for the patient and more rewarding for the doctor."

Turning to nurses, Dr. Barootes said:

"Nurses have torn themselves away from the bedside and are progressively growing more independent and militant."

He said an excellent clinical nurse is often sent on an administrative course "only to return with all her nursing sense replaced by a demonical devotion to administrative bureaucracy."

"In short, nurses have become victims of their own bureaucracy, their desks piled high with 100 different forms."

He described federal interventions in the health field, including the shared-cost programs of hospital insurance, as "blackmail or bribery with your own provincial funds."

Deplorable Conditions In Brazil Are Outlined

NAPANEE — Speaking in the Free Methodist Church Sunday evening, Mrs. Wendell Cartner stated that because of lack of employment, large sections of Brazilian cities have people with no income whatever, living by begging and by salvaging food from the garbage cans of the middle and upper classes. Knowing this housewives, particularly of the middle class, carefully wrap discarded food which is fit for human consumption, and place it on the tops of their garbage cans.

Mrs. Cartner and her husband have just returned from Brazil, where they spent two years on a volunteer basis, on a Christian Literature Crusade. Although they lived in a comfortable apartment in the middle class area of Recife in Brazil, most of their work was in the slums with the destitute. They found the people friendly and grateful for attention, and for the literature and assistance given them.

Some organizations working in Brazil tend to ignore the very poor, the speaker said. The Mormons, for example, who come with plenty of money, build large places of worship, but work only with the upper and middle classes. The American Peace Corps is not popular, as its members tend to segregate themselves, living in a colony in homes built on the beach, with their own stores. Mr. and Mrs. Cartner did their shopping in the markets and stores used by the general public, and tried to integrate with the inhabitants. They were well received and trusted.

The cleavage between the three classes is very distinct, the upper class showing no lack of money in spite of inflation, but remaining to itself. Styles, coming directly from Europe are more advanced than in the United States and Canada.

Returning to Canada, Mr. and Mrs. Cartner find that their three-year-old daughter speaks Portuguese more fluently than English, although only English is spoken in the home. She learned Portuguese from her playmates in Recife.

Student Takes Part in Films On Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — A beautiful, 19-year-old blonde is one way to add continuity to three half-hour films on Toronto — especially when the budget is only $12,000.

The films, starring Peggy Wente of Toronto, an English student at the University of Michigan, are for secondary school geography classes and sponsored by the Metropolitan Education Television Association.

Peggy appears frequently, zipping through as bus passenger, computer operator, swimmer and farm hand in the series called City in Motion, City of Plenty and City of Change.

They attempt to show students some of the problems in transporting, feeding and designing a huge urban centre like Toronto.

Neil McLean, META school television supervisor, says: "Our first concern is that it be good television and then that it be educational. Too often it has been the other way around."

Couple Mark 50th Anniversary

'Mr., Mrs. Wm. Andrew

Mr. and Mrs. William Andrew were honored on Sunday afternoon and evening at the home of their niece, Mrs. Ernest Morton and Mr. Morton in Thomasburg when well over 200 persons called to greet them on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary.

The honored couple were married in Napanee in 1919 where Mrs. Andrew taught school and Mr. Andrew was a stationary engineer. They spent most of their life on their farm at Roslin until Mr. Andrew retired in 1957 and moved to Cannifton. Both are enjoying good health and are ardent card players. Gardening is their favorite hobby.

Along with the hostess Mrs. Morton, the couple's three daughters Mrs. T. E. (Ruth) Plane of Toronto; Mrs. C. G. (Dode) Walker of Toronto and Mrs. D. R. (Shirley) Woodcox) of Belleville welcomed the many guests at the door. There are also five grandchildren and eight great grandchildren. A great nephew of the couple, Garry Holland was in charge of the guest book.

The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion with the focal point of interest, however, the attractive tea table with golden lace cloth centred with an elaborate three-tier anniversary cake. Pouring tea in the afteroon were Mrs. J. Coulter, Mrs. George Shorey, Mrs. Freeman Holgate and Mrs. Jordan Latchford, and in the evening, Mrs. Willard McTaggart and Mrs. Ronald Hagerman, Noble Grand of Crescent Rebekah Lodge 139 of which Mrs. Andrew is a member.

A number of close relatives served throughout the celebration and these included Mrs. Cyril Latchford, Mrs. John Stephens, Mrs. W. Belch, Mrs. R. N. Plane, Miss Wannieta Higgins, Mrs. Carol Lessard, Mrs. Joe Brown, Mrs. Ken Shields, Miss Susan Plane, Mrs. Arthur Freeburn and Mrs. Murray Freeburn.

The bride and bridegroom of 50 years were the recipients of many beautiful gifts which were arranged for viewing by Mrs. Howard Holland, Miss Laurie Ann Holland and Miss Debbie Walker. Congratulatory messages were also received and these included telegrams from Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, local M.P. Lee Grills, Clarke Rollins M.P.P. and John Robarts, Ontario Premier.

'Meals On Wheels' Topic at College Guild Meeting

An attractive valentine-decorated table greeted the Albert College Guild when they gathered in the Manor for their February meeting.

Following the opening, president Mrs. Hugh McKay, introduced Mrs. E. Hickey who was in charge of the program, beginning with worship. She shared with the members a message on "The poetry of the Old Testament." She listened to Mrs. Ned Pratt, wife of the late well-known Canadian poet give this some time ago.

Mrs. Hickey quoted some of the old figures of speech; lines from Job, "The literary masterpieces of the Bible." Job doesn't find answers to his problems, but he does find God.

The guest speaker was Mrs. Ralph Walsh, co-ordinator of "Meals on Wheels" in Belleville. She had close attention as she related the two-year history of this project in this city. In the first year it was by way of experiment, started by Mrs. J. E. Utley who had studied it in England. This past year it has been in full operation.

This valuable community service originated in England, and in this country in Brantford. In Belleville there are 12 churches providing kitchens and volunteer workers. Each church carries the responsibility, every Wednesday, for a month. At present ten participants have lunch at the church and 19 meals are delivered.

Since many meals must be prepared to meet the requirements of special diets, there must be intelligent handling of food. To deliver the meal so that the dish should be hot, is hot. And the dish that should be cold, is cold, requires the efficient packaging which these volunteers have achieved. The delivery takes about three quarters of an hour.

The magic touch of imagination goes into this good meal, produced for 50 cents. The capable volunteers work is under the leadership of a committee of three, Miss K. Daly, Mrs. J. Buchanan, and Mrs. G. Couture.

Mrs. R. D. Wright sang two numbers and Mrs. C. W. Smith thanked soloist, speaker, and the faithful social committee.

Mrs. H. McFee and Mrs. H. McKay served at the present tea hour.

'She's An Angel'

Pretty Blonde Nurse Aids Sick On Skid Road

CHICAGO (AP) — There is one Joy on Skid Road.

She is Joy Shafer, 24, a pretty, blonde nurse who bandages "wine sores," passes out pills to curb the shakes, orders medical help for those who want it, and tries to offer hope to men who have none.

"She's an angel," said a white-haired man standing outside a cheap saloon.

Each morning Joy gets off the commuter train among the sparkling glass and steel towers downtown. She walks down West Madison Street three blocks to the Salvation Army clinic where she works 10 hours a day.

Many of the men wave to her. Some try to bum the price of a drink. She always refuses.

"I get so mad at the businessmen downtown who give them money," she said.

At the clinic, in an old red brick building, a dozen men wait in an outer room.

Joy and her assistant, Karen Dudenhofer, 24, sort the ailments. Mrs. Dudenhofer calls men who need fresh bandages. Joy handles the colds, coughs and shakes.

"Jerry, you sit on the stool," Joy orders.

An unshaven man in his 40s turns away and mutters, "I'm relying on you . . . my leg . . . I needed an excuse. I been walking the street all night. I'm cold."

"When did you have your last drink?"

"I had nothing for eight hours."

"If I give you pills for your nerves you have to sit in the basement. All right?"

Jerry stumbles through a doorway and heads across the street to the Salvation Army mission. A mild tranquillizer will be sent to the desk clerk. Jerry gets a pill as long as he stays in the basement.

"It's the only detoxification centre we have," Joy explained. "It's not nice, but it's warm and the only sure way to make them stop drinking while they're taking pills."

The men in the examination room sit on 12 metal chairs. Half of them roll up a trouser leg to expose open sores and discolored skin.

"The sores—some people call them wine sores—are initiated by drinking," Karen said. "They get a rash and they scratch it.

"Or a cut not taken care of . . . their nutrition is so low they don't heal."

Examinations go on all morning and through the afternoon. Some patients are on a rehabilitation program.

"I ain't had a drink since Christmas Eve, Joy."

"A man can do anything he wants," she answered, "if he wants to do it bad enough.

"Maybe with the help of God.

Joy is the daughter of a Dayton, Ohio, minister. She attended nursing school in Chicago and spent a year at the Moody Bible Institutes course in missionary nursing.

Joy has no fear of working with drunks.

"I'm not afraid of walking through here every night. Partly, because the guys protect me. Second, there are no submoral men here. If anything, these guys are probably alcoholics because they're too moral. They think too much."

Joy has been at the clinic since 1967. Her worst experience happened last week.

"A man died here, she said. "Right there.

"He was a lawyer. He always came in to talk to me. Sometimes I had no time and I'd tell him to go away. He was reaching out for something or someone.

"He was very scared when he died. I didn't know what to say to him in those last few minutes. I told him God loved him. I wish I had said something to him all those other times."

Couple Focal Point Of Community Celebration

2ND THURLOW — Friends, neighbors and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Manley Mitchell gathered at the Aid Hall recently in honor of their daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Bell (nee Carolyn Mitchell) who were recently married.

The gathering was called to order by Mrs. J. Chumbley. Mrs. Robert Atkins read an appropriate address, signed on behalf of the community by Mrs. Harry Thomson, Mrs. S. Ray, Mrs. Clifton Grills and Mrs. Ralph Greatrix.

Euchre was enjoyed, with prizes being won by: Mrs. S. Ray; Robert Atkins and Frank Pound.

Mrs. S. Ray presented the couple with a purse of money with best wishes for the future.

Mr. and Mrs. Bell responded graciously for the gift, and invited all to come and visit them in their new home on Sidney St. in Belleville. Lunch was later served, and a social time was enjoyed.

Reports Given at Club Meetings

PRINCE-EDWARD BELLEVILLE
LADIES' CLUB

Prince Edward-Belleville Ladies' Club recently held their monthly meeting, with an attendance of 34, and two visitors.

The meeting was a special occasion celebrating the 26th anniversary of the founding of the club, which was organized by Mrs. M. B. Weese in Feb. It has been about four years since Mrs. Weese has been able to attend meetings — she is now a patient in Sheppard's Nursing Home.

President, Mrs. F. Henderson opened the meeting. Minutes of the Jan. meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. A. Mitchell. The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. L. Fox.

Mrs. O. White read several letters of thanks from Mrs. M. Dempsey; Mrs. C. Greene and Mrs. L. McCoy. A letter from Mrs. A. Trumpour with a donation of $2 program was beaded by Mrs. was read.

The group in charge of the F. Bedell, Mrs. L. Sharpe and Mrs. Jewells. A poem was read by Mrs. F. Bedell, and a solo was rendered by Mrs. L. Wannamaker.

Mrs. F. Bedell introduced Mrs. M. Wallbridge and Mrs. O. Sills from Prince Edward county, who delighted all by showing slides of their trips to the East Coast and California.

Mrs. F. Bedell thanked both women, and presented them with a gift. In charge of the March meeting, will be Mrs. M. Welch and Mrs. Moires.

Mrs. F. Henderson thanked everyone, and later, the group in charge served a delicious lunch.

A.N.A.F.
LADIES' AUXILIARY

The regular meeting of the A.N.A.F. Ladies' Auxiliary was held Monday, Feb. 17 in the club roms at 187 Front St. with Comrade president, Alice Storms presiding.

The meeting began with the opening ceremonies followed by the rules of order during which the chairman of the sick committee mentioned a considerable number of members were sick at home and two members in hospital.

The draws were won by Janet MacDonald and Betty Grose.

A lunch was served later.

Dues are to be paid before the end of March.

Home and School News

HILLCREST SCHOOL

Hillcrest Home and School held their Feb. meeting recently in the new auditorium.

Don Wishart, principal of Hillcrest gave an interesting talk about the new teaching methods.

With references taken from the Hall-Dennis report and a book titled "The Non-graded Elementary" with Goodlad Anderson, he listed the advantages and disadvantages of the new system.

Mr. Wishart then conducted a tour through the new classroom, explaining that three grades would be working together at their own speed.

At the conclusion of the tour, Mr. Belch invited every one to coffee, served by the social committee.

Engagement Notice

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Davies of Belleville announce the engagement of their only daughter Carolyn Joy to Lyle Harry McKee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry McKee, also of Belleville. The marriage will take place on Saturday, April 5 at 1 p.m., in Eastminster United Church, Belleville.

Women to Receive Equal Pay

LONDON (AP) — For the first time in British industry, women are offered the same pay as men under an agreement reached between union leaders and the Ford Motor Co.

In return, the women must work the same overtime and shifts as the men.

The offer is part of a new pay deal for nearly 47,000 men and women which will cost Ford of Britain an extra £5 000,000 a year.

Women will get increases of up to £3 $7.80 a week and men up to 35 shillings $4.55. The minimum for both will now be £16 10s $41.60 a week.

15-year-old Teenager Likes Sniffing Glue

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fifteen-year-old Shirley likes sniffing glue, and is not about to stop.

Outwardly she looks like any other mini-skirted youngster, but she has been sniffing glue for four or five years, and with a coy smile says she wouldn't really mind if she went insane.

Shirley was sitting in an office of the Children's Aid Society of Vancouver, not far from her foster home. Because she was under the society's care she had gone four weeks without sniffing glue, but said she intended to start again soon.

She started sniffing glue after reading about it in a book, she says. Her appetite grew from one small tube a day to three. Now, "I don't want to stop."

CAS youth section supervisor Bob Bently said there were other youngsters the society couldn't bring in because the office "couldn't contain them."

"They'd attack you," he said.

Some youngsters, he added, sniff a dozen tubes of glue at a time.

At Home

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Callaghan and family extend a warm invitation to friends, relatives and neighbors to call at their home, 163 Albert Street, on Sunday, Feb. 23, from 2.30 to 5.30 p.m., on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary.

More Women to Be Appointed to Superior Courts

FREDERICTON (CP) — Appointment of judges should be based only on qualifications, with no consideration of sex.

That was the opinion of New Brunswick's Justice Minister Bernard Jean when asked to comment on a statement by the federal justice minister, John Turner, that the federal government is considering the appointment of more women to provincial superior courts.

Mr. Turner made the statement after a cabinet meeting with the executive of the National Council of Women when they presented their annual brief.

The meeting was told by Prime Minister Trudeau that "society must be shaken to its senses" to free women from discrimination and allow them adequate scope for their talents.

Specifically concerning women judges, Mr. Jean said that if a woman "is competent in her field, if she is a competent and qualified practising lawyer, then the fact that she is a woman should not be a consideration at all." "It should have no bearing whatever on whether or not she gets the appointment."

This view was supported by John P. Palmer of Saint John, vice-president of the New Brunswick division of the Canadian Barristers' Society.

He said the problem is that many women who study law "are reluctant to take up court work which would help qualify them for such an appointment."

"Many of them go into trust work, concentrate on conveyancing, or accept appointments which do not provide them with the experience in trial work which is essential."

Trial work required a knowledge of evidence and procedures necessary for any lawyer to qualify as a competent judge. Few women in New Brunswick had this experience.

Only one woman lawyer in the province holds a judicial appointment. She is Mrs. Robert Ogilvie of Fredericton, a deputy magistrate and a judge of the family court. She is also a member of the royal commission on the status of women, wife of a doctor and mother of four daughters.

Mrs. Dorothy Huges King of Fredericton and Mrs. M. Muriel Ryan of Saint John are the only women in New Brunswick who are Queen's Counsels. Mrs. King is a member of a Fredericton law firm and Mrs. Ryan has been a trust officer.

A prominent member of the New Brunswick bar now living in Ottawa, Louise Lynch, a member of the National Parole Board, is also a Queen's Counsel. The New Brunswick Barristers' Society has nine other women members.

Ann Landers

Friend Should Take Allergy Tests

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Is it possible that my boyfriend is allergic to me? Lately when we are together he breaks out in a rash and starts to itch like crazy. Believe me, this can ruin a romantic moment.

ANN LANDERS

At first I thought it might be my wool sweater, but the same thing happened when I wore silk and cotton dresses. One day, as an experiment, I took almost everything off and he itched worse than ever. Does this mean we can't get married? Please check with your consultants and get some word back to me immediately. If you say go to a doctor he has promised that he will go. Thank you for any help you can give us. — WORRIED WENDY.

DEAR WENDY: Your boyfriend might be allergic to something you are wearing other than clothing, such as makeup, hair spray or perfume. He should go at once to an allergist who will tell him what to bring in for testing. If the tests reveal no allergies and the itching persists, he should consider the possibility that the rash is caused by an emotional problem. He might be "itching" to get married, or he may be afraid of marriage and "itching" to stay single. In any case, be careful with those experiments, Buttercup, or you might wind up with an additional problem.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your reply to the widow who translated a former friend's sympathy note as "Get Lost," could only have been written by a woman such as you — one who is happily and safely married.

You said an interesting and alert widow not only hangs on to her old friends but makes new ones. You are partly right. She'll make new friends all right. If she isn't careful she'll find herself surrounded by droves of widows, divorcees and maiden ladies — all just as lonely and isolated from married people as she is. After awhile she'll resign herself to the truth — it is better to go to the theatre or a movie with another lonely woman that to sit home in a bathrobe.

I hope the widow who wrote to you will ask herself, "How many widows did I include in my social life when my husband was alive?" It is a good question for married women to ask themselves, too. God alone knows whose husband will be next. — WASH. D.C.

DEAR D.C.: Your letter is sure to prick the conscience of some and jog the memory of others. Please read the next letter. It could be your laugh for the day.

* * *

DEAR ANN: Don't close the discussion on widows without adding this one last thought. As a widow, I am accustomed to being left out of things by old "friends." But I get furious when wives whisk their husbands away from me at cocktail parties and civic functions as if I were a schemeing hussy with evil designs.

Most of the old goats have hearing aids, emphysema, and are loaded with liver spots. Who'd want them anyway?

There are more bad marriages around than good ones, and nobody knows this better than Ann Landers. My marriage was not a very good one but I kept my mouth shut and never let on to anyone. Of course I am lonely, but I am also reasonably content and far from miserable. The last thing I want is to get married again. So tell those smug women to stop worrying. They are safe. — DUSK.

DEAR DUSK: I don't need to tell them, Honey, you did. And I thank you.

Foster Parents Sent Letter of Appreciation

By DORIS CLARK

This letter was sent to foster parents by the couple who adopted Jimmy. The foster parents had looked after and loved Jimmy for several months, at a time when his need for love was deep.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Smith: Jimmy is asleep now, so I am free to write you a note. We want to thank you very much indeed for caring for him so well until we were able to bring him home. He is so healthy and happy and loving that we know he has been well cared for as well as loved. I know that it was very hard to part with him after all these months. . .

He cried during his bath the first night, but went to sleep quickly and easily. When I changed him at 3 a.m., he cried again because he saw strange things around him, but soon he went off to sleep again. In the morning he woke up and played happily . . .

Yesterday we had a picture taken of him in your Christmas velvet suit . . .

Many, many thanks again,
From Jimmys new Mother and Father.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith may never see Jimmy again. Yet they will have the satisfaction of knowing they have contributed greatly to his well-being. And they have enjoyed one of the unique experiences of parenthood — the giving of love and care to a child purely for the child's sake.

Dear Doris: I am a widow of 50 years. I plan on being married again to a man (60) who was never married.

(1) Do I have a corsage or bouquet? (2) Is it proper to have someone give me away?

This will be a quiet wedding with only close friends and relatives present. — Proper Procedure.

Dear Proper: (1) Optional. Perhaps a corsage is more in keeping with the quiet, intimate nature of your wedding.

(2) Also optional. However, you might have a male relative or close family friend escort you to the church. Once there, instead of walking up the aisle, you wait with the groom, the best man and maid or matron of honor, in the vestry until the clergyman starts things.

Then the best man would escort you to your place in the chancel, while the groom escorted the maid of honor.

Confidential to Program Chairman: Young people between 14 and 18 years of age are mixing a lot, talking, exploring all manner of topics. The talk is often about problems of conduct. Here are some discussion-starting posers:

1. How can you tell what's right and what's wrong?
2. What's wrong with petting?
3. What's wrong with taking an occasional drink (not alcoholism)?
4. What about smoking?
5. What should be a Christian's attitude toward gossip?
6. What's wrong with gambling? Slot machines? Small bets?
7. When it is a case of crowd pressure versus one's best convictions, what is the best way to take one's stand?
8. Is lying ever justified?

CLUB 4-H NOTES

STITCH 'N TYME

The third meeting of the Wallbridge III was held at the home of Mrs. Reg. McCurdy on Feb. 11.

The minutes were read by Cathy Cavanagh.

There was no important business at this meeting.

Mrs. Chisholm led the discussion of "Uses for the Blanket Stitch" as members copied the points down on illustrated sheet.

Mrs. McCurdy explained how the enlargement of a design is done.

Mrs. Chisholm also showed how to make the single, closed and double feather stitch and both leaders helped to complete a sample of each on our own.

RIVER VALLEY 4-H

STIRLING — River Valley 4-H Club have held two meetings at the schoolhouse. The leaders of the needlecraft project are Mrs. Gerald Brooks and Mrs. Roy Irven.

Eight girls are enrolled for the course. The president is Susan Bush and treasurer is Connie Tucker. The mothers of the members were invited to attend the first meeting.

CHURCH GROUPS

VICTORIA WILLING WORKERS

Mrs. Peter Moran entertained the members of the Victoria Willing Worker group in her home for their Feb. meeting. There were 16 women present.

President, Mrs. Weatheral called the meeting to order. A valentine reading was followed by the business section of the meeting.

Plans were made for the March meeting — a "games night" for the community — at the Townsend home. Mrs. Montgomery had charge of the program and gave an interesting talk on Japan.

Two recordings of some of the church's work in Japan were played, and pictures shown all adding interest to the informative program on Japan.

Appreciation was expressed to Mrs. Moran for opening her home for the meeting and to Mrs. Montgomery for the program by Mrs. Townsend. The meeting closed, after which lunch was served and a social time enjoyed.

W.M.S. MARMORA

The Women's Missionary Society of the Free Methodist Church, Marmora, held its Feb. meeting in the parsonage with president, Mrs. Ritchie Wells, in the chair. This meeting, was planned by Mrs. W. A. McMillan and Mrs. Edward Finch.

A talk was given by Mrs. McMillan on three of the Society's largest mission stations in Africa — Rwanda, Burundi and the Congo.

The work accomplished by volunteers in our service abroad, was outlined by the pastor, Rev. W. A. McMillan, who said that the majority of the volunteers give up their time and talents from six months to three years, paying their own transportation to and from the field.

A reading, "Compassion Reaches Out" was given by Mrs. Ray Bonter; and an article "Discovering India" was read by Mrs. Everett Barrons.

A steering committee to plan the missionary convention to be held here on April 11, 12, 13 was suggested by the pastor. The stewardship secretary promoted the needs of missionaries on the foreign fields and it was decided to pack and send several boxes as soon as possible.

Lunch was served by the hostess, Mrs. McMillan and a time of fellowship was enjoyed by all.

Club Activities

WHITE CANE CLUB

President Clarence Morris presided at the recreation meeting of the White Cane Club held at Kiwanis Centre on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Maude Rollins presided at the piano for the opening songs. Pat Baverstock and Earl Chapman won the birthday prizes.

Helen Wardhaugh sold tickets on a gift donated by Harvey Bailey. The proceeds of the draw will go to help replenish the mobile eye clinic in Madurai, India. Lillian Bridge won the draw.

Two interesting Valentine contests were conducted and were won by Pat Baverstock and Harvey Bailey.

Table bowling rounded out a most enjoyable evening, the winners being Elizabeth Davis, Mary Gregory, Clarence Morris and Aurel Caissie.

Members of the Kiwanis Ladies Auxiliary served a tasty lunch which was much appreciated by the members. The Lions Club provided the transportation for the evening.

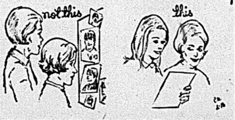
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Carol drives me wild. She thinks she is in love with that Hollywood singer. She has the walls of her room covered with his pictures, and she plays his records constantly. I'm going to make her get rid of those silly pictures."

Neighbor: "Kids do kookie things these days."

Carol, like many teen-age girls, may go overboard in her enthusiasm for a popular singer or a movie star or a football hero — somebody obviously out of reach. Be understanding and don't make too big an issue of things and her "love affair" will cool with maturity."

If a teen-ager has a normal and fairly happy social life, don't worry too much about her romantic dreams. Remember when you yearned over Cary Grant, or was it Rock Hudson?

Kitchen Tested Recipies

Chocolate Souffle in Individual Dishes

By MARY MOORE

The very word souffle scares off some experienced cooks and here I am today giving it as a lesson to learning cooks. There is a good reason — it is easy and delicious.

My brother remembers the souffles served for dessert on Cunard liners in their heyday and sometimes when his family comes to dinner we pamper him and make them.

You do not need a straight-sided souffle dish for this but you do need individual baking dishes, preferably brown earthenware, to bake and serve them in. Of course you can make it in a straight-sided dish if you have one of the lovely things but individual ones are recommended for they hold their height and heat longer.

CHOCOLATE SOUFFLE
(serves 5 or 6 — number depends on size of individual baking dishes)

1 cup milk
1 square (1 oz.) unsweetened chocolate, cut into quarters
one-third cup sugar
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon flour
3 eggs, yolks and whites separated
1 teaspoon vanilla

Into a small saucepan measure milk, chocolate and sugar and over low heat, stir frequently until chocolate is melted. Meanwhile in a large saucepan blend together butter and flour, then stir milk-chocolate mixture into them until thick. Beat egg yolks together a little in a small bowl and stir some of the hot chocolate mixture into them, then stir this into remaining hot chocolate sauce over very low heat until it thickens a little more. Remove from heat, cool and stir in vanilla (See Notes). Beat egg whites until stiff and fold in until barely incorporated. Have ready near the stove 5 or 6 well buttered individual earthenware (or pyrex) baking dishes standing on a large shallow pan (such as broiler pan). Spoon souffle evenly into each. Add boiling water to pan to ½" depth. Carefully transfer to oven and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 20 minutes or until puffed and slightly separated from sides of baking dishes. Serve at once on tea plates protected with small folded paper serviettes or kleenex.

NOTES: 1) If you make this souffle in one large straight-sided souffle dish it will require longer baking — about 30 to 40 minutes. 2) Do not bake this in advance. It must be served as soon as it is baked — so gauge your timing well. I put ours in the oven when I took out the Veal Cordon Bleu (last Tues.) and they baked while we ate the main course. We had to wait five minutes until they were done to perfection.

Women's Institutes

UNIONDALE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

Mrs. Keith Bush welcomed a large number of members to the monthly meeting of Uniondale Women's Institute, held at her home recently. President, Mrs. R. Burkitt presided during the meeting.

The secretary, Mrs. E. Sine announced the annual officers' conference, to be held in Guelph on April 30 and May 1.

Summary day for "vegetables with a flair" will be held in the Stirling Community Hall on Feb. 12. Plans were made to attend. Uniondale visiting week at Hastings Manor is scheduled for July 27 to Aug. 2.

Mrs. G. Herrington, current events convener, gave pertinent facts about the century farm of Mrs. Keith Bush.

Mrs. G. Sine reported for the consumers' association. Mrs. E. Anderson had the topic of "human rights". Both reports were informative and interesting. Mrs. P. Tracey read a paper supplementing Mrs. Anderson's topic, and Mrs. F. Phillips also added some more thoughts on this same topic.

After the close of the meeting, a social time was spent during lunch.

Laugh-In Still Most Popular TV Series

NEW YORK (AP) — Monday night's power-backed NBC line-up—Laugh-In, Bob Hope and Jack Benny specials in succession—probably ran the evening's Nielsen ratings up to the stratosphere.

Even if Laugh-In is beginning to look a little tired around the edges, it is still TV's most popular weekly series, and the two hours that followed measured up to the high standards of the two pros who starred in them.

Hope's program turned into an old-fashioned vaudeville show. He played the magician in one of those magic acts that misfired. George Burns, with the help of a young protege, ran through one of the nonsense routines he used to do with Gracie Allen. Martha Raye mugged and clowned her way through a song number. And Hope and Bing Crosby did a comedy turn full of elderly, dreadful—and funny jokes.

Jack Benny and company had a really hilarious hour, ostensibly to celebrate the star's 75th birthday. From the moment Lawrence Welk opened the show by doing a Benny impersonation, to a witty and bright study of the classic Western, the show was full of surprise turns.

Lucille Ball did a song and dance number with the chorus boys. A pride—or maybe it was a gaggle—of penguins occasionally interrupted Jack's discussions with the audience by waddling across the stage—and one of them was on roller skates.

The song, dance, monologues and nonsense led up to a big birthday cake.

The thought crossed this viewer's mind toward the end of three solid hours of variety-type entertainment: Does the audience that finds Hope witty and bright and Benny warmly funny also think that Tiny Tim—who was blowing kisses around Laugh-In earlier—is a comical figure. The Laugh-In crowd obviously finds him a figure of fun, sometimes to a point where this viewer finds it uncomfortable to watch.

A Changed Hatfield?

TORONTO (CP) — Shortly after Bernie Geoffrion was named coach of New York Rangers last June, a "reporter" telephoned and asked him about the prospects for the coming National Hockey League season.

Geoffrion spent about 20 minutes outlining his hopes for the club in his first year as coach. Then the "reporter" identified himself as Vic Hadfield, told Geoffrion he would see him at training camp and hung up.

In 1964, Hadfield went long distance.

Rumors had been circulating all summer that linemate Earl Ingarfield was going to be treated, so Hadfield put a call in to Lethbridge, Alta.

He talked to Ingarfield's wife for about five minutes, then left word for Earl to return the call to Milt Schmidt, general manager of Boston Bruins.

The big left winger's reputation as a practical joker is well known. Things got so bad during the 1964-65 season that then-coach Red Sullivan, now with Pittsburgh Penguins, nailed a pair of Hadfield's $35 shoes to the dressing room floor in an attempt to get even.

Meanwhile, general manager Emile Francis says he would like to have a team of Hadfields and it's no wonder. The 28-year-old native of Oakville, Ont., has 23 goals and 34 assists in 58 games and is the Rangers leading scorer.

"I'm baffled by the lack of consideration he received in the first-half all-star selections," Francis said in a recent interview.

"I know you have to consider (Frank) Mahovlich and (Bobby) Hull, but the way Vic is going, he should get a lot of second-half votes."

No one expected Hadfield to become a goal-scorer.

When he broke in with the Rangers in 1961 after one season with Buffalo in the American Hockey League, general manager Muzz Patrick as much as told him the only way he was going to stick with the club was to be aggressive.

Hadfield spent 151 minutes in the penalty box in 1963-64 and despite the fact that he's having his best season ever, he says his style of play hasn't changed that much.

"'Inkow if the opposition has the puck, I've got to go in and take it away from them," Hadfield said in an interview.

"But I'm not taking as many bad penalties—tripping and charging—because I'm skating well enough to stay with the play.'

Individual Is Important

Integrity of City Hall Eye-opener for Student Mayors

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The five young people who served as student mayors-for-a week at city hall learned as much about themselves as they did about civic government.

The surprising conclusion reached by the five was revealed in a group interview held following the council session in which Mayor Russell Scott presented them with souvenirs of their experience.

The students, elected at their schools to take part in the Rotary Club sponsored program, were Debbie Thompson, Centennial Secondary School; Judy Schrieder, Nicholson Catholic College; Lawrence Dempsey, BCI; Paul Haggis, Quinte and Harry Smith, Moira.

"I gained 10 times as much practical, general knowledge in a week of following the mayor around as I could have in the same length of time in school," claimed Harry Smith.

He nodded his agreement as Lawrence added, "I learned things about myself as I watched politicians and city officials at work. I discovered aptitudes and inclinations I hadn't realized I had, and I developed greater responsibility."

"When I saw how responsible everyone at city hall was, I became more responsible myself," Debbie explained to a chorus of agreement from the other four.

Besides the personal insight each student gained from his or her week as "mayor", each brought away a vivid and lasting impression of civic affairs.

For Paul, the complexity of civic administration came as a surprise.

"I didn't think there was that much going on," he said.

Lawreice claimed a new evaluation of others resulted from his experiences.

"Most people want to do what's right and the right approach to each person by politicians and officials can bring this out," he said.

Judy said she gained an appreciation of the amount of time aldermen take to do their civic duty, and Debbie said "it was fascinating to see how the mayor handles situations and issues".'

"I learned how important the individual is," said Harry. "A strong individual can rally others to support his cause, but a weak individual has to fall by the wayside. Like it or not, that's the way it is."

Citizens Need to Be Kept Better Informed Chorus 'Mayors'

Each student mayor returned to his school after his week at city hall to describe the experience to fellow students.

The following are the questions the student mayors are asked most frequently, and their answers.

What was the most interesting part of the experience?

Paul: "Mayor Scott!"

Judy: "You took my line."

Harry: "The efficiency of the city manager J. R. Reynolds."

Lawrence: "Having a professional manager responsible to council is the most efficient way of operating a city."

Paul: "It's too bad everyone can't see the work done by city hall staff that people never hear about. Mr. Reynolds carries a big load and never gets the recognition he should."

All: "Put that down."

What was the most disappointing aspect of your week?

Debbie: "This wasn't a disappointment, really, but I found meetings on money matters dull."

Harry: "But that's where politics come in, with money matters."

Lawrence: "Because that's where the taxpayers come in. They're always worried about the mill rate."

Harry: "I was disappointed that council spent so much time on trivia, and not enough time on important matters. They argued for a half hour over the dog pound, for instance, yet could pass a money by-law involving thousands in a few seconds."

Judy: "But the small things are important to the people. Aldermen are showing an interest in the individual when they dwell on small matters."

Should an alderman vote according to his convictions and conscience, or should be canvass the citizens and be guided by the majority opinion?

Lawrence: "He was given a mandate to act for the people when he was elected. He should vote according to his convictions and let the people vote him out next time if they don't like him."

Judy and Debbie: "The people should go down to city hall and tell the aldermen how they feel about issues so they will have a guideline when it comes to a vote."

Harry: "An alderman should form his opinion in part through listening to the people he represents, but he should be governed too by his convictions formed through a specialized knowledge of civic affairs."

Have personalities any place in civic government?

Paul: "Personalities are the issues that arouse the electorate. It's not right really, but that's the way it is."

Lawrence: "If you start cutting that up you're cutting up democracy."

Harry: "It's way out of line to say democracy is all personalities."

Judy: "In a small town you have to be concerned with personalities. Looking at only the alderman's political party or his stand on policies might work in a large city where politics is more impersonal, but in a small town you can't cast aside the idea of "what sort of person is he?' "

Debbie: "I agree."

Are you in favor of regional government?

General chorus: "Yes!"

Lawrence: "It will spread the burden of taxation over a larger area and lighten each individual's load."

Harry: "But it will make local government more impersonal and create conflict."

Debbie: "It will resolve conflict, too; for instance, over fire protection."

Judy: "Fire protection is a perfect example of why we should have regional government. Belleville pays the major share of fire protection and the surrounding townships are getting the benefit for a fraction of the cost."

Lawrence: "Bay of Quinte pollution is another example. When all the townships surrounding the bay operate on a regional basis the problem will be solved."

Harry: "What good is curing bay pollution to Rawdon towhship? You can't just throw regional government at the people; they will have to be educated to accept it.'

Paul: "Rural and urban people are working separately on the same problems. Regional government will bring both together to tackle issues."

What can be done to stimulate interest in civic government?

Judy: "Start at grade 6, by presenting civics in an interesting way. We were just handed a booklet to read and it was so dry."

Harry: "Forcing civic government on pupils in grade 6 is just brainwashing. You shouldn't get into anything that requires reasoning before grade 10."

Debbie: "I agree with Judy. Civics can be presented from grade 6 on by assigning newspaper articles to be read at night and having the teacher prepare 10 questions for the class to answer in the morning. It would take about 10 minutes a day and it's the only way."

Belleville Mayor Gets Back Chain of Office

The city's "Mayor of the Week" program came to an official end at city council yesterday as the five student mayors were presented with cuff links and brooches. And at the same time Mayor J. Russell Scott got his chain of office back for keeps. Giving Mayor Scott back his chain of office are Debbie Thompson, Judy Schrieder, Paul Haggis, Lawrence Dempsey and Harry Smith. Mayor Scott said the students had learned a great deal about the city's operation. He hoped Rotary continued the program and that future mayors would co-operate.

Rotary Program Endorsed

Belleville Rotary Club's mayor-for-a-week program has received impassioned endorsement from the five student "mayors."

"Pray to God they keep it going. It's the greatest thing to hit this city," declared Paul Haggis following last night's council meeting.

The youth committee of Rotary under the chairmanship of Donald Thrush, initiated the program with the co-operation of Mayor Russell Scott and council.

"The committee members deserve a lot of credit for the way they looked after us, added Lawrence Dempsey. "They picked us up at our schools, introduced us around city hall and took a big interest in what we were doing."

Continuation of the program is uncertain, but if the five student mayors have their way it will be an annual event.

Brotherhood Means Acceptance Speaker Tells City Group

By BARRY GRILLS
(Staff Reporter)

Brotherhood was defined as acceptance last night by the Rev. Prof. J. B. Hardie, guest speaker at the Brotherhood Week banquet held at Eastminster United Church.

He described brotherhood as a free and open co-operation and union — acceptance of one by another. "Perhaps that is the line on which we should be walking."

Dr. Hardie said that it was all to easy to equate brotherhood with some of the cant expressions of the 20th century.

He said that brotherhood could not be equated with equality. He said that people were not equal as far as such traits as goodness and honesty were concerned.

Brotherhood cannot be equated with identity, he added. "To have identity is not to have brotherhood."

Togetherness, he said, is also not brotherhood. "I would hate to be a citizen of the world. I'm a citizen of Scotland and proud of it. The world has no traditions to inherit."

Dr. Hardie described "furious internationalism" as a "dangerous thing."

Instead he said that brotherhood was acceptance — "taking other people, not as you would like them to be, but as they are."

Dr. Hardie was optimistic about this brotherhood of acceptance saying, "I can see a marked growth in the brotherhood of this real acceptance."

As a specific example he mentioned the interprovincial visits of students in exchange programs with Quebec.

"There is a rising appreciation of the dual nature of this great country of Canada."

"I wonder if we are getting to the point where the color bar is breaking, because of acceptance."

Dr. Hardie opened his address with readings from Genesis. He asked how the editor of that book could explain the division and the unity of mankind.

"He is faced with the existential division of mankind. There is this unity and yet there is also this division."

He described the world as a "global village" drawn closely together by such technological achievements as those of communication.

Dr. Hardie said that in this global village humanity is tied together by idealogies but is divided as never before.

As an example he described "the situation of the Far East." "They are isolated because they are Marxists."

He mentioned Rhodesia, a country with 20 black men to every one white — "a country divided against itself because one man's skin is black and one man's is white."

Dr. Hardie found that this situation was also true in the Middle East. "The Jews and Arabs are cousin races. Here again is he world divided."

"We don't need to look as far afield as that. There is a seemingly unbridgable generation gap."

Dr. Hardie spoke of ghettos and religious divisions and slum areas. "This is what we have to face man's inhumanity to man."

He recommended as the road to brotherhood that humans learn to accept one another. "Accept him to be different. I expect him to have different ideas and to stand by them."

"I expect him to be a part of the unity of humanity."

He said that various expressions of generalization such as Communist China and Black Power "hide from us the essential fact that they are individuals."

"By brotherhood I mean individuals," he concluded.

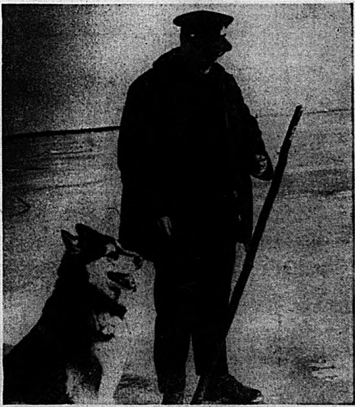
Ice Fishing Experts

Fishing under the ice with hoop nets is a job where experience counts. Purtell Quick, a veteran of more than 40 years making his living from Quinte waters, found returns light from yesterday's haul. He's continued to be lucky, however, and once harvested 16 boxes of mudcats (1,600 pounds) from one setting of a hoop net.



Checking the Situation

A systematic check of commercial fishing licences has been under way since Jan. 1 when permits were renewable. Conservation officer Jack Sinclair was busy on Brighton Bay at the west end of the Murray Canal yesterday. The officer's pet, a two-year-old malmute husky named Kiki, followed along behind his master making the rounds of the newly tagged hoop nets.

Prolonged Stalemate Looms in Pension Dispute

NEW YORK (AP) — The spectre of a prolonged stalemate in baseball's pension dispute loomed larger today as two major league clubs went through spring training motions in Florida with no name players in camp.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the players' association, said Monday night he would recommend rejection of the owners' new proposal to add $200,000 to their initial offer of $1,000,000 to the pension fund.

The players overwhelmingly rejected the original offer last month in a mail ballot. Recently, they voted not to sign 1969 contracts and not to report to training camps until a pension agreement is reached.

Catcher Thurman Munson, a rookie signed in last summer's free agent draft, was the first man to show up at the New York Yankee camp in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Munson was one of 14 fringe players expected to be on hand for today's opening Yankee workout.

Chicago White Sox, training at Sarasota, Fla., have 24 batterymen on hand.

Baltimore Orioles and Montreal Expos expected their first players to arrive at their Miami and West Palm Beach camps today.

"I think we will have about 11 men reporing," said Jim Fanning, general manager of the National League expansion Expos.

Washington was due to open camp today, but pushed the starting date back a week because the team still is officially without a manager. Ted Williams was expected to agree to a $1,000,000 package as part owner and manager later this week.

Ken Harrelson of Boston Red Sox, who led the American League in runs batted in last season, became the first name player to announce that he would report to training camp on time this spring.

Miller said he was confident the owners' new offer will be turned down by the association's executive board of player representatives from the two leagues and 24 clubs.

But he said it was likely the offer then would be submitted to the entire membership for another mail vote—a time-consuming process that could tie up negotiations for three weeks or more.

The owners made the new offer, which would boost the pension pot to $5,300,000, after refusing a players' request for arbitration.

"We don't see any necessity of the intervention of a third party," said owners representative John Gaherin.

Under normal circumstances, there'd be cause for rejoicing around the camp of any hockey team that won six and tied one of the last nine games of its schedule.

But there is no joy in Belleville - - - the Mo-Hawks have struck out.

Infected with OHA Senior A playoff fever as the season turned into the home stretch, the Mo-Hawks played their last half out in 10-8-1, a torrid pace for a seventh-place hockey club in any league.

But a record of only five wins in the first 20 games of the 39-game schedule proved too weighty a cross to bear as the hunt for one of the senior loop's six playoff berths entered the critical stages. Collingwood Kings, on the other hand, are in the playoffs despite dropping all but two of their last dozen outings.

The now-famous slow start that had the Mo-Hawks in the ludicrous position of launching a training camp a week before opening their season was attributed by the rumormongers to everything from mismanagement to leap year, but that's all water under the cash register.

Their playoff absence is particularly unfortunate, too, because right now, the Mo-Hawks are capable of beating most of their league rivals. Orillia was the only club the locals missed beating over the 39-game route.

With newcomers like Al Ferguson and Lorne O'Donnell starting to pan out and veterans like rearguards Lionel Botly and Greg Marchen returning to previous form, the Mo-Hawks were, like the jingle says, "Coming on strong."

They salvaged five wins and a tie on the road in what is known to be a "homer's" league. That total is nine points better than Kingston Aces managed, and they're in the playoffs, if you recall.

Somewhere in the five games the Mo-Hawks lost by one goal, it would be nice to post-mortemize which one would have made up the two points separating the Mo-Hawks from a tie for the sixth and last playoff spot.

We like to think it was that fateful Friday night in December when the Jones' Boys, nursing a 4-3 lead over Galt, gave the puck away in their own end to set up a Hornet goal with only nine seconds left in the third period.

Five minutes later, Galt skated off the ice 5-4 winners in overtime.

Strong points?

Well, a 4.60-neighborhood goals-against average would never win anybody a smell of the Vezina Trophy, but for a seventh-place senior hockey club, it's the equivalent of the four-minute mile.

And, despite criticism of a nomadic style of play that one night saw him sidestepped at the blueline for an opposition goal, Larry Holmes, in our book, was one of the three best goalies on the senior circuit, and a big factor in the Mo-Hawks' run at the playoffs.

There were many others — Wayne "Weiner" Brown's successful conversion to the blueline created a lot of goal set-ups from the point; Al Ferguson's stretch-drive scoring outburst after being assigned to right wing alongside nifty George Godson — still one of the best skaters, forecheckers, and diggers in the league.

Ralph Plane's hustling return to the line-up after breaking an ankle, and playing-coach Davey Jones' eagle eye around opposition nets (accounting for 20 goals)— were also vital contributions to a sound half-season of hockey from the seniors.

You won't hear too many "wait-till-next-years" around the rink these days.

Mo-Hawk management went into this season a reported $15,000 in the red, and turnouts like the 260 paid admissions for an 8-1 route of Collingwood Jan. 12 didn't exactly breed optimism for a ledger balance.

The fans kept saying "Give us a team that puts some effort into it and we'll turn out," but the largest crowd in the last eight home games (of which the Mo-Hawks won six, incidentally) was 1,600-plus — far short of bending the beams at the Market St. Forum.

Who's going to go out on the long financial limb next year?

Frankly, we're afraid to ask.

MIAMI (AP) — A Miami executive has paid $50,000 to enlist in "Arnie's Army." Hal Winkler, president of Executive Securities Inc. in Miami, donated $50,000 to the American Cancer Society to play as Arnold Palmer's partner in the Doral pro-amateur tournament. The entry fee for the Doral tournament is $1,000. Pairings are usually made by a draw, but tournament director Paul Warren said Monday an exception would be made for Winkler.

WINNIPEG (CP)—Jack McLeod, coach of Canada's national hockey team, hasn't given up hope that goalie Seth Martin will join his team for the world championship next month in Stockholm. Trail Smoke Eaters, Martin's present team, want him for the playoffs — but if they're finished by the time the Nationals leave for Stockholm, McLeod thinks Martin will join the team.

Phil Forced to Sit Out 2 Games

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Boston Bruins lost one super star Monday and regained another.

Centre Phil Esposito, the National Hockey League's leading scorer, drew a two-game suspension from league president Clarence Campbell for pushing and punching referee Bob Slain during a game at Boston Feb. 8.

But the Bruins, tied for first place in the Eastern Division with Montreal Canadiens, welcomed defenceman Bobby Orr who rejoined his team-mates for a light practice.

Esposito, who holds a 14-point margin over runner-up Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks in the scoring race, will miss games this Wednesday against Pittsburgh Penguins and Sunday against New York Rangers.

With 92 points to his credit, Esposito still will have 18 games left in which to break the NHL point record of 97 held by Hull and Stan Mikita of Chicago.

Campbell conducted an inquiry Friday into Esposito's altercation with Sloan, which occurred in the third period of a game against Philadelphia Flyers, and announced his decision Monday.

The incident took place early in the third period after the Boston centre and defenceman Larry Hale of Philadelphia were given minor penalties for slashing.

Campbell said in a statement that Esposito swore at Sloan and the referee assessed him a misconduct penalty.

"When Esposito heard the referee report the misconduct penalty, he charged at the official giving him two good shoves with his gloved hands," Campbell said. "The official immediately signalled that Esposito was out of the game and turned to get away from him.

"Esposito managed to brush aside the linesmen, followed the official for a couple of strides and then delivered a solid left-hand punch which landed on Sloan's shoulder."

The linesmen and Esposito's team-mates intervened at this point and stopped the altercation, Campbell said.

The game was on television and Campbell said he ran the tape of the dispute several times as part of the hearing.

Esposito also was fined $75—the automatic $25 and $50 assessments for a misconduct and game misconduct.

The Boston centre said at the hearing he had sworn at Hale, not Sloan.

Back in Boston, Orr reported after his workout that his tender left knee, which has kept him sidelined since Jan. 30, felt "super."

Coach Harry Sinden, however, took a "wait-and-see" attitude on whether Orr will play at Pittsburgh Wednesday.

The Bruins, who lost two weekend games, also announced that left winger Ron Murphy has recovered from a torn rib cartilage. He has missed 14 games.

Rookie winger Tom Webster will miss about 10 days because of abdominal muscle injuries, the Bruins said. Webster suffered the injuries when slashed in a game against Chicago Sunday.

NHL action resumes Wednesday with Boston at Pittsburgh, Montreal visiting Toronto Maple Leafs, Detroit Red Wings playing at New York, Oakland Seals welcoming Chicago, St. Louis Blues playing host to Philadelphia and Los Angeles Kings meeting Minnesota North Stars at Minneapolis.

Governors Expected to Reject Seals' Transfer

NEW YORK (AP) — Oakland Seals' application for transfer of their National Hockey League franchise is expected to be turned down today by the NHL's board of governors.

The Seals, struggling at the gate, are hoping for approval to move to Buffalo, N.Y., where a group headed by banker Seymour Knox III has purchased the team conditional upon its transfer.

The issue came up for review at a board of governors' meeting in Montreal last month and was tabled, but indications at that time were that the move was doomed.

"It is the desire of the league," said president Clarence Campbell, 'to remain in the Bay area.

That could mean a move across the bay from Oakland to San Francisco where the Seals would play in the Cow Palace, an old arena which lacks the glamor of the newer Oakland Coliseum.

Vancouver also is bidding for the Oakland franchise. It is expected that the governors will insist on the club remaining in the Bay area and assure Buffalo and Vancouver that the next NHL expansion would put teams in their cities.

The meeting will be followed by the annual Lester Patrick dinner, honoring Chicago's Bobby Hull and the late Eddie Jeremiah for outstanding service to hockey in the United States.

Bruins' Pace Slows; Blues Expand Margin

MONTREAL (CP) — While Boston Bruins' vaunted scoring power appears on the wane today in the wake of two successive weekend losses, the defensive armor of St. Louis Blues shows no signs of cracking.

As a result of these two factors, Boston's lead atop the National Hockey League's East Division has dissolved, but the Blues first-place margin in the West Division has expanded.

While Boston is currently tied with Montreal at 78 points in the East, but with two games in hand, the St. Louis aggregation has lengthened its lead to 23 points over second-place Oakland Seals in the West.

Despite the general Boston falloff, Bruins centre Phil Esposito managed to maintain a 14-point lead over his nearest rival —Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks—in the individual scoring race.

However, he received a two-game suspension Monday from league President Clarence Campbell for an altercation with referee Bob Sloan in Boston Feb. 8 and will miss the Bruins next two games.

Esposito has 92 points on 36 goals and 56 assists, while Hull has scored 37 times and assisted in 41 other Chicago goals for 78 points. Hull's goal output is the highest in the league.

In third place is Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings, one point behind Hull, while Stan Mikita of Chicago is fourth with 73 points.

Jean Beliveau and Yvan Cournoyer—linemates with Montreal Canadiens—moved up to fifth and sixth places respectively. Beliveau has 70 points, three more than Cournoyer and veteran centre Alex Delvecchio of Detroit.

The West Division's scoring leader, Red Berenson of St. Louis, is eighth with 66 points, including a division-leading 28 goals.

The core of the Blues' success this season has been the goaltending of veterans Glenn Hall and Jacques Plante.

Hall recorded two shutouts last week and Plante allowed only two goals in as many games to drop the team's combined goals-against average to 1.98. The two shutouts gave Hall a leading eight for the season and raised the team's total to 13.

Although there have been as many shutouts registered by teams in a season, there has not been a team record of 14 shutouts since the late George Hainsworth set the all-time mark of 22 while with Canadiens in 1928-29.

The Blues need only one more win to clinch a playoff spot in their own division. They now have 74 points in 59 games.

Forward Forbes Kennedy of Philadelphia Flyers took over the dubious honor of penalty leader last week and his 193-minute total is the third-highest in NHL history, being surpassed only by the record 273 minutes set by Howie Young, then with Detroit, in 1962-63 and 202 minutes by Lou Fontinato of New York Rangers in 1955-56.

Calgary Skip Aims for Third Canadian Title

By STERLING TAYLOR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Only three skips have won more than two Canadian men's curling championships and skip Ron Northcott of Calgary, a two-time titlist, faces formidable opposition at Oshawa March 3-7 in his attempt to join the Big Three.

Rinks from Northern Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia will be making their first apperance at the Canadian championship. The seven others in the round, robin competition have either been to the tournament previously or have personnel who have taken part.

Ernie Richardson of Regina set the precedent when he won four Canadian and world championships after Ken Watson of Winnipeg and Matt Baldwin of Edmonton had won three Canadian titles before the advent of international competition.

Northcott, who won his first Canadian and world titles in 1966 with George Fink at third, Ernie Sparkes second and Fred Storey lead, returned as the Alberta champion in 1967 but lost in his bid to defend his national championship.

The Calgary sharpshooter returned in 1968, with Jim Shiels at third, Sparkes and Storey, and won his second Canadian title before going on to become the second skip to win more than one world championship.

The Northern Ontario rink from Kenora is skipped by newcomer Terry Johnson, while the other novice entries are skipped by Kevin Smale of Prince George, B.C., and Bob Robinson of Winnipeg.

After that, the list of competitors reads like a list of old movie re-runs.

Newfoundland's crew is skipped by 1968 provincial champion Bill Piercey of St. John's, although he has three new members on the rink.

Peter Hope, a former Nova Scotia champion from Dartmouth, will lead that province's foursome, while defending Prince Edward Island titlist Allan Smith of Charlottetown will be back this year.

Hap Maybey of Moncton, who has represented New Brunswick on several occasions dating back to the early 1960's when he threw last stones with his father calling the shots, heads the list of experienced curlers from the Atlantic provinces.

Quebec and Ontario will both be represented by members of former provincial champions making their first appearance as skips.

Earl Carson of Bagotville will be making his fourth trip to the national tournament, while Ken Buchan of London, Ont., will be appearing for the third time.

Former Saskatchewan champion Bob Picerking of Milestone will skip that province's entry.

The P.E.I. rink, however, will be the only one that has curled in the national championship as a unit.

Smith will again have Doug Bell playing third, Bob Dillon second and Merrill Wigginton lead. The rink had a 7-3 won-lost record at the championship in Kelowna last year.

Gordie Howe's HOCKEY

This season my weight is up to 208 pounds, the heaviest I have ever been in my 23 years in the National Hockey League. This caused me some concern for awhile, but I have found that it hasn't affected my play.

Over the years you hear considerable discussion about how much a player should weigh. I haven't been too impressed with what I've heard.

In my case my playing weight has gone up about a pound a year since I broke in with the Red Wings back in 1946-47. I think that is more or less a natural gain.

Back when Pierre Pilote was with the Chicago Black Hawks, he had a theory about weight. He maintained a player should finish his career at the same weight he started. Pilote argued a player could extend his career this way.

I disagree. As you grow older the body changes. A man fills out and so on and I think there is a natural weight gain up to a commonsense point. Now, in my own case I wouldn't want to put on another 23 pounds in the next 23 years.

Of course, in a game we lose four or five pounds. This depends on the heat in the buildings, which sometimes can depend on the size of the size of the crowd. A big crowd can generate a lot of heat in a stadium, even on a cold night. But the weight we lose in a game is something we soon get back. Usually by the next day.

The most I've ever lost in a game was 11 pounds. It was a humid night and we were playing the Toronto Maple Leafs in our buildings in the Stanley Cup finals. That was back in 1963-64 and it was the night that Bob Baun, who is now with our club, scored the winning goal in overtime. The victory tied the series at 3-3 and the Leafs then won No. 7.

But while I'm on the subject of weight and playoffs, I recall a time when Jack Adams, who was then our general manager, put the whole team on a diet and we were bounced in the first round.

Jack got the idea we were all too heavy. He ordered the diet and all the fellows were eating hard-boiled eggs and similar food and on the ice we were so weak we could hardly lift our sticks. We were eliminated fast.

That's one reason I haven't been too eager about diets. They leave you weak. I've found it's better to eat sensibly and work off any excess weight.

Junior Race Goes to Wire With Trenton Hoping for Help

STAFF — A three goal outburst within a span of one minute and 22 seconds capped a four goal third period comeback last night and enabled Cobourg Cougars to edge the Trenton Golden Hawks 5-4 in an Eastern Ontario Junior "B" Hockey League game in Cobourg.

The Cobourg win clinched a share of the fourth and last playoff spot for the Cougars, who now have a two point lead over Trenton with one game remaining in the league schedule for both teams.

The loss means that Cobourg will have to lose to the Frontenacs in Kingston tonight, and the Golden Hawks will have to beat Belleville in a Friday night game at the Trenton Community Gardens in order to force a sudden death playoff game to decide the final playoff spot.

Doug Campbell opened the scoring for Cobourg with a goal at the 8.30 mark of the first period, but the Golden Hawks came back and tied the game up on an unassisted goal by defenceman Carey Webb at 13.03.

Trenton surged in the middle stanza and opened up a 4-1 lead as Webb scored twice to complete his hat trick and Don Potts sandwiched a powerplay goal in between Webb's pair of second period markers.

Larry Thompson started Cobourg's winning comeback with a goal at the 25 second mark of the third period. Paul Gutteridge then took command of the situation and popped in a pair of quick goals just 11 seconds apart at 1.36 and 1.47 to tie the game at 4-4.

Thompson became the Cobourg hero when he capped the comeback drive with the game winning goal at 17.19 of the period on a pass from Alan Fenton.

The loss leaves Trenton in the same position that Belleville's Senior "A" Mo-Hawks found themselves on the next to the last day of the season this past weekend.

Trenton fans will be watching tonight's Kingston-Cobourg game with interest, and hoping that the Golden Hawks won't fall prey to the situation as did the Mo-Hawks.

Overtime Verdict Gives Quinte Three Game Sweep

STAFF — A successful foul shot by forward Wayne Casselman with 20 seconds remaining in regulation time sent last night's Class "AA" senior basketball game between Quinte and Trenton into a three minute overtime period.

The Saints rallied in the overtime period to take a 42-36 decision and complete Quinte's three game sweep of the Trenton hoopsters. The junior Saints romped to a 69-27 win while the midgets had little trouble in scoring a 73-25 decision over the slumping Tigers, who have lost five in a row.

Casselman and John Mywaart topped the senior Saints' scoring list with 12 points each in the defensive struggle, while Paul King and Eric Emerson contributed five points each for the winners.

Forward Les Nicholson with 12 points and centre Andy Fesar topped the Tiger scorers.

The junior Saints played sloppily in the first half, and only led 29-19 at halftime but they got their fast break working in the second half and rolled up 27 points in the fourth quarter to clinch the game and move into a tie for second spot with the BCI juniors.

The Quinte midgets moved into a three-way tie for second place in the seven team league as Ken Vos threw in 29 points and Bruce Nickel netted 16 points.

Moncton Rink Posts Two Wins

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP) — Terry Norman and his Moncton, N.B., rink came through in the clutch Monday to post two wins in the Canadian schoolboy curling championship.

Norman, a native of Galt, Ont., vice-skip Brian Steeves, second Ron Ferguson and lead Garth Jardine took an 8-6 win over John Anderson of Sedgewick, Alta. in second-round play to remain undefeated along with Saskatchewan and Northern Ontario.

Bob Miller of Shellbrook, Sask., whipped Newfoundland skip Doug Ryan of St. John's 15-4 in the first round, and defending champion Ontario, skipped by George Cox of Renfrew, 17-9 in the second.

Saskatchewan, after its 10th national title in the 11-rink round-robin tournament, and New Brunswick finished the day with 2-0 records.

Norman erased an 8-4 deficit in his first game with four in the eighth end, a single point in the ninth, and three more coming home for a 12-8 triumph over Robert Stewart of Charlottetown.

Ontario, Quebec, Alberta, Newfoundland and Manitoba, each had 1-1 records. Northern Ontario with a first-round bye was 1-0. Prince Edward Island with a second-round bye was 0-1. British Columbia, represented by Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, and Nova Scotia were 0-2.

In other second-round games, Ryan edged Claude Brouillette of Pointe Claire, Que., 8-7, Ron Lahotovaara of Fort William, Ont., topped Grant MacDonald of Whitehorse 10-5 and Manitoba's Bill Henry of Winnipeg outscored John Brady of Bridgewater, N.S., 9-6.

Top Rookie

Sandra Honored

NEW YORK (AP) — Sandra Post of Oakville, Ont., was honored Monday by the Metropolitan Gold Writers as women's Rookie of the Year.

Miss Post appeared in 26 events on the 1968 Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, finishing in the top 10 eight times and winning $17,835, highest ever for a rookie.

The 20-year-old Miss Post's biggest win came in the LPGA championship in which she triumphed by seven strokes over runner-up Kathy Whitworth of Jal, N.M.

Bing Crosby received the highest award of the golf writers—the Gold Tee.

Arnold Palmer was given the Richardson Award for his contribution to the game and Curtis Person of Memphis, Tenn., the Ben Hogan Award for having come back from some illness or near tragedy. Once it was feared Person would never walk again but he came back to win the U.S. Seniors crown.

Claude Harmon, former Masters champion, and his family were selected Golf's Family of the Year.

SURPRISE! THE BIRDIE IS WATCHING YOU

What was the world really like in the early centuries? We have to depend upon the artists of long ago for pictures of what life in general and people were like. The first cameras became popular in the 19th century, and people have been saying "Cheese" by the millions ever since.

If someone just gifted you with a new camera, don't throw your old one in the closet. — Someone is reading The Intelligencer Want Ads today with a good used camera in mind. Help him and you.

Portable Fish Plant Developed in Winnipeg

WINNIPEG (CP) — Central Canada's freshwater fishermen are gamblers, but the Winnipeg Freshwater Institute of the Fisheries Research Board of Canada has developed a portable fish plant that is expected to lessen the odds.

Assistant director Dr. E. Graham Bligh says the Indians of Manitoba's northland and in the Northwest Territories, who comprise the majority of the freshwater fishermen could substantially improve their livelihood with the new development.

It is an insulated storage building measuring six feet by 12 feet by seven feet. The unit is equipped with a pressure water system, electric power generator, ice machine and a refrigeration unit.

The whole package, designed by Kenneth R. Scott, a research engineer with the board, consists of 35 pieces of standard equipment, readily available from manufacturers. Expected cost is about $3,500.

"I think this thing will open up new lakes and make the industry more viable, more versatile, in the next few years," says Dr. Bligh.

The project grew out of demands by fish operators for a solution to the expense involved in putting up ice before fishing a remote lake. A year before, the operator has to send up a crew to construct an ice-house to keep his fish from spoiling while they wait to be shipped out. Ice-houses can cost $600 to $800.

This is done on the gamble that the fishing—and the prices—will be good the next year.

Even after this, fishermen still have to take ice from ice huts, clean the fish, put on chipped ice and put them in an un-insulated plywood shed. The fish have to be re-iced daily.

The portable ice plant developed by the board can be assembled by two fishermen in three hours and loaded into a light cargo aircraft. It would eliminate all these problems.

The plant was tested last fall at the northernmost tip of Lake Winnipeg, in co-operation with a fish company and a light-aircraft firm. The hut was set up on the beach and operated for one week, says Dr. Bligh.

Researchers tested the plant's efficiency in preserving ice and other related factors.

"It was really hot, they were just lucky. It still handled everything very nicely." In addition to the ice produced by the plant, extra refrigeration was obtained from a unit installed in the roof.

With this plant, says Dr. Bligh, "the fisherman is now versatile."

"He's mobile. He can invest (the expected cost of) $3,500 for the whole kit, but he's got it for several years, and he can move it from lake to lake. Ordinarily, he has to build an ice-hut on each lake he fishes."

Manitoba's annual catch of 29,900,000 pounds, at a value of $8,000,000, could be substantially increased as the plant decreases the fisherman's gamble and allows him to fish more-remote lakes.

The board expects to receive approval of the project from the federal fisheries department in about one year.

Dr. Bligh says he expects that a number of refrigeration companies will be interested in manufacturing the plant once the plans are made public.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices continued to slide on the Toronto stock market today in response to weakness in New York.

By mid-morning, the industrial index was off .93 to 191.08. Losses outnumbered gains by almost two to one.

There was no specific news to depress prices, but brokers said the market was unable to escape the sharp plunge in New York.

Dominion of Canada General Insurance fell 1¾ to 134½, OSF Industries 1 to 32, Dylex Diversified 1 to 36 and Levy ¾ to 36.

Among the heavy traders, Revenue Properties dropped ⅛ to 18½ and Interprovincial Pipe Line ¼ to 19½. Van Ness gained ⅝ to 6¼.

B.C. Forest was up 4½ to 39, while Noranda lost ⅜ to 34⅛. Noranda said today that Mead Corp. of Dayton, Ohio, and Noranda now have acquired a 58 per cent interest in B.C. Forest.

Among western oils and mines, Asamera fell ½ to 27½, Falconbridge ⅜ to 122¼ and National Pete 25 cents to $8.50.

Trading in First National Uranium Mines will be held up until the company files a statement of its affairs. The stock closed Friday at $2.45, up 15 cents on the day.

Scurry-Rainbow picked up ¾ to 36¼ and Bethlehem Copper ⅜ to 20⅞.

On index, western oils fell 1.49 to 239.48, base metals .45 to 119.93 and golds .24 to 243.31. Volume by 11 a.m. was 1,229,000 shares compared with 1,106,000 at the same time Monday.

The market posted a sharp decline in moderately active trading Monday, in response to a sudden drop in New York.

Markets Important: Speaker

Food marketing is big business for Ontario at home and abroad, but competition is keen, E. F. Merritt, vice-chairman of the Ontario Food Council told Belleville Rotary Club's annual rural-urban meeting yesterday.

Noting that Ontario was "getting to be a high-cost production area," Mr. Merritt warned that the province was going to have to pay a lot of attention to its markets if it were to maintain such costs.

Mr. Merritt, whose office is a branch of the Ontario department of agriculture, said on balance the barriers to international trade were coming down. However, this would not occur overnight.

"If Canada accepts a minimum international standard for foodstuffs, then everybody else who holds to this standard will have access to our markets. This means more competition — and believe me we have had plenty of it."

The margin of exports over imports was slim, Ontario exporting a billion dollars worth of foodstuffs annually and importing about $800 million.

The province's main markets overseas are Britain and the Caribbean area, as well as the eastern United States. Labor disputes could be a problem in getting produce to markets, said Mr. Merritt, and he cited a shipment of onions, a perishable food, which was held up by a docker's stoppage in Montreal.

Competition, said Mr. Merritt, included canned goods from Australia. On the subject of packaging he said they were going to have to do something to make the Canadian product more recognizable. The Maple Leaf, he added, had made the most impression in this regard.

Peas currently were plentiful. "We have 13½ million pounds of frozen peas — more than a million cans too many.. We must double the consumption of peas in the next six weeks — and no fooling," said Mr. Merritt.

Rotary is preparing for its Science Fair and Hobby Show on March 28-29. Science Fair winners will take part in the national competition in Regina on May 8-9-10.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Here Are 8 Rules to Follow If Your Child Stammers

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Our 12-year-old boy stammers. We feel bad but I am sure he feels worse. It is making all of us unhappy. Will you talk about it? — Mrs. U.

Comment: So many frustrated parents have written to me about the problem of stammering (also called stuttering). Reading between the lines you can almost feel the terrible home tensions in which the already overburdened child grows.

Like Mrs. U., parents are anxious and the child is bewildered and dejected. Everybody wants to help but they ride off in many directions at once. About seven out of every thousand children stammer.

The sensible thing to do is to have your family doctor recommend someone especially trained to cope with speech disorders. Otherwise, you lose time and the child suffers psychological trauma which might have been prevented.

Directly or indirectly, parents have much to do with a child's stammering — which may appear at any age but is commonly first noticed between the ages of 2 and 4. Its onset may be abrupt, but is more often gradual. Until you can find the professional help the child needs to correct his trouble, I suggest you follow some of these practical suggestions:

1. Allow the child more time for talking. (Ask yourself if you have the habit of interrupting his talk and rushing him.) This can only confuse him and make him anxious every time he opens his mouth.

2. Keep parental concern from the child. (As you know, anxiety is catching. The more you worry about him the more he will worry about himself.)

3. Avoid labeling his speech as "stammering." Better not keep calling attention to his problem.

4. Search for disturbing experiences in his environment and try to prevent them in the future.

5. Try to keep the child in good general health.

6. Try to ignore the child's liabilities and keep building up his assets to give him more confidence.

7. Have faith that he will overcome his speech defect. Many have. Demosthenes did all right. So did Winston Churchill.

8. But more than faith is necessary. If you are a wise parent you will seek professional help early rather than procrastinate.

For Miss Q.: In reply to your query about using sugar in acne, this letter from Mrs. McN. of Canada will interest you:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: It is my desire to help other sufferers from acne. In my teens it was the worry of my life and gave me an inferiority complex. Later in life I learned that granulated sugar was the culprit.

I substituted brown sugar, maple syrup, corn syrup or honey. In a few months my acne was gone. I bought no food or drink which contained sugar.

Comment: I suppose any simple method is worth trying to overcome acne, Miss Q. However, I must admit that I know of no specific reason why granulated sugar should be worse for the complexion than brown sugar.

Control Industry Legislature Told

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government should place controls on the province's oil marketing industry and eliminate industry price-fixing made possible by "economic slavery" of retail operators, the legislature was told Monday.

A 744-page report tabled by A. R. Patrick, minister of industry and development, culminated four years of research by a government-appointed gasoline marketing enquiry committee.

"Oil companies advocate freedom of enterprise for oil companies and practise economic slavery for operators," said the report prepared by Edmonton lawyer, enneth A. McKenzie, Edmonton professional engineer Arthur Fitzpatrick and a Calgary Better Business Bureau manager, Allan N. Rose.

"This leads us to recommend a measure of government control which would primarily affect four gigantic companies, in substitution for the oppressive contractual controls that these companies now apply to thousands of Alberta gasoline retailers."

The committee said the oil companies, by virtue of contractual strangleholds on service station operators, were able to force them to sell almost anything the oil companies dictate.

In 1965, the four companies sold 86.5 per cent of the gasoline used in Alberta—222,756,000 gallons through 2,761 of the 3,139 retail stations. They also "tied" 87.9 per cent of all service stations in Alberta to their brand names.

Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), Gulf Oil Corp., and Texaco, Inc., the three United States-based companies, have a total of 73 subsidiaries operating in Alberta. The Royal Dutch Shell Group, jointly owned by British and Dutch interests, has 17 subsidiaries.

The report said these companies "squeeze" retailers to get all they can from them in any way they can. And, through carefully-worded contracts, have "for all practical purposes" stringent control over the price of gasoline to consumers.

It said this was "wasteful and costly" system could be rectified "if the ties were severed." Then the operators would be free to operate their businesss economically "and any reductions in price . . . would directly benefit the motorist."

The committee recommended that oil companies provide essential information to prospective lessees, that an operators' bill of rights be established and that a five-year lease not terminable, except in designated circumstances, be provided.

It also suggested the government prohibit company practices that tie down operators or eliminate competition and that credit be the companies' responsibility, not the operators'.

Persons, primarily farmers, who purchase gasoline exempt from tax should be given a special permit, thus helping solve problems of enforcing the Fuel Oil Tax Act.

And, as a step toward improving accuracy of government records, the committee recommended records be kept under company, not industry, indexes and that service station operators, wholesalers and bulk outlets and refiners be licensed annually.

It also recommended a continuing organization to conduct economic research and to assemble information on energy resources and other matters affecting the Alberta economy.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Russian Envoy Sees Nixon, Meeting Called 'Constructive'

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — An unscheduled meeting Monday between President Nixon and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin, described by the White House as "very constructive," fanned speculation that Russia was seeking to allay U.S. apprehension over Berlin.

The Russian diplomat requested the meeting after returning here last week from a two-month stay in Moscow for consultations.

Both U.S. and Soviet embassy officials declined comment on topics discussed at the hour-long meeting or whether the Russian ambassador delivered a personal message from the Kremlin leadership.

However, observers felt there were signs that Berlin dominated the dialogue between the two men.

Nixon, after Dobrynin left, went to the state department for a three-hour briefing from State Secretary William P. Rogers on NATO affairs and the president's eight-day tour of Western Europe—scheduled to begin in Brussels, Belgium, Sunday.

Nixon's long stay at the state department raised speculation that new developments affecting the Berlin situation were discussed.

East Germany, backed by Russia, has launched a major campaign against West German plans to hold a presidential election in Berlin March 5, six days after Nixon's visit to the Western sector of the divided city.

East Germany previously announced it will bar federal electoral college delegates from travelling to the city by land or rail, and West German government spokesmen have said they feared further harassment against access routes.

The U.S. and the Soviet Union would be directly involved if the Communists tried to interfere with the three air corridors linking West Germany and the former German capital, or if Western military movements were impeded.

But American officials doubted that the Kremlin would risk a major confrontation of this kind at a time when the Russians have indicated they are eager to begin talks with the Nixon administration, especially on limiting the strategic nuclear defensive missile race.

Strictly Personal

Public Involved in Crime

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

What the public doesn't understand about crime and punishment is that the public itself is, psychologically, a part of the whole criminal process. We encourage it, and then we repudiate our encouragement of it.

When a daring bank robbery is committed — presuming that no one is injured or killed — our feelings are not entirely unmixed. A part of us reprehends the act, but another part sympathizes with it, if skill and cunning and daring have been exercised in he project.

We do not approve of violent crimes, because we identify with the victims. But thefts of valuable gems, embezzlements, forgeries and holdups of money express trucks — where cleverness more than force has been the decisive element — win a kind of grudging admiration (and even unconscious envy) from many law-abiding citizens.

But we are then forced to punish ourselves for these illicit and untamed feelings — and so we impose harsh penalties upon the perpetrators of such crimes. All realistic evidence shows that harsh penalties do not act as a deterrent, but we pretend they do, in order to justify our actions and to mitigate our hidden sense of guilt.

For example, study after study has revealed that the problem of passing "bad cheques" is not reduced by stiffer sentences. In some states, a bogus cheque is merely a misdemeanor; in others, it is a felony. But the states where it is a felony have a higher rate of bum cheque-passing than the states where it is only a misdemeanor!

One reason for this — which the public is wholly unaware of — is that when excessively severe penalties are imposed by the law, the risk of conviction is actually reduced, because juries will not find defendants guilty if a harsh sentence is mandatory, and prosecuting officils do not like to try such cases and have their records blemished by a loss.

All research findings suggest that it is an enormous fallacy that penalties are effective deterrents to crime — but the public persists in believing it. This persistence springs from a feeling of vengeance in the public that goes far beyond any monetary compensation for loss, or any desire to rehabilitate the prisoner. And the spirit of vengeance is precisely what further alienates convicts, making them again defy society when they get out, and completing the circle.

There is a little bit of criminal in all of us, which provides us with vicarious gratification when a big score is made. If we could understand and accept this, we might treat those who act out our fantasies with more reason, more justice, and less passion.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For February 19

Your birthday today: This year all habits take on new forms as circumstances lead into unexpected, often exciting experience. Even modest improvements deepen into major achievements quickly this year. The temptation is to cast adrift old relationships because of preoccupation with new activities. Today's natives are agreeable, adaptable, and generally interested in anything literary or mystical. Home life is always a big factor in their happiness.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Accept invitations to join forces with other lively people. Brief journeys, correspondence, negotiations are all favored.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Your own convictions are the strongest factor in persuasion. They show and are rather powerful. Make a search for information in all your spare moments.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Disregarding a bit of teasing from friends, it's a great day to make a deal. News from far places is cheerful! Be consistent, stay with the order of priority in your work.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Push right ahead with business and home building interests. Mildley surprising good news comes from older relatives. Expect support on your projects.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): The day gets luckier as it opens. You can afford to be good-humored and offer a hand. Partnership or group actions are favored over single-handed operations.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): An opportunity to improve your working conditions is at hand. Ask for what you need and what you want. Line up your accounts this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 2): Now that everybody else is stirring vigorously, you can float through the day. Make bids wherever applicable. Depend on no single line of probability, nor skip any.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Collaboration is in order. Adjust yourself to share the working load and some of the decision-making. Social and romantic activities tend to thrive today, tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): The coming four weeks will be filled with the trends and social moves begun today. Put your mind and your heart into achieving more of your potentials, living every minute fully.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Gains can be made in public endeavors. Take your share of the community efforts — and responsibility, if it comes to that. Negotiations are favored today. Correspondence ranks high in importance now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): The coming year has three extreme changes promised: major refinancing, new companions for the young in spirit, a change in environment. Today is one of the preparatory days — so be on your toes.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): This is an excellent day to pursue new courses, especially those where mechanical skill is involved. Career matters advance, almost spontaneously in the afternoon.

Broad Powers Sought for Ministry of Regional Development

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will seek broadened administrative and fiscal powers for its proposed department to oversee regional development. Slow-growth urban centres may benefit.

A bill creating the department of regional economic expansion and four other departments was introduced into the Commons Monday. It was given routine first reading.

Under the legislation, the government would have a freer hand to name depressed areas for government financial assistance and industrial incentives.

Rural Development Minister Marchand, who will head the long-promised new department, said the aim is to emphasize federal aid for "natural growth centres" which previously did not qualify.

He indicated that Quebec east of Trois-Rivieres and the four Atlantic provinces will get top priority, but other areas would be looked after too. The others include the northern sections of Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Mr. Marchand, long Prime Minister Trudeau's close friend and confidant, said he hoped for accelerated government spending in the regional development field. However, he declined to say how much he would ask for.

The department will take over and expand existing federal powers to provide grants and loans to industry in depressed areas. The aid would permit the government not only to attract industry to slow-growth areas, but to help industry modernize and expand.

A demonstrably new power is the right to guarantee loans negotiated by private industry in the so-called "special areas" designated by government.

Although Mr. Marchand did not say so specifically, the indications are that the inclusion of "growth centres" in the incentive program means that urban centres will more easily qualify.

The net impression from Mr. Marchand's comments and the bill itself is that slow-growth areas with good potential would be the chief beneficiaries.

However, Mr. Marchand made clear that rural areas with lesser potential would continue to be looked after.

The reorganization will lead to a revised Industrial Incentives Act under which federal incentives are offered to depressed areas. It is expected precise federal powers will be outlined in this act and in regulations now being developed.

Under the reorganization, the Marchand department will have power to co-ordinate the activities of other federal departments and agencies to bring up economic standards in backward regions.

It will be able, for the first time, to channel money through provincial governments to municipal public projects.

Moreover, it will be empowered to make agreements with provincial governments for joint development programs. The two levels of government will be able jointly to establish and operate agencies and corporations.

The new department was forecast by Mr. Trudeau in last June's election campaign. It also fits in with his longtime platform theme of combatting regional disparities.

Conservative Leader Stanfield objected to the centralizing approach of the department and what he termed the lack of machinery or framework to permit it to co-ordinate the attack on regional disparities.

However, he said it had its positive points, including the extension of aid to industry in depressed areas during the enterprise's break-in period. He also praised the idea of the government coming around to assisting the "natural growth centres."

Mr. Stanfield said the Atlantic development board was "emasculated" and he favored a beefed-up board to co-ordinate development work in the Atlantic region.

The bill also laid down terms for the establishment of the long-forecast departments of communications, fisheries and forestry, supply and services and finally, industry, trade and commerce.

It would also establish three new Crown corporations out of existing agencies: The Royal Canadian Mint, the Medical Research Council and the Science Council of Canada.

Bill to Control Plant Pests Gets Quick Passage in House

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons has adopted measures to help cope with the twin problems of pests and pesticides.

Third and final reading was given Monday to tough new legislation aimed at preventing the spread of pests deemed dangerous to plants.

Then, some hours later, final reading was given a bill providing compensation to farmers whose agricultural products are contaminated by pesticide residue.

The first measure sailed through the House without opposition. The second passed only after a vigorous debate during which opposition MPs expressed serious misgiving about some of its provisions, particularly a section dealing with appeals against compensation awards.

Opposition MPs expressed misgivings about some of its provisions.

They concentrated their fire on a section which provides for appeals from compensation awards. Under the bill, appeals would be to a government-appointed assessor. There would be no recourse to the courts from his decision.

"This is contrary to the rights of either a Canadian individual or a corporation," said Harold Danforth (PC—Kent-Essex).

Compensation under the act would be paid by the government, but not until the farmer has first attempted to recover his loss from the manufacturer of the pesticide causing the residue.

Ross Whicher (L—Bruce) said the agriculture department had estimated the cost of the compensation at $100,000 for the first year. This was not a large amount, but for the farmers of Canada the bill itself was important.

Mr. Whicher rejected complaints by Mr. Danforth about the power given to agriculture department officials to write the regulations under the act. No regulations for a bill were ever written before the legislation itself had passed the House, Mr. Whicher maintained.

Passage was finally achieved "on division"—meaning there were those in the opposition who demurred.

Two other pieces of farm legislation were nudged further along the legislative trail when they passed through the report stage en route from committee study to third reading.

One bill removes the amounts of compensation specified for horses and cattle slaughtered under the Animal Contagious Diseases Act, and leaves it to the cabinet to prescribe the maximum of compensation.

At present the rates range downward from $200 for pure-bred horses to $70 for grade cattle.

The other bill would regulate products used for the control of pests and organic functions of plants and animals.

The House turned from pest problems to tax problems midway through the evening session, as debate resumed on Finance Minister Edgar Benson's controversial bill to amend the Estate Tax Act.

The bill was—and remains—at second reading stage.

Under the sweeping provisions of the anti-pest bill, approved by the House and sent to the Senate for consideration, the government may prescribe the places at which "any plant or other matter" can be admitted into Canada. It can also make regulations establishing inspection, treatment and quarantine centres.

Any property or premises infested or suspected of being infested with a pest may be restricted from agricultural use.

The occupier of any property where a pest is discovered is required to notify the federal agriculture department.

In contrast to the quick, smooth ride which this bill enjoyed, the legislation on compensation to farmers for pesticide damage was given a bumpy passage through third reading.

"In my opinion this is terribly deficient legislation," said Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West), adding that he was prepared to vote against it.

"It is a complete fraud, because the burden is entirely on the farmer and the conditions imposed are all in favor of the minister." The reference was to Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson.

Like most others in a long stream of opposition speakers, the Edmonton member took exception to a provision under which compensation awards by the government can be appealed to a government-appointed assessor.

Though this assessor would be designated by the Exchequer Court or a provincial superior court, he would not be acting in a judicial capacity and there would be no appeal from his decision to a higher tribunal.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) described the proposed assessors as "judges wearing another hat."

"In my opinion the farmer will feel that he is up against the same old brick wall," said the Winnipeg member.

Mr. Olson, replying to his critics, said that never before has statutory authority been given an agriculture minister to compensate a farmer for losses suffered through no fault of his own as a result of the use of pesticides.

Assessors appointed under the legislation would be fully competent to listen to evidence and judge whether a compensation award is fair.

Turner Receives Suggested Changes In Languages Bill

VICTORIA (CP) — Justice Minister John Turner, holding out the possibility of changes in the official languages bill, was to return to Ottawa today with a string of alterations proposed by the four Western provinces.

No details of the suggested changes were disclosed by Mr. Turner or the attorneys-general of the provinces after they met for five hours Monday to discuss the bill.
